LBJ Will Deliver State Of Union Message Tuesday

Still No Decision On Surtax; Delay Stalls Composition Of Fiscal Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson will deliver his farewell State of the Union message at a nationally televised joint session of Congress at 6 p.m. PST Tuesday, the White House announced today.

Press Secretary George Christian said that Johnson was putting the finishing touches on his message in his office today.

Christian said the budget message will be sent to Congress after Johnson has delivered his State of the Union message, but he gave no date for the budget's submission.

He said an economic message would follow.

SURTAX ISSUE

Christian indicated with a gesture of the hand that Johnson had received no commitment from President-elect Nixon about the troublesome question of whether to recommend an extension of the 10 per cent income surtax.

Asked for a yes or no on this matter, Christian merely smiled and held his hands palm up.

Christian said Johnson planned to spend a family weekend at Camp David. He added that some friends and staff members may join him.

But he said he does not expect the President to leave the closely guarded area during a visit expected to end tomorrow night.

NEW YORK TRIP

The President and Mrs. Johnson expect to fly to New York Monday where they will be guests at a dinner.

Previously, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana had said Johnson was reluctant to deliver his State of the Union message in person. Mansfield said the outgoing President did not want to project himself into the political picture at a time when a new president is about to take over.

U.S. Ambush Squad Caught In Fatal Trap

SAIGON (AP)—An American squad sent out to ambush the Viet Cong in the Mekong Delta was overrun early today and all 11 men were killed or wounded.

The squad numbered nine GIs and two Tiger Scouts, former Viet Cong who had defected. A spokesman said six Americans and one of the scouts were killed, and the others were wounded.

The squad, of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, managed to radio a distress call from the area 30 miles southwest of Saigon, but reinforcements arrived too late to catch the enemy.

It was one of numerous small skirmishes across the country. Military authorities also reported enemy gunners shelled 28 airfields, army camps and district towns in the heaviest wave of overnight attacks since the Nov. 1 bombing halt of North Vietnam.

It was the second consecutive day of unusually heavy rocket and mortar assaults, and caused immediate speculation that the enemy command had ordered military pressure increased to emphasize Hanoi's displeasure with the deadlock in

No Optimism Over Secret Campus Talk

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO — Acting President S. I. Hayakawa has been negotiating with the Black Students Union in an attempt to end the strike which has drastically chopped attendance at San Francisco State.

He revealed yesterday that he has been meeting informally with Roscoe Blount and others of the Black Students Union as well as various attorneys and mediators.

But when told by newsmen that there were rumors of a possible settlement of the disputes which have torn apart the campus, Hayakawa cautiously commented "there has been progress but nothing down in black and white." He added that he was "not too optimistic" at this stage about a quick settlement.

He said the participants of the secret talks "have reached a certain degree of trust in each other."

QUIET DAY

On the campus yesterday, American Federation of Teachers pickets and militant students paraded before the campus without any of the violence that has frequently marked the past two months of police-student confrontations. Two arrests were made during the day.

The AFT pickets were joined by their national union leader as they picketed in the face of possible arrest and loss of their jobs.

The teachers, who went on strike Monday, had been warned that they would be considered by college administrators to have resigned if they were absent from classes five days. They also picketed in defiance of a court injunction.

DEFY ORDER

"We will continue to strike," a union leader said. "Our attorneys tell us the state cannot declare involuntary resignations and the courts cannot stop us from picketing."

National AFT president David Selden joined the pickets and huddled with local leaders on strike strategy. Selden also denounced Gov. Ronald Reagan for proposing that the 18,000-

One Of Three Sierra-Bound Buses Crashes

A chartered ski bus — one of three provided by Diablo Charter Lines to the Mogul Ski Club of San Francisco — plunged over an embankment on Interstate Highway 80 near Sacramento today, killing one boy and injuring all others aboard.

Several young people from Marin were aboard one of the three chartered buses, but the one which crashed carried passengers from Lafayette, Orinda and Moraga in Contra Costa County, the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento reported.

The buses were en route for a day on Sierra ski slopes when the one skidded on the rain-swept highway and went over the bank.

Name of the boy killed was not immediately available. Sacramento County Hospital reported treating 26 persons, with at least one kept in surgery. The highway patrol, however, said there were 30 aboard the bus and all suffered some injuries. The patrol said all the passengers were from 9 to 18 years old.

The crash occurred shortly after 7 a.m. on the freeway at an interchange in West Sacramento, just within Yolo County.

The other two buses of the charter were ahead. The third bus was attempting to flag down the other two when it skidded, according to the highway patrol.

Petaluma's Employees Win Raises

Petaluma City Council today approved a 5 percent salary increase for unclassified employees after a one-hour closed door session.

Retroactive to Jan. 1, the increases were opposed by Councilman Robert S. Lipman, who said he felt salary negotiations should begin in January and become effective on July 1 for better budget control.

Agreeing with him, the council directed City Atty. Edouard E. Robert to prepare a resolution

Astronauts Go South After New York Fete

Astronauts Frank Borman, James A. Lovell Jr. and William A. Anders, who spent the night at the Waldorf-Astoria, were to take off from Newark Airport at about noon.

A final ceremony at the airport—the formal "presentation of the keys of the city of Newark" by Deputy Mayor Paul Reilly—was to speed the three space pioneers on their way.

Despite sub-freezing weather yesterday and winds gusting up to 27 miles an hour, New Yorkers by the hundreds of thousands turned out to cheer the spacemen on a day whose ceremonies included lunch at Lincoln Center, a state dinner at the Waldorf and a reception at the United Nations.

The main event of the day was a ticker-tape parade up the skyscraper-lined canyon of lower Broadway—renamed "Apollo Way" for the occasion—from Bowling Green to City Hall.

"It's overwhelming!" Anders said, looking at a crowd of several thousand in the 28-degree cold of noon at City Hall. "You know they're your friends when they come to see you in this weather."

"This is the greatest—the greatest American—day I have ever had in my life," said Borman's wife, Susan, holding her husband's arm. "I have never felt so warm. It's a warm city. I don't care what the temperature is outside."

A 70-second standing ovation greeted them in the U.N. Security Council chamber. Sec- Lincoln Center lunch had as its them as the men who "actually did jump over the moon."

Although the day's events included a number of formal speeches and such ceremonies as the award of New York City's gold medal to the spacemen, most of the talk was on the lighter side.

Olompali Raid Figures Deny Dope Counts

Donald C. McCoy Jr., patron of the Rancho Olompali commune north of Novato, was freed without bail along with several of his "Chosen Family" in Marin Municipal Court yesterday after pleading innocent to marijuana possession charges.

McCoy, who reportedly spent $300,000 in eight months on his colony, was the only one who entered plea. All cases were continued until Friday.

Highest bail set was $5,000 for Robert McKendrick, 35, accused of possessing heroin and possessing marijuana, LSD and methamphetamine (speed) for sale.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Leonard Shaw argued in vain that the bail should remain at $31,250, saying McKendrick's bedroom at the rancho contained large quantities of the drugs.

Friends reported McKendrick is a law school graduate, holds a degree in theater arts, promotes concerts, and owns a management firm in Los Angeles.

Released without bail were: Walter Hanson Doyle, 22, a Sonoma State College student who lives at the ranch; Mary Norbert, 34, a former Dominican nun, who lives at the ranch; Robert John Ellison, 23, a light show producer living at the ranch; Joseph John (Jo-Jo) D'Amore, 32, a former comedy writer who is foreman of the ranch; and Sandra Barton, 48, a former singer and dancer who lives at the ranch with her 18-year-old daughter.

The judge set $250 bail each for William David Candelario, 19, who cares for the horses at the ranch, and Oleg Valeri Minakov, 30, mechanic and gardener there.

Yet to be arrested were Dennis Kallas, accused of marijuana possession, and Stan Kris Anthony, accused of possessing heroin.

WHALE OF A FIND ON MARIN COAST

This dead whale, between 35 and 40 feet long c 1 with a harpoon attached to a marker buoy still sticking in it, washed up yesterday in Steep Ravine, about one a: 1 one-half miles south of Stinson Beach. The carcass had been seen for several days floating with the tides off the West Marin coast. Exploring the smelly find are Bob Mendonca, who holds aloft one of the whale's ribs, and Wayne Nielsen, both of Stinson Beach. Sheriff's officers said the county probably would blast the carcass to oblivion.

Two Storms Pummel Marin, To Continue

Two storms brought heavy rainfall to Marin County today and are expected to continue in the Bay Area throughout tomorrow night, according to the Weather Bureau.

The storms, one centered off Vancouver Island in British Columbia and the other 700 miles west of San Francisco, are also expected to bring heavy snowfall and winds gusting to 40 miles an hour in the northern and central mountains this weekend. Travelers' warnings have been issued for blowing snow through tomorrow night.

Gale wind warnings were posted from Point Arena south to Point Conception for winds reaching 30 to 45 knots today.

In Marin County, the storms brought up to .62 inches of rain by 8 a.m.

Homes in the Black Point area were without power for 20 minutes after a tree limb fell on a power line at 1 a.m., according to Pacific Gas and Electric Co. officials.

San Rafael recorded .6 of an inches of rainfall to noon.

Other rainfall in Marin County at 8 a.m. today were: Bolinas, .63 of an inch; Civic Center, .35; Larkspur .44; Point Reyes .42; Woodacre .45; San Anselmo .39; Novato .29; Tiburon .28; Sausalito .35; Mill Valley .43; Tamalpais Valley .62; Terra Linda .35.

In Petaluma, .28 of an inch was recorded at 8 a.m.

YOUTHS SAVE DAY — PAY DAY, THAT IS

The students, Lisa Stephenson of 58 Arguello Circle; Ron Kalton of St. Vincent's School; Bonnie Leifried of 139 Ross Valley Drive, and Jutta Krvig of 291 Auburn Street, found an envelope containing $131 in Mayfair Market, San Rafael, before school.

The turned the money over to store officials, and the franchise owner soon claimed it. Second Lt. Kent Smith, whose address was not known, told store officials that the money was his wife's recent pay.

New Careers Expert Accepts Adviser Role

By JOANNE GRANT

The co-developer of New Careers said yesterday he plans to accept Marin County's invitation to become a consultant for its New Careers program.

Dr. Arthur Pearl, professor at University of Oregon who made a brief stop in Marin yesterday, said the county has asked him to work with its staff to review concepts and to narrow areas of disagreement between his proposal and that of the county administrator's office.

The contract offered by the county, pending approval by the board of supervisors, would give Pearl a fee not to exceed $750.

If the supervisors approve hiring Pearl, he will begin consultation on Jan. 24, he said.

County Administrator Alan Bruce said the item would be on the board's agenda as soon as Pearl returns the contract.

Earlier Pearl said he would not be a consultant unless the program adopted by Marin County included the concepts he believes should be in the program. He also has disagreed with the costs built into a county program developed by Asst. Administrator Thomas Cam-

REAGAN UNVEILS GOLD DUST TWINS

Governor, Lieutenant 'Think Alike,' Press Told At Capital Introduction

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan and incoming Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, dubbed the political "gold dust twins" by Reagan, held their first public meeting yesterday and agreed they think alike.

Reinecke, a Republican businessman-politician like Reagan, promptly declared his intention to run for lieutenant governor in 1970, a post he will not hold for at least nine days.

The Tujunga congressman will succeed Robert H. Finch in the state's No. 2 political post when Finch is sworn in as federal secretary of health, education and welfare later in the month. Finch's unexpired term is two years.

Reagan and Reinecke held a joint news conference yesterday to introduce Reinecke to Capitol reporters. Reinecke said in response to a question that he had no plans "at the present time" to run for governor.

PLANS ON RACE?

He volunteered, "I might say right now I don't mind announcing my candidacy for election in 1970 for lieutenant governor."

Reinecke said he and the governor had discussed no future political plans, including whether Reagan would seek a second term in two years.

He said if Reagan "wants to talk to me about it, that's fine," but added that was not the reason he accepted the job.

Reinecke, who will be a University of California regent and state college trustee, said he had a "completely open mind" about disorder at San Francisco State. He said he would work "very hard" to find solutions to issues.

But he echoed Reagan's hardline on campus disorder when he warned, "I have no intention of yielding to ultimatums or intimidation."

He said if existing grievance procedures needed "modification" he would support doing so.

CHANGED PARTY

The third term congressman, like Reagan a Democrat who changed his affiliation to Republican, called himself "somewhat of a conservative" on fiscal matters and that he agreed with Reagan's "creative society" philosophy.

But he said, "the people who claim to be marching for various purposes call themselves liberals and yet I find myself in great sympathy with the objectives of their particular purpose of the moment, although I don't always agree with their methods."

Reagan told reporters he and Reinecke "are in agreement about the same things." He said the similarities in their backgrounds "are cropping up to such an extent that you and I may become known as the gold dust twins in politics."

Loaded Gun Charge Leads To Probation

David Reese Darnell, 34, of Point Reyes Station, was given a 10-day suspended jail sentence and placed on two years probation in Marin Municipal Court yesterday for carrying a loaded gun in his car Oct. 31 in West Marin.

A condition of probation is that Darnell surrender all his firearms for destruction by the sheriff, Judge Hadden W. Roth said.

Lobbyist Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Donald W. Cleary, 64, lobbyist in Sacramento for the city of San Francisco for 23 years, died in a hospital yesterday.

His expense account reputedly was the largest of any lobbyist in the state and he had an enviable reputation for wheedling — or suppressing—legislation in the interests of San Francisco.

Cleary planned to retire next summer. Death was due to complications following surgery for cancer.

He is survived by widow, a son and daughter.

Mace Weighed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Chemical Mace is less dangerous than a "billyclub or a bullet in the belly," but is not entirely safe or without danger, according to San Francisco's chief health officer.

Dr. Ellis Sox yesterday said improper use of the controversial chemical irritant may lead to permanent eye damage and even death by suffocation.

In a three-page report to the board of supervisors, Sox recommended that Mace be kept away from a person's face or eyes and that persons sprayed directly in these areas should be rushed to emergency hospitals for treatment.

Red Rebels Killed

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Burmese troops killed more than 150 Chinese-trained Naga tribesmen rebels in the dense jungles of upper Burma during the past three months, the Press Trust of India said yesterday. The report said about 1,000 rebels were carrying out forcible collections of money and food in the region.

Smoke Protest

Hot Lava Kills

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A 30-year-old woman was killed by hot lava and at least three other persons are missing and feared dead in the eruption of central Java's Merapi volcano, Antara news agency reported today.

The volcano which erputed Tuesday for the second time since 1961, has destroyed more than 400 homes and 1,000 acres of rice fields, Antara said.

Leash Law Set

BERKELEY (UPI) — Dogs will have to be leashed or at least in sight and control of their owners henceforth when they come on the University of California campus.

School officials announced the policy yesterday and said the dog problem had been the subject of the second largest number of written complaints received in the last three years.

Bomb Hoax

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — About 400 employees of the Kansas City Star were evacuated from the building today after an anonymous caller warned that a bomb was set to explode in the building at 4 a.m.

Workers returned to their jobs after police had made an hour-long search of the building.

Moon-Destined Trio Relieved By Choice

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The three astronauts picked to carry America's flag to the moon's surface said yesterday they felt thrilled to have received the historic assignment and "a feeling of relief" that competition for the job was over.

Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin (Buz) Aldrin also said they did not know yet which of the two moonlanders—Armstrong and Aldrin—would be first to step out on the chalk-white lunar landscape. But the place they hope to do it is the one surveyed by the Apollo 8 crew at Christmas.

Since the moon-orbiting flight of Apollo 8, they said, the name of this three-by-five mile spot on the right-hand edge of the moon's face has been changed to "Landing Site One" because it looks so promising.

Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin were named by the space agency Thursday to fly Apollo 11 to the moon and land there. They said the soonest they could blast off would be July 15.

Plans call for Armstrong, a 38-year-old civilian who commands the crew, and Aldrin to make the landing while Collins orbits alone in the Apollo command ship 69 miles above them.

One astronaut will step out on the moon, leaving footprints about two inches deep, some 45 minutes before the second man leaves their special landing craft. But it will take months of practice in make-believe missions to work out which man is first.

All three men are veteran space pilots.

Armstrong piloted Gemini 8 to its successful emergency splashdown in the Pacific Ocean after a wildly firing steering rocket whipped it out of control.

Collins, a 38-year-old Air Force lieutenant colonel, was the spacewalker of the Gemini 10 flight. Aldrin, who made the Gemini 12 spacewalk, is a colonel in the Air Force and will be 39 on Jan. 20.

In addition, Armstrong and Aldrin served on the backup crew for Apollo 8, and Collins went through most of the training for Apollo 8 before an operation knocked him off the prime crew.

The spacemen will spend 21 hours on the moon, but will only be out on the lunar surface for two or three hours. During that time they hope to set out three experiments, take numerous pictures and collect 50 pounds of moon rock to bring back.

Although it will not be known until after their mission how well man can perform in the one-sixth gravity of the moon, the astronauts were emphatic in expressing the view that man should land there.

"At this stage of the game (not landing) would be the equivalent of Columbus sailing within 60 miles of the coast of the New World and then turning back toward Queen Isabella and going home," Collins said.

Robbers Execute Guard, Elude Armored Car Chase

BERKELEY (AP) — Virtually without clues, police sought three — possibly four — men for the execution-type killing of a Brink's armored car guard Friday. One man was apprehended.

The slain guard was Joseph W. Martin, 49, of San Leandro.

Perhaps scores of bullets were fired in a two-mile chase by the armored truck driver, Barry D. Godwin, 25, of Richmond, before the robbers abandoned their car.

They fled on foot, leaving a 9 mm. submachine gun, a .45-caliber pistol and a bag containing the $6,000 they stole in a crowded parking lot across the street from the University of California.

Police in North Oakland soon picked up a man identified by the FBI as Willie Smith, 26. Smith and those sought are Negroes.

The FBI said Smith had no police record, but that his fingerprints were on file because he had been in military service. He was held in the Berkeley jail.

Police declined to speculate which of the robbers killed Martin, but Police Lt. Tom Johnson said the guard was "literally executed."

Johnson said the slayer grabbed Martin as the guard was entering the Consumers Co-op Store with the bag of cash, dragged him 70 feet, threw him to the ground and "fired four shots point blank, standing right over him."

Martin was hit in the head, chest and both arms. He was carrying cash into the store and was to pick up its bank deposit.

As the killer fled to a waiting car, a firebomb was thrown into the parking lot, but failed to explode.

Scores of persons in the store and on the lot saw a portion of the tragedy, but none was hurt.

Neither was anyone in the ensuing chase by Godwin, the truck's red light flashing and siren screaming.

The Negroes fired frequently at Godwin's truck. They hit it and a number of parked automobiles and sprayed several bullets into houses along the route from Berkeley into Oakland.

An unidentified witness thought one of the fleeing men was limping as he left the abandoned getaway car, presumably hit by one of four bullets from Godwin's .38.

Police had virtually no clues. Witnesses couldn't agree whether there were four or five men in the getaway car.

Johnson said the only clue police have is that one man was wearing a red shirt, plaid coat and a red cap and had a moustache.

Las Gallinas Board Selects New Officers

Sesto F. Lucchi, Lucas Valley engineer, has been elected president of the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board for 1969.

He was chosen Thursday night to succeed John E. Duckett. The directors also named Lelia Sayers as secretary of the board, succeeding A. M. Petrofsky. Mrs. Sayers is also office secretary of the district.

In other business, the directors asked their insurance carrier, Walter Carter, to reopen an investigation of damage claims filed by two residents of Lucas Valley.

Robert L. Sideroff of 324 Arias Drive and James Elliott of 325 Arias Drive charged that the main sewer line clogged last Nov. 22, and the water backup caused damages of $1,682 and $828, respectively.

Mrs. Sayers said Carter had notified the district that the line blockage was not caused by district negligence, but the directors decided to ask him to reopen the investigation.

The directors set an adjourned meeting for 7:30 p.m. Jan. 16 to hear from Carter.

Maxine Hall of 43 Cole Drive told deputies she was crossing Drake Avenue when a youth threw her to the ground and started hitting her with a wine bottle. Deputies said witnesses confirmed the girl's story.

The assailant had not been found today.

Bizarre Details Come To Light In Mackle Kidnaping Hearing

MIAMI (UPI)—Gary Steven Krist's penchant for the bizarre in the kidnaping of Barbara Jane Mackle last month was disclosed at a preliminary jail hearing yesterday in which the 23-year-old convict was bound over for grand jury action on three federal extortion charges.

His bond was continued at $500,000—the same amount involved in the kidnap ransom.

Testimony by three FBI men and a Southern Bell Telephone Co. security chief alleged that Krist, just before entombing the half-chloroformed and drugged Miss Mackle, demanded she "wake up and smile" for ransom photographs.

In a ransom note buried in her backyard, her millionaire land-developer father, Robert Mackle, was ordered to "dress in an all white outfit" and to use his Lincoln when delivering the $500,000 in $20 bills.

Mackle also was told to pack the bills in a suitcase whose dimensions were to be exactly 31.5 inches by 18.75 inches.

In a "head-shot" photograph of Miss Mackle, mailed to her home, a sign with the lone word "kidnaped" was stuck under the chin.

The ransom instructions to Mackle warned "any deviation from this outline will result in your death" as well as the death of his daughter.

Conviction on the extortion charges could result in a maximum penalty of 45 years in prison for Krist. The government dropped federal kidnap charges because Miss Mackle, abducted Dec. 17 from an Atlanta motel, was not transported across state lines.

Krist sat morosely through the three-hour hearing before U.S. Commissioner Edward P. Swan, ignoring everyone including his attorney, Henry Carr.

The hearing was held in the second-floor chapel of the jail for security reasons. Krist, brought down from the fourth floor cell he has occupied since his capture on the edge of the Florida Everglades Dec. 22, was unshaven and his hair was unkempt.

FBI agent Joseph St. Pierre, citing details given him by Miss Mackle, said Krist and his alleged accomplice, Ruth Eisemann-Schier, transported the girl to secluded woods outside Atlanta.

The Hondurasn-born Miss Eisemenn-Schier is still being sought by the FBI.

Krist called her "Ruth" and she called him "George"—he had been using the name "George Deacon." After half-chloroforming her in a station wagon and giving her an injection of tranquilizer, Miss Mackle was laid out on the cold ground beside the coffin-like box Krist allegedly had built to hide her in.

"George" told her he had personally "tested" the box, which he called a "capsule," St. Pierre said. "He told her not to use the pump unless the capsule sprang a leak."

He also told her there was a special "sugar pill" embedded in the wall of the box. If water seeped in, the pill would melt and set off an alarm, Miss Mackle was told.

In addition, if she did use the pump, a "device" in a nearby house would set off an alarm "and they would know she was in trouble," St. Pierre testified.

"She said she used the pump twice but nobody came to see what was going on."

student campus be kept open "at bayonet point if necessary."

The strike effect on over-all attendance was severe with a campus officials' survey showing only about 21 per cent of the students went to afternoon classes yesterday.

In other developments:

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, a strong backer of Hayakawa, also denounced Reagan's bayonet statement in a talk before the Commonwealth Club. He said "state intervention with National Guardsmen and their bayoneted rifles" would be unnecessary. He blamed the crisis on "hard-core troublemakers who thirst for violence" and said the police could maintain order.

for the Jan. 20 meeting establishing that policy.

City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer said changing the salary increases to a fiscal year plan would simplify preparation of the budget. "We should allow at least six months to talk with employee unions and groups," he said.

Meyer's five per cent raise increases his monthly salary from $1,600 to $1,680. Councilman Phillip L. Joerger voted against this saying he had compared salaries of city managers in Vacaville, Woodland and Novato, and said he felt an increase was not justified.

Joerger also opposed an increase for David D. Young, city engineer and director of public works. Young's salary was raised from $1,400 per month to $1,470. Joerger said he felt the salary was presently above the average of comparable cities.

City Clerk Lillian Nommsen's salary was raised from $627 per month to $658. The five percent increase for City Atty. Robert raises his monthly pay from $735 to $772.

It was not noted what the increases will mean to the city in additional costs.

The Petaluma City Council also:

PLANNING ORDINANCE — Gave first reading to an ordinance permiting the planning commission to add conditional uses in commercial zones.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT — Directed a letter to the state Division of Highways requesting tht that Baywood Drive be extended to intersect with Perry Lane and provide easy access to the Lakeville highway, State Highway 116.

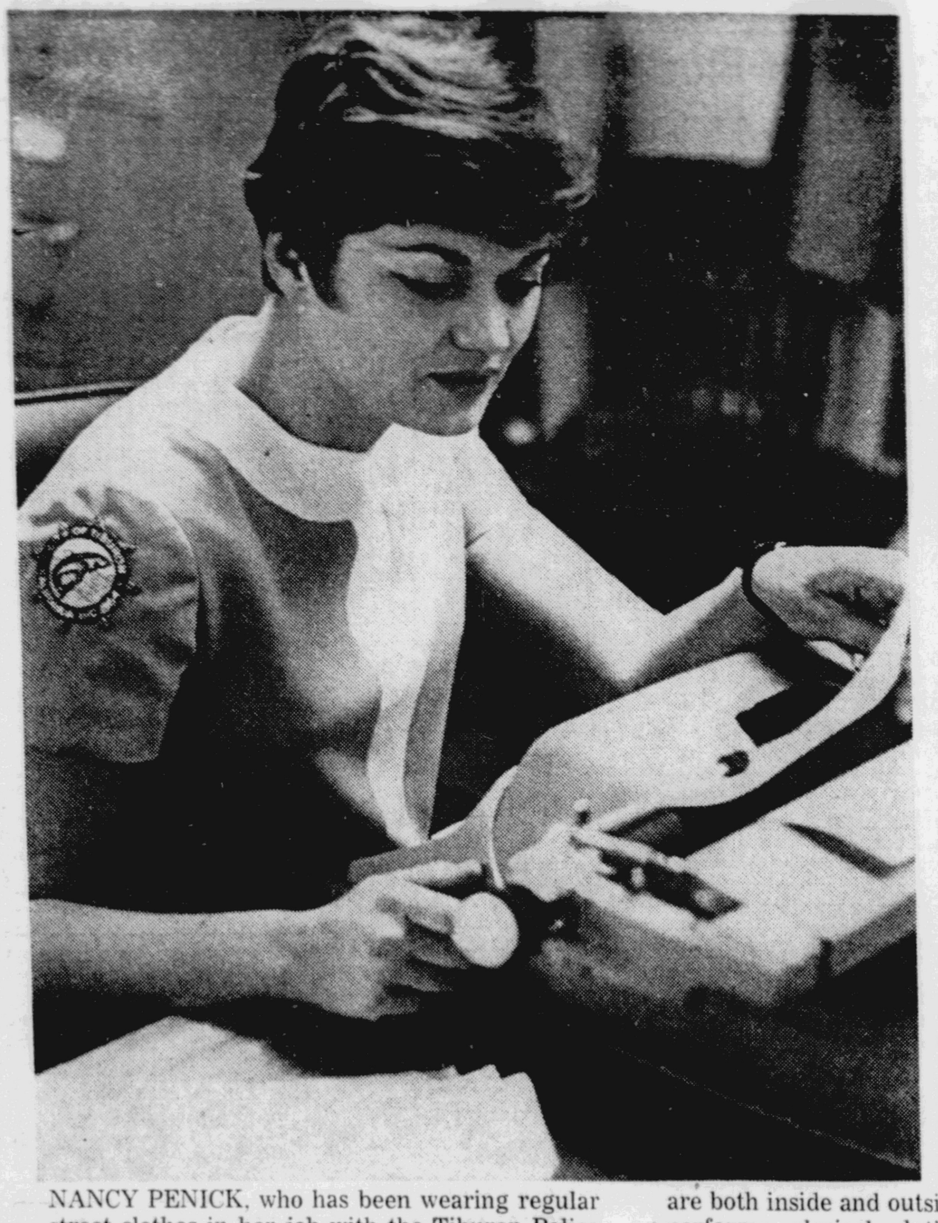
NO APPOINTMENT NECESSARY



NANCY PENICK, who has been wearing regular street clothes in her job with the Tiburon Police Department, yesterday unveiled her uniform, a chic cocoa and white A-line dress. Nancy's duties are both inside and outside of the office. Left, she performs clerical duties, checking a report she has typed. Then she literally dons another cap, part of her uniform, with the police insignia above the visor, and writes a traffic citation for an illegally parked automobile. Nancy's shoulder bag and shoes are also part of the uniform. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

Chic Uniform For Tiburon Police

By JOAN LISETOR

Three months ago the City of Tiburon hired Nancy Penick to serve its police department as a parking controller-clerk. Nancy is the first woman to work for the Tiburon Police Department and has been wearing street clothes on the job.

Yesterday, Nancy unveiled her uniform, described by Tiburon City Manager Lawrence D. Rose as a costume that is a bright and friendly symbol.

"We wanted a distinctive as well as attractive symbol of public service," he said. "This seemed to be an amiable way to do it."

While performing her duties, which consist of writing parking citations, assisting Tiburon motorists and being girl Friday to the police force, Nancy wears a chic A-line dress. When duty calls outside she has a double-breasted trench coat and a perky white naugahyde cap with a visor.

The dress is a cocoa color of a lightweight, tightly woven wool. A white wool knit stripe goes around the neck and down the center of the front of the dress. A beige shoulder bag and matching, stylish, low-heel shoes coordinate the outfit, which erases a police matron image without taking away from the dignity of her position.

The design was the work of the people on the staff of the city of Tiburon.

The women had a say about what was stylish and comfortable with the men holding out for feminity. Their combined interests on this unusual task is an unqualified success.

Nancy, who is a native of Marin, is an attractive addition to the Tiburon Police Department. There is little doubt she will evoke envy from other uniformed women employees.

HELEN HELP US!

Curious Daughter Questions Why She Doesn't Know Cousins

DEAR HELEN:

I'm an average teen with just one problem.

Ever since I can remember I've never seen anyone from my mother's side of the family: cousins, parents, no one. She never talks about them—it's as if they never existed. I've only known her sister, whom I'm very close to. I'd ask her, but I'm afraid she wouldn't tell me either.

When I was younger, I'd ask my mother what her name was before she married, and she'd say, "I'll tell you later," but later never came.

Helen, don't I have a right to know about my mother's childhood, my maternal grandparents, where they lived? We don't even have pictures of her when she was a child. My father acts touchy on the subject too.

I love my parents very much and we get along fine. Why won't they share this secret with me? Is there anything I can do to find out without coming right out and asking?

—SIMONE

DEAR SIMONE:

Sometimes it's best to let sleeping family skeletons lie. Perhaps your mother's childhood was so miserable that she prefers living in the present, without memories. If you stir them up, with too many questions, you may begin a "recall" that could upset her present happy life.

Why not discuss this with your father? I'm sure he'll level with you.

—H.

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree 100 percent with "Outdated" who thinks a man should keep himself pure if he expects chasity in his girl. I just broke off with a nice guy, aged 30 who had the same ideas as she. He feels that partaking of the goodies before marriage is a sin greater than murder. He seems to feel that on your wedding night things work out perfectly and being married cures all ignorance. Can you imagine the amount of confusion if two people of this type marry? I and most of my fellow females feel that one partner should be informed mentally and physically in the art of love because love is the most beautiful thing one can experience and it shouldn't be bungled.

The basic knowledge must be gained preferably by a young man having "been around" before the big step of marriage.

Maybe "Outdated" would like to meet my ex-boyfriend. After talking with him about the physical side of marriage, I found him quite inadequate in his attitudes and figured our relationship would never work out.

MISS E. E. G.

DEAR HELEN:

These girls who say they refuse to tolerate a double standard make me furious. Men's psychological and sexual dispositions make it nearly impossible for them to conform to a set of standards by which women can quite easily abide. To insist on a virgin husband is to completely disregard all the more important qualities of a man. As you said, Helen, "Let the past be forgotten."

My fiance was a junior James Bond, but he hasn't looked at a girl since he met me. I think his youthful flirtations (that's all they were) have made him more understanding of the wacky workings of female emotions. He is certainly sensitive to my every mood. I haven't been a saint, so I can't blame him for following hard-to-control emotions with willing girls.

—ME

DEAR HELEN:

Do you have any faith in the moral standards of today's young men? If so, why were your comments to "Outmoded Virgin" so discouraging? There are many young men willing to wait, and those men are looking for girls willing to wait. I am one of them—and I found my girl!

Garden Path Joins Other Shops At Ross Art And Garden Center

Opening days are festive occasions and so it will be Tuesday when the Garden Path is revealed to the public as the newest display room at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

It is a garden-crafts shop, located in the little Bottle House next to the Pixie Playground. Emphasis will be on unusual yet inexpensive garden decor — vases, pots, jars, plant-stands, chimes, aprons, hats, and other garden-oriented articles. Plants, too, will be offered with cymbidium orchids featured at the opening.

The garden-crafts shop is operated by the Path Finders Section, organized just a little more than a year ago to find new ways of assisting in upkeep and promoting interest in the non-profit cultural center.

Garden Path plans are to be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesdays only at the start. Visitors enroute are encouraged to stop at the Path Finders Magnolia Tea Room to enjoy their popular Tuesday luncheon. Reservations for the Jan. 14 opening date may be made at the center office.

Mrs. Sergie Gregoriev, Garden Path chairman, said that "enlargement of this new venture depends upon public acceptance of the idea, on growth in membership, and the continuing ability to obtain suitable materials from local artists, craftsmen and garden enthusiasts." She invites those interested to call the Marin Art and Garden Center.

FLORENCE DUNN, worthy grand matron of Reveille Chapter in Salinas, Order of Eastern Star, to the 11th district, will make her official visit to the San Rafael Chapter Monday. She will be accompanied by Richard T. Brassell Jr., worthy grand patron of Guardian Chapter, Southgate, and members of the grand family of the Grand Chapter, State of California.

Frances Goodwin, associate matron of the local chapter, has announced dinner for 6 p.m. to be followed by a meeting at 8 p.m., both at the Masonic Temple, Fourth and Lootens Place in San Rafael.

Participating chapters of the 11th district are Morning Star 61 of Petaluma, San Rafael 215, Mill Valley 219, Novato 609 and Fairfax 594 and Larkspur.

MRS. ERVIN C. TIPTON will speak at the Dorcas Society of the United Church of Christ in Fairfax Tuesday. Her topic will be "Russia Today," based on her experiences and impressions gained on a trip with the Doug Henderson tour last fall.

Dessert will be served at 1 p.m. with the program to follow.

A MEETING of the San Rafael Club of the California Federation of Woman's Clubs, Junior Membership, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ronald Bender, 7 Corte Verano, San Rafael. Membership in the new club is open to women between the ages of 18 and 35.

Included in the program will be two speakers who will relay to Juniors the needs for Marin County and opportunities for possible projects related to youth, conservation, mental health and fine arts. Speaking will be Mrs. Marion Kelley, executive director of the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, and Mel Augustine, a supervisor in the Marin County probation office.

MARIN COUNTY Alpha Phi Alumni will meet at the home of Mrs. Coleman Sellers in Lucas Valley on Tuesday.

A sandwich exchange will be held at noon, and plans will be made for the annual fund-raising luncheon to be held in February.

THE NOVATO Hostess Club will hold its first general meeting of the year at a new location, the Novato Presbyterian Church.

Guest speaker for the meeting, to be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday will be Edwin V. Grundstrom, president of the Novato Civic Foundation.

THREE MARIN members have been elected officers of the Bay Area group of Femineers, wives of civil and structural engineers. They will assume their new offices at a meeting Wednesday at Giovanni's in Ghirardelli Square, San Francisco, at 11:30 a.m. The Marin officers are Mmes. Robert Lawson of Greenbrae, vice president; and Leo Gosliner of Sleepy Hollow and Les Graham of Belvedere, directors. Mrs. Tom Wasser of Redwood City is president.

SPECIAL SERVICES available at the school will be the program for the Lagunitas School Parent-Teacher Association meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the school multipurpose room. Mrs. Sarah Napier will moderate a panel which will include the school nurse, speech therapist, Frostig program director and psychologist.

ELIZABETH KEYES of Denver, Colo., founder of the Fransisters movement and a nationally known author and lecturer, was guest of honor Wednesday at a luncheon given at the Sausalito home of Mrs. Altheya Clark Youngman.

She spoke on the Fransisters, an ecumenical movement for laywomen who wish to balance their lives with a spiritual ideal, and on "toning," a new method of self-healing. She also founded the "Overweight Overcomers International."

THE GARDEN CLUB of Marin will hold its meeting on Wednesday, 8 p.m., at the Marinwood Community Center. Speaker will be Yon Yonko, well known in the area for his ability in landscaping and gardening. His topic is winter cleanup and pruning.

MRS. MELVIN Mitchell of Corte Madera will be installed president of the Welcome Wagon Club of Central Marin at a luncheon Tuesday at the Corinthian Yacht Club in Tiburon. Other officers to be installed at the gathering, which will begin at 11 a.m., are Mmes. Richard Raab, vice president and membership; Donald Loghnane, vice president and hospitality; D. Robert Lee, recording secretary; T. L. Russell, corresponding secretary; Robert Miller, treasurer; Robert L. Peterson, historian; Jay Barker, publicity chairman, and Beverly Sallintin, reservations chairman.

"ARE YOU INVOLVED?" will be the question put to members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the United Methodist Church of Mill Valley at their luncheon meeting on Tuesday. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Erwin Williams.

A business meeting at 11 a.m. in the youth room will be followed by luncheon in Fellowship Hall at noon with the program set for 1 p.m.

Hostesses will be Mmes. Harold McLean, Horton Hinshaw, H. E. Waschow and Harry Cloutte. Mrs. Jack Shapiro will conduct devotions.

McGruder-Grover Vows Recited In San Rafael

St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael was the setting for the wedding Saturday afternoon of Laurel Grover to Thomas Michael McGruder, both of San Rafael.

Laise Moran of San Rafael was Laurel's honor attendant, and the bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Amy Grover of San Rafael, Gail Grover of Sunnyvale, Marie McDonald and Kathleen Ponti, both of San Rafael.

Michael Pinske of Novato served as best man, and the ushers included the bride's brothers, Paul and Tom Grover of San Rafael, Kemp Dowdy of Novato and Ronald Durham of Petaluma.

A reception was held afterward at the Meadow Club, and the couple left on a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe. They will make their home in San Rafael.

Laurel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo E. Grover of San Rafael. A San Rafael High School graduate, she attended Marin Catholic High School and College of Marin. She is employed with McKenzie's Junior Vogue in San Rafael. Michael Grover of San Rafael is also her brother, and her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Vern E. Grover and Mrs. Allan H. Hillman of San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGruder of San Rafael are parents of the bridegroom. He was graduated from San Rafael High School, attended College of Marin and is employed with Tom McGruder's Men's Shop in San Rafael.

His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Truett of San Rafael and Mrs. L. R. Durham of Petaluma.

Men Change From Tuxedo

Instead of the classic black tuxedo, men are greeting their dates these days in brown dinner suits, matching brown vests, pleated apricot shirts and apricot bow ties. And for the first time, America's largest manufacturer of men's formals is featuring green, grey, brown and medium blue tuxedos.

Lapels, in most cases, are vying for the spotlight with the classic shawl collar. Most are faced with satin that's coordinated to the color of the tuxedo. Formal separates also are "in" with men who like to express individuality. The separates come in sizzling solids, perky prints, brocades and velvet.

Yardage Chart Saves Fabric

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR READERS:

I have had many questions about the clinging quality of bonded fabrics: Seems that even if the garment has been lined it still clings like skin. Our readers have even used static-free taffeta slips to no avail. If any of you have solved the problem of knits that cling, please write me at once so that I may pass this information on to eager readers.

DEAR EUNICE:

I find it frustrating to purchase more fabric than necessary simply because it was wider than the pattern called for. Is there any type of chart that would list camparative yardages to be purchased in varying fabric widths?—MRS. R. T.

DEAR MRS. R. T.:

The following conversion chart was worked out by the government and has proved satisfactory in most cases for us. Please remember one thing: when choosing a pattern where you must add additional width to the side seams, you should decide the correct fabric requirement from the next largest pattern size.

FABRIC CONVERSION CHART

Fabric Width	32"	35"-36"	39"	41"	44"-45"	50"	52"-54"	58"-60"
Yardage	1⅞	1¾	1½	1½	1⅜	1¼	1⅛	1
	2¼	2	1¾	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜	1¼
	2½	2¼	2	2	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜
	2¾	2½	2¼	2¼	2⅛	1¾	1¾	1⅝
	3⅛	2⅞	2½	2½	2¼	2	1⅞	1¾
	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2¾	2½	2¼	2	1⅞
	3¾	3⅜	3	2⅞	2¾	2⅜	2¼	2
	4	3¾	3¼	3⅛	2⅞	2⅝	2⅜	2¼
	4⅜	4¼	3½	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2⅝	2⅜
	4⅝	4½	3⅝	3⅝	3⅜	3	2¾	2⅝
	5	4¾	4	3⅞	3⅝	3¼	2⅞	2¾

Add Additional ¼ Yard:
- For wide span conversion in fabric
- For nap or one-directional printed fabrics
- For styles with sleeves cut in one piece with body of garment

Mrs. Edgar Simpson, Barnhill, Ill., is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her suggestion:

"I stumbled onto a simple improvement for the bandless skirt with a grosgrain inner band. Having no grosgrain on hand, but some one-inch elestic last week, I thought, 'Why not?' It worked beautifuly; stretch it as you sew it to the top of the skirt just as you would the grosprain. You won't have to make all the little darts, it's quicker, and as far as I can tell, a real winner!"

DEAR EUNICE:

So many of the new patterns call for a more fitted bodice with a very full, gathered skirt. I look absolutely terrible with this type of skirt and wonder if this should be more or less confined to the very young girls?—MRS. S. R.

DEAR MRS. S. R.:

I don't think age enters into the picture as much as one's figure. If you have a slim waistline, a gathered or dirndl skirt is becoming; the larger the waistline, the less fullness you need.

If the fabric is the least bit bulky or thick, you should take darts at the waistline about three inches deep, perhaps eight or 10 of them spaced evenly around the skirt. They will take some of the excess fabric from the waistline area and still not change the fullness at the hips. Experiment with the type of skirt that looks best; all patterns should be modified to fit the individual person.

DEAR EUNICE:

How soon can we begin wearing the lovely printed silks for dinner dresses? Somehow they look so fresh and gay after seeing winter clothes and yet, the weather in my part of the country doesn't say it's spring.—MRS. M. M. R.

DEAR MRS. M. M. R.:

The answer was in your statement concerning the part of the country you live in. Some parts of the country have eternal spring and summer, where others have a short summer.

If you are really up with the latest fashions, you will always be ahead of the season rather than behind it. For this reason, it is generally accepted that the printed silks and soft pastels make their entrance immediately after the first of the new year. Anything that will help brighten a drab season is worthwhile and should be encouraged.

Black Panthers Seen Via Couple's Lenses

By LAURA DEVENDORF

SAN FRANCISCO — "The Black Panthers: A Photographic Essay by Ruth-Marion Baruch and Pirkle Jones" is an arresting portrait of a movement not only for its photographic excellence but for the "like it is" realism of its content.

Wide-ranging photographs of party activities, its individuals and its mood were taken by the Mill Valley husband-wife team from July into October 1968. A total of 123 are included in this exhibit which continues through Jan. 19 at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park.

The photographers say, "We couldn't possibly photograph all the aspects of this virile, rapid-growing and deep-rooted movement; but we can show you: This is what we saw, this is what we felt; these are the people."

Their composite recreates an unvarnished, moving experience of those turmoil-riddled months. The scene moves from East Bay rallies, to guards drilling in Marin City, to Kathleen Cleaver addressing the Unitarian Church congregation in San Rafael. The cameras cover mass action and tighten on individuals.

Subjects include leaders Huey Newton, Bobby Seale, Eldridge Cleaver, Stokeley Carmichael, David Hilliard and George Murray (teaching his English class at San Francisco State College), as well as the unnamed.

At times arrogant, defiant and deadly, the Panther militance reverses to dignity, the innocence of children and the melting warmth of a parent's touch of a child. Through the expertise of the photographers, the faces, symbols and activities meld as a thought and a feeling about the movement as a whole.

There is neither uncertainty nor embellishment on either side. As one Black Panther told the couple when they first explained their project, "The beautiful thing about it is, that all you have to do is say it like it is." They have.

Although it has only one more day to show, mention should also be made of Margaret d'Hamer's "Photographic Environments." Her aim is to "create an active interaction between the viewer and the photographed material" and when she succeeds it is marvelous.

A wall of nine huge blowups of mustachioed sculptor Don Potts takes hilarious advantage of his elastic face and his facility for bending it insanely. And her floor maze of four-year-olds captures all their greatest expressions.

Miss d'Hamer also has a walk-in box that surrounds you with giant faces. But they are so low that unless hairlines turn you on, you'd have to be four-years-old high to enjoy it. Also, the bullfight scenes seem indifferent compared to the portraits which so strongly insist on being accepted as personalities through their enormous, often outrageous, presence.

Marinites Back Bridge Bus Plans

Both of Marin's representatives on the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District board gave cautious endorsements yesterday to a proposal that the district go into the bus business immediately at a cost of $8.5 million.

"It's a great breakthrough," said Supervisor Michael Wornum, attending his first bridge board meeting. "After all, the bridge district's primary function is to get people from Marin to San Francisco."

However, Wornum cautioned that the proposal "has to be evaluated in light of the ferry study." The feasibility study of water transportation, to be done by Arthur D. Little Inc., is due in the spring.

If ferries prove feasible, said Wornum, they would have to be coordinated with whatever new bus system is started.

Marin's other director, Joseph E. Sheeks of Belvedere, termed the proposal, drawn by the district's former chief engineer Arthur C. Jenkins, "the first really concrete and constructive solution I've yet encountered to our transportation problems." The bridge district, noted Sheeks, "is the only entity that has the money to finance a transportation solution."

Jenkins' proposal called for buying 150 new buses and setting up a new system that would require an annual subsidy from bridge district revenues of $1,411,000.

Board president William Moskovitz of San Francisco referred Jenkins' report, prepared for the district at a cost of $6,000, to the finance and commuters affairs committees. No date was set for them to meet.

Sheeks is chairman of the commuters affairs committee.

The directors did not comment on the proposal when it was presented to them yesterday, but the position of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors long has been that a ferry system must be provided before a new bus system is tried.

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors also:

TRAFFIC — Received a report from Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring that traffic totaled 30,929,965 vehicles in 1968, up 5.69 per cent over 1967. A record 7,033 vehicles crossed southbound between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. yesterday.

BIDS — Declared Amercoat Corp. of Oakland lowest of three bidders on 1,000 gallons of inorganic zinc silicate paint, with a bid of $11,016, and accepted a $4,950 bid from the Interstate Rubber Products Corp. of Los Angeles for 1,000 traffic tubes.

REPORTS — Voted to skip time-consuming readings of committee and staff reports during board meetings, and instead to mail the reports to board members before meetings.

CONCERT REVIEW

Symphony Fare Has Compatible Variety

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Anyone who believes that classicism, romanticism and impressionism in the same musical works are incompatible would have learned otherwise in the fifth program of San Francisco Symphony's 57th season last night at the Opera House.

Two of the four works chosen by maestro Josef Krips illustrated this possible affinity, for Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4 in D Major, Opus 90 (Italian) was the perfect example of the congruity of classics and romanticism, and D'Indy's Symphony on a French Mountain Air, Opus 25, was a fascinating blend of impressionism and classicism.

Weber's Konzertstuck in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra, Opus 79, was frankly romantic in its threatrical brilliance. Only the opening "Orpheus" ballet by Stravincky was in anything like contemporary idiom, and it, too, had classical elements.

GUEST ARTIST

A fine guest artist for the D'Indy and Weber works was 69-year-old French pianist Robert Casadesus, though there was some disappointment in the Symphony on a French Mountain Air. Either he was trying too hard to subdue the piano part to avoid making the piece sound like a concerto, or the orchestra was playing too loudly.

However, his sparkling virtuosity was fully revealed in the Konzertstuck. Especially notable were the exquisite clarity of each note in his fleet, rippling runs, finesse of his phrasing and his poetic, singing tone.

ORCHESTRA PLEASES

The orchestra as a whole was most impressive in a reading of the Mendelssohn symphony that brought out all the charm and grace characteristic of the composer. The allegro vivace and saltarello: presto movements were exciting, with some excellent work by the strings, and the andante con moto achieved a lovely cantabile quality.

The ballet "Orpheus," too, was performed with distinction and a refined and muted elegance very appropriate to its dream-like other-worldly character. This was achieved largely through the performance of woodwinds and strings, especially the harp, and very little brass and percussion except in one part.

Spurrlows Due

The Spurrlows, a group of 30 young entertainers, will perform at Terra Linda High School at 2 p.m. on Jan. 20. The group will sing folk songs and show tunes and perform a comedy routine.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Many Persons Perform Better When Heavier Than Charts Say

VAN DELLEN

Many individuals feel better when their weight is above the accepted figure. They eat well, are peppier, and are able to work harder than when carrying less weight.

Some are heavy boned and muscular, and the added pounds are a normal variation related to body build, even though the charts list their ideal weight as 25 pounds lighter.

There is no standard weight that is ideal for everyone of a certain height and age. The right weight is that at which the person functions best. Many athletes have found this out.

When this is reached, it is surprising how often it can be maintained without gain or loss. To my knowledge, there are no statistics on whether longevity is affected by the excess; even tho these people do not live as long as do the slim, at least they enjoy themselves.

EATING TO SATISFY an emotional need presents a different problem. The man is protecting himself from a nervous breakdown by gaining security along with poundage. The scale may see-saw back and forth according to the stresses encountered.

These persons eat like there was no tomorrow when confronted with family or job troubles, marital difficulties, disappointments, or accidents.

When in high gear, diets are followed like mad. Some are so dedicated along this line, they lose an unbelievable amount of fat in a short time.

THE MAN or woman with this type of personality cannot be given a routine regimen because eating less during emotional upheavals will increase hidden frustrations.

Tranquilizers are more effective. Sensible dietary changes must be adopted voluntarily.

This may explain why many physicians treat people and not fat. The individual may have many disturbing tensions and is helped when allowed to ventilate.

A long-term program of weight reduction allows more time for discussing problems that interfere with his sense of well-being as well as with his weight. In addition, the diet does not become a temporary measure but the foundation for future eating habits.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

LOOSE RINGS

J. R. O. writes: My doctor says that while I am not ruptured, I have several loose rings. Please tell me what this means and if surgery is necessary. The physician didn't say anything about an operation. P.S. I am 50.

REPLY

Many physicians make this diagnosis when there is some doubt about the presence of a hernia. The examination probably showed a slight weakness in this area but not enough to cause the tissues to bulge as they do in an obvious hernia.

INFECTED BLADDER

A reader writes: Is cystitis due to kidney trouble?

REPLY

Infection of the bladder usually stems from bacteria that enter from the outside via the urethra. But it can result from disorders anywhere along the urinary tract, including the kidneys. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on cystitis.

CHOLESTEROL BUILDUP

A reader writes: If tests show a high level of cholesterol in the blood, does this mean it is confined to the blood or does cholesterol accumulate in other parts of the body also?

REPLY

Cholesterol may accumulate in the liver, brain, and other tissues, including the skin.

DIFFERENCE IN CYSTS

A reader writes: Are cysts malignancies?

REPLY

Cysts are sacs that contain liquid or semi-fluid material. They usually are benign but some become malignant.

CHRONIC COLON INFECTION

A reader writes: Can the colon be chronically infected?

REPLY

Yes. Amebic dysentery and ulcerative colitis are examples.

U.S. Accuses Auto Makers Of Smog Curb Conspiracy

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The federal government charges that the Big Four automakers and a trade association conspired to delay development of antipollution devices for cars. The accused say their cooperation actually speeded up the process.

The U. S. District Court in Los Angeles has been asked to rule as to who is right.

The Justice Department opened the dispute yesterday by filing with the court an antitrust suit against General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, American Motors and the trade organization, the Automobile Manufacturers Association.

In the complaint, the department accused the automakers and the association of agreeing privately to set a uniform date for inclusion of antipollution devices on their product. The civil suit asked no penalties other than court orders barring such agreements.

The suit charged that the defendants made these agreements designed to delay installation of antipollution equipment.

Not to install "positive crankcase ventilation" until 1963 models were out, although these could have been included in 1962 models.

To delay, in late 1962, the installation of improved creankcase ventilation on new cars to be sold in California.

In early 1964, to seek delays in installing new exhaust control equipment that could have been available for 1966 model cars, telling California authorities "it would be technologically impossible to install such devices before 1967."

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and the AMA issued statements denying any unlawful activity, and contending that the suit would hamper further efforts to reduce air pollutants produced by automobiles.

Announcing the government action in Washington, Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark charged that the defendants and others agreed as early as 1953 to eliminate all competition in development and manufacture of antipollutant devices and to restrict publicity about them.

The AMA and the three biggest manufacturers conceded that they banded together 15 years ago in an effort to solve pollution problems. But they denied any agreement to delay marketing of the devices and techniques they developed.

Nixon Keeps Ray Bliss As National Chairman

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Nixon has settled for the forseeable future an internal debate over the leadership of th Republican National Committee by asking Ray C. Bliss to remain its chairman.

No specific period was disclosed and Bliss would not discuss the question of how long he might continue. But a key political aide to the President-elect says Nixon's request means Bliss will remain in the party post for "a substantial period" unless he decides to leave.

Nixon is known to have considered replacing Bliss with a chairman more talented in public political salesmanship.

Bliss, 61, has been chairman since April 1, 1965. His field is organization politics—the technical side—and he shuns the public speaking, banquet circuit approach.

In the view of some Nixon associates, the retention of Bliss means that activities by the Republican senatorial and congressional campaign committees will be upgraded. There is talk of their being given research assistance from the White House as well as the assignment of top administration officials to campaign for individual candidates in tough races.

Nixon has fixed the goal of regaining party control of the Senate in 1970. Twenty-five Democratic seats will be at stake then and many are regarded as vulnerable. For that reason, Republican leaders hope they can upset the Democrats' present 57-42 majority.

Democratic seats up for grabs next year include those now filled by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn. McCarthy has said he won't run as a Democrat again and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey could wind up contesting for his seat.

Even Republicans are not optimistic about beating Kennedy, the Senate's new Democratic whip, or Muskie, the 1968 vice presidential nominee. Both will have to win re-election to survive as contenders for the 1972 presidential nomination.

Nixon cabinet appointees continue today a round of conferences with task forces which have studied problems facing the new administration.

A key meeting was due late in the day for Secretary of the Treasury-designate David M. Kennedy to receive the findings of a task force on tax legislation.

A vital topic is that of the 10 per cent income surtax, due to expire June 30 unless it is renewed by Congress.

Nixon already has a summary of the task force recommendations, but it, like all the other reports, is being kept confidential.

Civic Center Art Winners Chosen

Two paintings, "shrimp boat," an oil by Charlotte McNulty, and "Black 2," a batik by Bill Mackey, a 17-year-old College of Marin student, tied for first place in the "people to people" art exhibit contest at the Marin Civic Center.

Runners up were: "Hideaway" an oil by Mrs. McNulty; "Ramblin' Jack," a batik by Claudia Graham, and "Yesterday," a pastel by Otis Battle.

Sixty items were entered in the exhibit, which concluded Thursday. Visitors voted for their favorites from among the exhibit of artists ranging in age from 16 to 78 All the artists are involved in the public welfare program, either as recipients, foster parents, adoptive parents and staff members. Marin Museum Association and Marin Volunteer Bureau helped arrange the exhibit.

Neighbor Faces Burglary Count After Intrusion

A 26-year-old San Rafael man was booked into Marin County Jail today on suspicion of burglary after he reportedly entered a neighbor's apartment and tried to choke her.

Police said Cora Sue Palmer of 1363 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, reported she was awakened early today by someone scratching her leg.

She identified the man as another resident of the apartment building, Ronald Dunne Fetter. She told police that when she screamed, the man attempted to choke her until she pushed him away and he fled.

Miss Fulmer said her billfold was missing that that she had missed several other items during the past week. Police said several of the items were found in Fetter's apartment.

Fetter was held on bail of $1,250 to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Navy Set To Open Probe Into Capture Of Pueblo

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The heroes' welcome is over and the Navy is getting down to serious business with the 82 survivors of the USS Pueblo.

The Navy announced yesterday that the long awaited court of inquiry on the Pueblo's seizure by North Korean Navy units last Jan. 23 will be convened Thursday at nearby Coronado.

The court of inquiry— an automatic event in the Navy when a ship is lost or damaged —will not be a trial. Its purpose will be to gather all the facts surrounding the Pueblo's capture, and the conduct of Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher and his men during their 11 months in captivity.

The court also will study damage done to U.S. military security by capture of the Pueblo's secret electronic equipment. Most of its sessions will be open to the public, those dealing with technical matters are expected to be closed.

Its recommendations will be passed on to the chief of Naval operations and the commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet. Technically, the court of inquiry could recommend some Pueblo men for courts-martial or reprimands, although the Navy's attitude so far makes this appear unlikely.

Most of the Pueblo crew will be moved Tuesday from Balboa Navy Hospital for limited duty at North Island Naval Air Station, near the scene of the inquiry. They have been at Balboa since their arrival in the United States on Christmas Eve.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 11, the 11th day of 1969 with 354 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Jupiter and Mars. The evening stars are Mercury, Saturn and Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1878 Alexander Campbell, a Brooklyn, N.Y., milkman, delivered milk to his customers in glass bottles for the first time.

In 1935 Amelia Earhart flew from Honolulu to Oakland, Calif., to become the first woman to solo over the Pacific.

In 1964 the U.S. surgeon general's committee issued a report linking cigarette smoking with lung cancer.

A thought for the day: American poet Walt Whitman once said, "Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty."

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Play Is Always Real Factor To The Grade Of Your Bridge

You don't have to tell other people how you play bridge; your play will do its own talking. Just let a hand like today come along and you con't be able to hide your light under a bushel.

Opening lead — ♡ Q

AVERAGE PLAY

The average player takes the king of hearts and immediately wins the king of diamonds. He next leads a low diamond, and West's spade discard provokes a loud wail of distress. South complains about terrible luck and explains to all the world that the bidding was beautiful.

There's nothing wrong with the bidding, but any pair of hacks should get to six no-trump with 35 points in high cards and a long suit.

BAD LUCK

The luck was terrible, but South should have protected himself by executing a routine safety play.

After taking the king of hearts South should lead a low diamond to the ace and then return a low diamond from dummy. This method of playing the suit identifies South as a fine player even though not a single word is spoken.

PERFECTLY SAFE

South is perfectly safe no matter how the diamonds break. If East follows with a low diamond, South tries a finesse with the nine. There is no danger if this finesse loses since then the suit will break normally.

As the cards lie, the nine wins and there are no other problems.

SET HELPLESS

East could not save himself by putting up the ten of diamonds since South would win with the king and return the nine to force out the queen.

South would be equally safe if West had the length in diamonds. In that case East would discard on the second diamond, and South would take the king of diamonds and return the nine of diamonds through West.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:

♠ — K Q J ♥ — 6 4 ♦ — A J 6 3 2 ♣ — A Q J

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond.

The hand is too strong for an opening bid of 1 no-trump since you have 18 points and a five-card suit. This is more like a 19-point hand than an 18-point hand. Moreover, the weak doubleton in hearts is another argument against an opening no-trump bid.

Christian Unity Week Is Next

The seventh annual San Rafael Christian Unity Week will begin next Saturday with opening services at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian, Fifth and E streets.

Special events will continue through Jan. 25, concluding with a "love feast by candlelight" on the Domincan College campus.

Another highlight will be a folk guitar mass at 7:45 p.m., Jan. 22, at St. Raphael's Catholic Church. Directed by guitarist Barbar Riordan, the mass will feature the use of 20 additional guitar players.

Opening events next Saturday will include a welcome by Dr. Charles Griffin and special music by the Presbyterian choir.

A panel discussion will follow on "Authority Crisis—Who's in Charge Here." Moderator will be Gregory Haran, a layman from St. Raphael's.

Panelists will include Rev. Thomas Kennedy, pastor of St. Raphael's; Rev. James Upshaw of Christ Presbyterian in Terra Linda; Rev. Athur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran; Dr. Philip Whitmer of First Methodist and Rev. Angus Dun Episcopal Church of Redeemer.

On Sunday, members of the participating churches, will be urged to visit other denominations. A special blessing will be given in all churches to non-parishioners.

Another highlight of the Sunday schedule will be a youth forum, "Integration of Christ in Our Lives," at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Court Street.

Opening remarks will be made by Mr. and Mrs. James Szykowny of St. Raphael's, forum chairmen. Then the session will be broken into table conferences.

On Friday, an inter-faith council will discuss proposals for Christian action at a meeting to be held at the First Methodist Church, 9 Ross Valley Drive.

The closing session at Dominican College is scheduled at 7 p.m. Jan. 25 in the Caleruega Dining Room.

Combined choirs of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and St. Cyprian's Episcopal Church of San Francisco will present special music. Guest speaker will be Dr. David Willis, associate professor of historical theology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo. Dinner reservations can be made through Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Smith of San Rafael.

Historically the special week is known as the "Chair of Unity Octave," so-called because the services begin on the Feast of St. Peter's Chair in Rome and end on the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul.

The first observance in Marin was in 1963 under direction of the late Msgr. Daniel McAllister of St. Raphael's.

Participating churches this year include St. Raphael's and St. Sylvester's Catholic Redeemer and St. Paul's, Episcopal; First Presbyterian and St. Luke's; Trinity Lutheran Church, and the First Methodist Church.

ACCEPTS NEW PARISH

Soon to be moving across Richardson Bay to St. Stephen's Parish in Belvedere is Rev. John S. Thornton, rector of Christ Episcopal Church in Sausalito. Reverend Thornton, who has been rector of Christ Church for the past five years, will assume his new duties in Belvedere on Feb. 4 replacing Rev. Llewellyn A. White who resigned to become associate executive director of the San Francisco Foundation. The calling committee of Christ Church is now reviewing candidates for rector but, until one is named, Rev. Canon David Forbes, headmaster of the Cathedral School for Boys in San Francisco, will lead the parish. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

'THE GREAT DOERS'

Methodists Present Wide Range In Church Doctrine

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The Methodists are the great "doers" of American Protestantism.

With a knack for organization, a will to work, and a traditional zeal for social reform, they are always looking for a good cause to support. And when they find one, they hurl themselves into it with fierce dedication.

This activist bent often is accompanied by a marked indifference toward theological doctrines. Surveys among Methodist clergy regularly turn up a staggeringly wide range of doctrinal positions, from strict fundamentalism on one hand to disavowals of Christ's divinity on the other.

The Methodist movement grew out of the preaching of John Wesley, an 18th Century Church of England priest who wanted to reform his own denomination and had no desire or intention of starting a new one.

TURNING POINT

The turning point in Wesley's life came on the evening of May 24, 1738. He attended a prayer meeting at a little chapel on Aldersgate Street in London. As he sat in meditation, listening to someone read aloud from Martin Luther's writings, Wesley suddenly knew what Luther meant when he insisted that men are saved through faith in Christ alone, and not by any good works of their own.

"I felt my heart strangely warmed," Wesley wrote later.

"I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine . . ."

From that moment on, Wesley was a different man. Before the "heart-warming experience," he had been an ascetic, scholarly Anglican priest—to put it baldly, a self-righteous prig. Afterwards he became a generous, outgoing man, fired by a passionate desire to share with others his great discovery that salvation is God's free gift.

For the next 50 years, John Wesley preached this good news throughout England. When churches were closed to him—as they often were—he held his meetings in open fields. His sermons often drew as many as 30,000 persons.

Although the Wesleyan revival brought badly needed new life into the Church of England, the leaders of that institution refused ordination to the corps of young lay preachers whom Wesley had recruited to help him. Had they been less stubborn on this point, it is possible that the Methodist movement would have remained inside the Anglican communion, as Wesley himself did to his dying day.

REAL CONFLICT

The ordination conflict came to a head when Wesley's "Methodist societies" spread to the American colonies. By the end of the revolution, there were 15,000 Methodists in America, and they had no ordained clergymen to care for them.

Wesley made a final appeal to the bishops of the Church of England to ordain priests for missionary service among American Methodists. When this was refused, he took the fateful step of ordaining two men, on his own initiative, to "preside over the flock in America."

Since the Church of England never recognized the validity of these and subsequent Methodist ordinations, the Wesleyan movement from that time forward was a separate denomination.

From the start, Methodists attached great importance to what they called "a felt experience of salvation." They believed that every man should be able, like John Wesley, to recall the very hour and moment when he knew himself to be saved through faith in Christ.

HIGHLY CONGENIAL

The people of the frontier found this approach to religion highly congenial. They flocked into the Methodist church in such great numbers that by the time of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln spoke of it as the largest and "most important" denomination in America.

For more than a century after it was formally established as a separate denomination in 1784, American Methodism remained the "poor man's church," appealing primarily to the uneducated and underprivileged. Over the years, however, it has gradually turned into a middle-class denomination. Today it has more business and professional men than farmers and laborers.

The United Methodist Church is America's largest Methodist body and second largest Protestant body. It has more than 11 million members, and 42,000 local congregations.

There are 29 other Methodist bodies in the United States. Three of them are Negro denominations: The African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church. Together they have about 2.5 million members.

The other Methodist bodies are small, ranging in size from the Free Methodist Church with 55,000 members to the Cumberland Methodist Church, which has fewer than 100 still in its fold. Most of these smaller bodies are fundamentalist in doctrine.

Ecumenical Composite Moving To Washington

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

As usual, like the nation, it's an ecumenical composite. But it reflects an added prominence of some small and previously unrepresented religious groups.

Its interdenominational mobility is particularly dramatized at the top, in President-elect Nixon.

TENDS TO MIGRATE

Like millions of people in modern times, he tends to migrate from one church to another for worship, according to circumstances, although he formally remains a Quaker.

His cabinet includes three Roman Catholics, two Mormons and the others, mainline Protestants, mostly Presbyterians.

The new 91st Congress, a customary religious assortment, is made up to 399 Protestants, 111 Roman Catholics, 19 Jews and three Greek Orthodox. Three representatives do not list any religious connections.

Eastern Orthodoxy, which had no members at all in Congress until two years ago despite its nearly five million adherents, added one more this time, to make it three, giving it a slightly more proportional place in politics.

TINY GROUP

A tiny group, the 2,400-member Schwenkfelder Church in Pennsylvania, has its first U.S. senator, Richard S. Schweiker. And the 70,000-member Christian and Missionary Alliance has its first congressman, Rep. Wilmer Mizell of North Carolina, lately of baseball fame, and a lay preacher.

But there are no Hindus, Moslems or Buddhists, although they number around a quarter million in this country, mainly Buddhists on the West Coast and in Hawaii.

Roman Catholicism, which added two more in the legislative lists, has the largest number of any single church—98 representatives and 13 senators—but this still isn't up to its share of the population, nearly a fourth at 47 million.

Figures on religious affiliation of the incoming federal legislators were compiled by Christianity Today, an evangelical fortnightly published in Washington, D.C.

Methodism, ranking second again in the legislative lists despite a loss of nine, now has a total of 90, including 23 senators and 67 representatives, a hefty count in relation to its 13 million adherents.

OTHER CHURCHES

But the legislative role is even bigger proportionately for Episcopalians, numbering only 3.5 million nationally, but with 14 senators and 53 representatives, a total of 67.

Also for Presbyterians, numbering only 4.4 million, yet counting 13 senators and 69 representatives, a total of 82.

In sharp contrast, Lutherans, totalling nine million across the country, have only 14 members in both houses, up one, making it 11 representatives and three senators.

Baptists, in comparison to their 25 million adherents, including two large Negro bodies, also are proportionately fewer among federal legislators—53 of them, including 43 representatives and 10 senators.

Mainly, it is the affluent largely - white denominations with British backgrounds whose share of legislative posts tends to be bigger than their share of the population, Christianity Today noted.

SOCIAL INVOLVEMENT

The figures also "indicate something of the prestige and social involvement of America's religious groups," the summary said, citing the proportionately high numbers of Episcopal and Presbyterian legislators.

Similar strength is shown by the United Church of Christ (including Congregationalists), with only about two million members nationally, but with six senators and 23 representatives, a total of 29.

Also, the Christian Church (Disciples), with only 1.6 million members, has 12 members in the House and one in the Senate, a total of 13. This is President Johnson's church.

REV. KENNETH SHORT
To conduct services

Santa Cruz Minister Will Speak

Rev. Kenneth Short of Santa Cruz will be the guest speaker next week at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, according to pastor Gerald Boyd.

Reverend Short will conduct a service at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Then he will conduct the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services next Saturday.

He has been preaching in Santa Cruz for the past six years, but has left that pastorate to work with the Far East Broadcasting Co. preaching the gospel to Indonesia.

He has seen the modern Indonesia go from a placid pre-war people to those seeking independence and resisting the threat of communism. The latter has turned to a wholesale turning to Christianity, he said.

Council Sets Conference In Richmond

The annual Northern California Council of Churches will hold its annual meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Arnold B. Come, president of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Other business will include introduction of the new director of the joint strategy and action commission of the council.

Special tribute will also be paid to Rt. Rev. Richard Millard, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, who is ending a two-year term as council president.

A New Divorce Concept Urged

NEW YORK (UPI)—A leading Roman Catholic theologian urges that the church consider the acceptance back into its fold of divorced and remarried members.

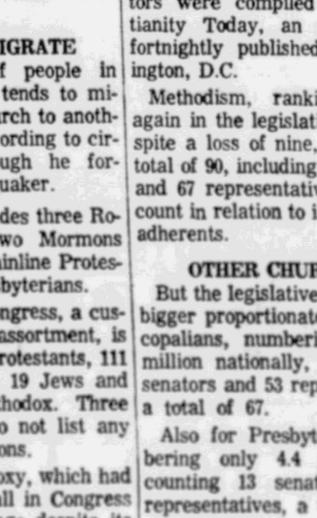
"Civil divorce is a reality that does not worry Catholics," says Monsignor Victor Pospishil, assistant professor of theology at Manhattan College. "They become entangled with the Church only when they wish to remarry or when they have remarried outside the church.

GUEST — Dr. Surjit Singh, Jesse Hays Baird Professor of Christian Philosophy at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will be guest preacher for the 10 a.m. services tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo. His sermon topic will be "Seek and Find."

Slides, Report On Session Tomorrow

Slides will be presented at 8 p.m. tomorrow on the First Oceanic Baha'i's Conference in Palermo, Sicily, and Hafa, Israel last fall.

Showing the slides in the home of Mrs. Gary Olson, 20 Ashford Avenue, Mill Valley, will be Ellen McAllister, a San Jose State College student.



S. DRUMMOND WOLFF

Wolff To Mill Valley Church Post

Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, professor of music at the College of Marin, has been named organist and choirmaster of the Episcopal Church of Our Savior in Mill Valley.

In assuming his new post, Wolff replaces Dr. Hyman I. Krongard, instructor of music in the Reed School District, who left the post because of the press of other work, according to Rev. D. Murray Hammond. Wolff previously was choirmaster and organist for the Holy Innocents' Episcopal Parish in Corte Madera.

A resident of Marin County since 1961, Wolff has directed the community chorus of the Marin Chamber Ensemble and has taught music theory, voice and organ as well as directing the choral program at the college.

He received his doctorate in music at the University of Toronto in Canada and a bachelor's degree in music from the University of London in his native England.

He has served as organist and choirmaster for St. Martin-in-the-Fields in London; Metropolitan United Church, Toronto; Montreal Cathedral, Montreal, and the Bermuda Cathedral, Bermuda.

Church Schools Enrollments Up

NEW YORK (UPI)—Students in Lutheran seminaries, colleges and high schools in the United States and Canada now total 106,418, an increase of 5,623 over the 100,795 reported for 1967-68, according to the Lutheran Council in the USA.

Statistics released by Dr. Ronald L. Johnstone, director of the Office of Research, Statistics and Archives show 4,258 students in the denomination's 20 seminaries, 78,711 enrolled in its 37 colleges and universities, 5,726 in its 19 junior colleges and 17,723 in church-related high schools.

$76,000 IN ESTATE FOR 43 CHURCHES

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ky. (UPI) — The 43 churches in Grant County, Ky., will share equally in the unusual will of a 75-year-old widow who attended church infrequently during her lifetime.

Mrs. Jess Conrad, who died Nov. 1 at her farm home near this north-central Kentucky community, bequeathed almost all of her $76,000 estate to the churches. The remainder is to be divided among four first cousins.

"She didn't wear her religion on her sleeve," said Robert Blackburn, Mrs. Conrad's attorney, "but I think this very act shows she was religious."

CAPITOL CONTROVERSY

Man From Cool Vs. Miniskirts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Republicans gained control of the state Assembly this year for the first time in a decade. One of the first actions of the chairman of the Rules Committee was to ban the miniskirt.

The Democrats promptly accused the Republicans of imposing on their constitutional right to look; the secretarial staff objected and the stage appeared to be set for the first major debate of the legislative session.

"I think if a person can behave in a ladylike manner, it shouldn't matter how short her dress is," said Linda Marino, a messenger.

But Assemblyman Eugene A. Chappie of the mountain hamlet of Cool, passed the word that high hemlines were out.

'NOT A PRUDE'

"I was getting sick and tired of turning my head when one of them was at a drinking fountain," he said. "I'm not a prude. I didn't say we'll be going back to the Pillsbury bloomer era."

Chappie, who was chosen just three days ago as chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee with jurisdiction over the secretarial pool, said, "I felt the girls had an obligation to the establishment they work for to wear something presentable. You can call it a housekeeping function."

But the order aroused the ire of one of Chappie's committee colleagues, Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco.

"We are dangerously close to imposing on people's constitutional rights when we tell them how to dress," Burton said. "More importantly we're imposing on the constitutional rights of those of us who like to look."

GIRLS AGREE

The secretaries apparently agree with Burton over the miniskirt issue in what could turn into the first item for legislative debate.

"We have to wear longer skirts now," Mrs. Marino said. "I have some that are shorter, but I don't wear them anymore."

Sally Carter, another of the curvaceous messenger girls who deliver press releases, said she, too, was peeved at the lower hemline edict.

"We have to," she said. "Chappie said he was appalled at the dresses we were wearing. There are some dresses we just can't wear anymore, the real short ones."

Mrs. Norma Wiley, supervisor for the messenger girls, refused to discuss the matter with newsmen.

Asked if Chappie gave specific directions on length, Mrs. Wiley declined to say, spun around on her office chair and snapped: "I'm sorry, I have things to do."

Chain Collision Injures Novatans

Two Novato men received minor knee injuries Thursday in a four-car collision on Highway 101 in Marinwood, the California Highway Patrol said.

Robert A. Smith, 44, of 10 Gregg Place, and Bruce R. Heilman, 45, of 692 Calle de la Mesa, were treated at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital.

The patrol said the accident occurred at 4:45 p.m. in slowing commute traffic when the car of Thomas A. Bevan, 41, of 40 Loma Vista, Novato, hit the rear of Heilman's car. Heilman's car then hit Smith's and Smith's struck a car driven by William W. Palmer, 30, of 745 Sunset Parkway, Novato, the patrol said.

Missing Girl, 17, Still Being Sought

Denise van Kriedt, 17, who ran away from home Sunday, was still sought today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David van Kriedt, 37 Magnolia Avenue, San Anselmo.

Van Kriedt said Denise, a senior at Sir Francis Drake High School, left a note that she was leaving and didn't want to be traced. He described her as blue-eyed, with long blonde hair, about five feet, six inches tall, and weighing 120 pounds.

DON SHULA
Colts Chief

MIAMI (AP)—The New York Jets, led by super quarterback Joe Namath, and the Baltimore Colts with Cinderella star Earl Morrall wound up with light workouts today their preparations for the third annual world championship professional football game tomorrow in the Orange Bowl.

The odds makers have installed the Colts, champions of the National Football League, 18 point favorites over the Jets, kings of the younger American Football League. The NFL won easily the first two games of the series inaugurated in 1967, after the leagues ended their competitive war over players and gate receipts.

Kickoff for the game to be witnessed by a sellout crowd of 75,354 is 11:30 a.m.. The ly (NBC). The weather forecast is for 70 degree temperatures and sunny skies.

At stake for the players, in addition to the pro football title, is $15,000 per man for the winners as against $7,500 for each loser.

Baltimore won 13 of its 14 regular season games to take its division title, then bested Minnesota for the NFL's Western Conference crown. The Colts went on to smash the Eastern champion, Cleveland, 34-0 in the NFL championship game.

In the AFL, the Jets soared to their first title since the league was born in 1960, winning their Eastern Division with an 11-3 record. They came from behind in the AFL title game to edge Oakland 27-23. Namath, the $400,000 bonus kid from the University of Alabama, threw three touchdown passes against Oakland.

This Super Bowl game matches clubs with high powered offenses and stingy defenses. The Colts in 16 games scored 460 points, and perhaps more meaningful, allowed the opposition only 158. Baltimore posted three shutouts. It avenged its only setback by pulverizing Cleveland in the title game.

Not to be outdone, the Jets scored 419 points and allowed 280, posting the best team defensive record in the AFL. The big question in the game is defense. The Jets don't appear to match the Colts in this department, which could be the story of the game.

Coach Weeb Ewbank of the Jets, who once coached Baltimore to two NFL championships, insists his less experienced team has an excellent chance to be the first AFL Super Bowl winner.

"We are the best AFL team to play in the Super Bowl," says the short, stocky Ewbank, who has been walking with the help of a cane due to a pulled muscle sustained during the post-game celebration of the Oakland victory.

Ewbank feels his team has a better chance than Kansas City and Oakland did against Green Bay in the first two Super Bowl games. The main reason is that New York has Namath, who could be the best quarterback in professional football.

The outspoken Namath—he chided the Colts all last week as being inferior and challenged the ability of some of their star players—did it all for the Jets this past season. He completed 187 of 380 passes for 3,147 yards and 15 touchdowns. He can throw long. He gets the ball off fast, and he's accurate. Perhaps more important, he's a leader, a take charge guy who inspires teams to superior performance.

Namath has three prime receivers in Don Maynard, George Sauer Jr., and Pete Lammons. Maynard caught 57 for 1,297 yards and 10 touchdowns this year to pass the all-time record of NFL's retired

Charlie Sifford: Black Trailblazer On Greens

Before Charlie Sifford, if a Negro walked on a golf green in this country, chances are he was carrying someone else's clubs and/or a wet towel to wipe somebody else's ball.

If he was in the grille room, he was carrying somebody else's coffee. He came to fix a shower, not take one.

Golf was not a game for the ghettos. Neither did it leave any time for carrying picket signs, joining demonstrations, or running for office. Charlie birdied, not talked, his way through social prejudice. He broke barriers by breaking par. His weapon was a 9-iron, not a microphone. Charlie stands as a social pioneer not because he could play politics but because he could play golf.

Golfers, you have to know, have to be singled-minded human beings. Ask one of them what he thinks of Richard Nixon and chances are he will frown and say "Too much right hand" or "He's bringing his right shoulder through too fast." The golfer doesn't know his politics, just his handicap.

PRIOR TO CHARLIE, pro golfers had the effrontery to have a "Caucasians only" clause in their by-laws. It was the recreational arm of the Ku Klux Klan. Charlie came out of the darktown alleys of Carolina, packing for the rich folks, but practicing his own swing by moonlight. He "looped" for the hot-headed Clayton Heafner with whom he gypsied through the tournaments. He hustled the hoods of Philadelphia. Charlie putted for his supper. He played nickel-and-dime games with the same skill and enthusiasm as $10 Nassaus. Charlie learned how to save strokes around the green and around the first tee, too.

The singer, Billy Eckstine, got him out of nickel cigars and nickel putting contests and together they began to apply the abolitionist movement to golf. The first breakthroughs were — and, I have to think, were intended to be — token. Where they were back to a wall, golf tournaments would let Negroes in — and then sit back and watch them shoot 80. "See? It's not their color, it's their score," they would contend.

Charlie is the only Negro to have won a tournament. He made the field —and the cut — in five National Opens. He has been in the top 60 money winners every year since they let him in — 1961.

They kicked his ball out of bounds on some Southern tourneys, but Charlie held his temper. No Uncle Tom, neither is Charlie a minstrel Negro. He's as dour as an undertaker. He doesn't like his back slapped any better than his face. Charlie is his own man, the face around the cigar frequently is scowling. He doesn't like anybody standing in his line — on or off the course. Getting a weekly threatening letter from some mental case in Florida, as Charlie does, hardly promotes a sunny outlook on one's fellow man anyway.

BUT CHARLIE, who shot an eight-under par 63 in the First round of the Los Angeles Open Thursday, has now played in every tournament in America save one — the Masters. This august Augusta tournament has a complicated formula for selecting its field. If you come from Formosa, it's easy to get in. If you come from the cotton patch in Carolina, it's impossible

The one avenue open to Charlie isn't really open at all. Past winners of this tournament can vote in a man who, either because he wasn't lucky enough to be born in Formosa or to have had one bad round in the Open, does not otherwise qualify.

In the past two years, Charlie has played this game about as well as anyone on the circuit, certainly as well as anyone in the Masters. The past Masters selected Mike Souchak and Tommy Jacobs.

PRETTY SOON, Charlie found people driving into him from the front tees. "Sure I was disappointed. Sure I know its the only tournament Negroes have never played in. Sure I know that most of those Masters winners come from Texas or the Deep South. But I find letters putting words in my mouth to get at Jones (Bobby) and the Masters. So I get this letter from Bobby Jones telling me to stop threatening him. I don't threaten any man. I GET threatened. But I felt that, when I finished 25th in the money list, or won that tournament, or took third in the Canadian Open, I was entitled to some consideration. I have never disgraced anybody — with a golf club or with a salad fork."

It is a feeling of this 22-handicapper that the Masters ought to send a car for Charlie and, considering he's the only guy in the field who couldn't get started on his golf career 'til he was 23 years old or his tournament career 'til he was almost 40 because it took democracy so long to catch on in this country, maybe they ought to give him two a side. If they do, I'll guarantee you Charlie will be voting on the invitee next year.

Redwood Upset In MCAL Cage Opener

The Marin County Athletic League basketball race got off to a blistering start last night when San Rafael just barely held off a desperate last-ditch Redwood rally to pull out a 56-55 upset that had started out as an astonishing breeze at San Rafael High School.

The game was tops on a four-tilt agenda last night, pitting dark horse San Rafael against the red-hot Giants, owner of the top non-league mark in pre-race games, at 10-3.

The Bulldogs gave Redwood notice early that it was not going to be a pleasant evening, throwing up a choking zone defense and darting for close-in baskets to run away to an amazing 34-17 half-time lead.

MAKE BID

But the best, or worst was yet to come. Both teams were hurt in the third period, the Bulldogs losing high-scoring guard Bruce Nave on fouls and the Giants losing rebounding mainstay Jim Peters on two technicals.

After being all but run out of the gym in the first half, the Giants made their bid behind Jerry Piro and first John Boro, then Skip Corsini.

Boro sparked a third-period rally that produced 20 points but left the Giants still 11 points away. Then Piro, driving underneath and Corsini, hitting from out, chopped away at the lead, cutting it on one point with two minutes left.

But it was as far as the Giants got, as they traded key buckets with the Bulldogs. San Rafael's Roger Thomas took the last pressure shot, an eight-footer that swished with eight seconds left for a 56-53 advantage.

FRUSTRATION

Roger Smith's final jumper came almost at the buzzer, a mute token of frustration.

It was a hot-and-cold night for Redwood coach Duncan McSwain, subbing for varsity coach Dick Hart. He saw hiis junior varsity win a hair-raiser, 53-51 then suffered through the

Terra Linda Breezes By San Marin

Terra Linda High School gave San Marin's basketball team its first taste of Marin County Athletic play last night and the medicine, not too surprisingly, was somewhat bitter.

The Trojans, playing everybody present, dropped San Marin for a 65-42 count, putting it away in the third quarter with a 25-point outburst after a reasonably close first half.

Gary Howard had no trouble keeping up his point output, leading all scorers with 18 points. The San Marin ace has a 20.9 season scoring average.

Tamalpais Opens Title Defense With Victory

Tamalpais High School's basketball team opened defense of its Marin County Athletic League title last night in convincing and steady fashion, tipping winless but game Marin Catholic, 67-52, at Kentfield.

The Indians got double-figure performances out of four players and plenty of free throws to salt away their league-opening win, only their third of the season.

The Wildcats were still down by only seven points with three minutes left, but steady free-throw shooting by the Indians put it away.

Ken Gommeringer with 16 points, Don Mackin, who scored 12 points in the final period, with 15 points, and Bill Secor and Ron Small with 12 each led the way.

Mike Murray had 14 points to top the Wildcats, now 0-11 on the season.

Sifford Keeps Los Angeles Golf Lead By Two Strokes

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Golfer Charlie Sifford fitted the description today of a famed line by the old pitching genius, Satchel Paige, who observed:

"Don't ever look back—they might be gainin' on you."

Sifford, at 46 a veteran of more than two decades of professional golf, led the way into the third round of the $100,000 Los Angeles Open Tournament.

"They" were indeed gaining on him—such formidable challengers as Billy Casper, Arnold Palmer and George Archer, not to mention a pack of youngsters who were just kids when Sifford started playing golf.

STILL A THREAT

Two shots back was Archer, with 69-67—136. Tied at 137 were Tommy Shaw, Mac McLendon and Bob Payne.

Billy Casper, the 1968 winner here as well as more money than any other pro last year, was in the 138 group with two straight 69's, and Palmer with 72-68—140 was still a threat.

Dave Hill, runner-up in the opening round with a 66, slipped to a 73 for 139, and youthful Grier Jones, the 23-year-old former national collegiate champion, fell back with a 74 for 143.

Palmer shot 34-34—68 over the Rancho Farm Golf Club's par 36-35—71. En route he blasted up five feet from the pin on the last hole and sank the putt for an eagle three.

EXASPERATED

Casper forged forward with a 32 on the first nine but came back in a disappointing 37. "I putted extremely well on the first nine but the back nine I'd rather forget," Casper said ruefully.

One of the most exasperated players Friday was Bob Murphy, Rookie of the year in 1968. He had six 3-putt greens. He managed a 72, however for 139.

Scores of 145 or under qualified for the final two rounds.

Novato Gets Scare, Tops Drake, 66-51

Novato High School's basketball team, one of the favorites for the Marin County Athletic League title, got a terrific early scare but recovered more than enough to hand Drake a 66-51 setback at Novato last night.

The Pirates jumped off to a 13-6 first-quarter lead and lead by 18-8 before the Hornets used their superior height to good effect in the second half.

The Hornets, led by Steve McNally, recovered for a 23-25 half-time deficit to blast the Pirates by a 26-10 count in the third period and came home free.

McNally poured in 24 points, tops for both teams, with help from Ed Herrnberger's 11 points.

Clark Jamison topped Drake's small Pirates with 12 points.

New Kink In Alameda Meet — Golf At Night

SUNOL, Calif. (UPI)—You could get as many opinions today as you like at the Alameda Open golf tournament about the merits of playing championship golf under the lights.

The "orphan" Alameda open, left to fend for itself after the PGA settled its differences with the touring pros, helped make golfing history the past two days — especially during yesterday's second—when some of the competition was played after dark and under artificial lighting.

Bill Ogden, the club pro at Tucson National and Chicago's Northshore, didn't have too much trouble under the lights, playing half of his second round after dark and posting an even par 72, which left him a stroke ahead of Dick Lotz today at the start of the third round.

"I was happily surprised you

Namath Vs. Colts In Super Windup

PROVEN ABILITY

When he resorts to the running game, Namath has speed and power in the person of fullback Matt Snell and halfback Emerson Boozer. Snell rushed for 747 yards on 179 attempts this season, with Boozer accounting for 441 on 143.

The Jets have proved they can score, probably even against the rugged defense of the Colts. Can they, however, hold the Baltimore offense directed by Morrall, the surprise package of the 1968 NFL season. The fate of the Jets would seem to rest in its defense.

Ewbank counts on middle linebacker Al Atkinson, right linebacker Larry Grantham, and a secondary of cornerbacks John Sample, Jim Richards and safeties Jim Hudson and Cornell Green. The New York front four of ends Jerry Philbin, and Verlon Briggs and tackles Paul Rochester and John Elliott, will have to keep the pressure on Morrall if the Jets hope to stop the Baltimore offense.

OVERNIGHT STAR

Morrall, the 34-year-old journeyman quarterback who has been with a number of NFL teams, was acquired by the Colts from the New York Giants for tight end Butch Wilson after the great John Unitas developed a sore arm. Almost overnight, the veteran of 13 NFL seasons became a star. He threw 26 touchdown passes in leading Baltimore to its first NFL title since 1959.

Morrall completed 182 of 316 passes for 2,909 yards, making the key plays which featured the fabulous Baltimore regular season and playoff triumphs. He was voted to the All-NFL team and selected player of the year. According to Don Schula, the Baltimore coach, his quarterback didn't have a bad day all season.

Morrall's chief targets are All-NFL tight end John Mackay, who caught 44 for 644 yards and five touchdowns; Willie Richardson with 37 for 662 yards and eight touchdowns, and Jimmy Orr with 29 for 743 and six touchdowns. Tom Matte led the Colt rushers with 662 yards on 183 carries, with help from Terry Cole and Jerry Hill.

In the secondary, the Colts had the second best pass interception defense in the NFL with 29. Bobby Boyd and Lenny Lyles handle the corners, with Jerry Logan and Rick Volk at safeties. The tough linebacking corps boasts Mike Curtis, Dennis Gaubata and Don Shinnick.

From a health standpoint, the Jets have Maynard nursing a muscle pull, while the Colts have Bubba Smith still testing an ankle injured against Cleveland in the NFL title game, and Lyles with a sore throat. All, however, are expected to be ready Sunday.

could play after dark," said Ogden, who bagged a two-under par 34 during the daylight portion of his second round and a two-over-par 38 during the part played under the lights. "If I had my choice I'd rather played in the daylight but I can see where one day they might play a whole tournament at night. It could be a great experience."

Lotz, who also played half of his second round after dark when officials had to hold up play at the start for 2½ hours because of frozen greens, agreed conditions weren't too bad.

"The main difference between daytime and nighttime golf is mental," said Lotz, who had a second round 71, which put him at 143. "You have to make the adjustment in your mind or you are dead."

LUNN HAS 69

Bobby Lunn and Dave Ragan were among half the field who played their entire round in daylight. Lunn had a second round 69—best thus far over the Sunol Valley's Palm course—and Ragan a 70. That left them at 144 and 145, respectively.

Bill Tindall, former University of Washington star, played his last four holes under the lights and came home with a 71 that put him in a tie with Lunn.

"The big difference of playing under the lights," said Tindall, "is vertical perception. It's hard to see where the ball is lying."

Former amateur champion Deane Beman, who had a second round 77 after an opening 74 was outspokenly critical of the PGA for allowing the tournament play to continue after dark.

BLATANTLY UNFAIR

"It is blatantly unfair to have to play under the lights since everyone didn't have the same playing conditions," said Beman. "What a man shot had nothing to do with it. I say if the man played the round in daylight he would have done better."

Beman pointed to the fact that many tournaments are held up because of weather and so, too, should have the Alameda.

"Frozen greens are the same as a sudden thunderstorm," he said. "It would have been better to stop play when it got dark and played 36 holes the next day. Playing under such conditions (lights) makes a circus of the game. I like golf too much to want to spend my time making a sideshow out of it."

Beman was tied with eight others at 151, which is seven over par and nine strokes behind Ogden. Rich Lichardus was all alone in fourth place at 147 while Jerry Abbott, Bob Erickson, Bobby Brue, John Jacobs and Butch Bair were tied at 148. The 149 group was made up of six players and nine others, including co-first round leader Rich Martinez, were tied at 150.

It took a 155 or better to qualify for the final two rounds and exactly 70 players made it, including every regular number of the tour here.

Baseball Chiefs Call Meeting To Try Again

NEW YORK (AP)—Organized baseball will try again to select a commissioner to replace William D. Oeckert when the two big leagues meet jointly in Bal Harbour just outside Miami Beach, Fla., on Tuesday, Feb. 4.

The Florida meeting was called by the Executive Council headed by Walter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Gabe Paul of the Cleveland Indians.

Three baseball men are in the forefront of speculation over the job. They are John McHale of the new Montreal club-although he has said he intended to stay in Montreal-as well as Lee MacPhail, general manager of the New York Yankees, and Charles (Chub) Feeney, general manager of the San Francisco Giants.

Other prominent men mentioned for the post include Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio, Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Vince Lombardi of football fame.

Casey Undergoes Surgery For Ulcer

Doctors said the former manager of the New York Yankees and Mets bowlegged victim came through the operation satisfactorily. However, he was placed on the critical list because of his age.

Rozelle Draws Grid Future

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Pete Rozelle, commissioner of pro football, has taken a long look at his crystal ball and come up with ideas of what might be expected from professional football in the next few years.

The nattily-attired 42-year-old commissioner, fielding questions like an all-star, tossed many proposals into the hopper yesterday at a news conference.

"We are in effect merged now," he said of the National and American League. "All that remains is a new schedule alignment which will take place in 1970. All of the legal papers have been signed. We are working under one constitution and one commissioner from the same office."

"Within 10 years, maybe five, all pro football fields will have artificial playing surfaces," he said. "In cities where our clubs occupy baseball stadiums it will be done in cooperation with baseball clubs. Medical research has indicated that synthetic turf lowers the rate of key injuries such as damaged knees."

There also is a possibility of pro football telecasts on Monday nights, either by one of the established networks or on a separate sports network.

"It all depends on whether any of the three major networks (CBS, NBC, ABC) are interested," he said, adding that the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company, who currently televise all games, have the right of first refusal on such a program.

The commissioner said he believes pro football is not overexposed yet but said he would like to lessen the Sunday load with televised games on Monday nights. He explained that his reasoning was that there are more sets in operation Monday nights.

"Monday night telecasts would tend to create a bigger market, especially among people who now are not pro football minded."

On the subject of realignment of the teams in 1970, Rozelle said there are two schools of thoughts and they would be presented to the owners at the march meeting tn Palm Springs, Calif.

"There are those who want to have a complete mixture of the teams with new division and conferences," he said.

"Then there are those who want to maintain the present structure, pointing out that current strong rivalries should be maintained. They would have an all-star game between the two leagues and interleague preseason games to create interest."

As for the Playoff Bowl, which has matched the runners-up in the two conferences, Rozelle said he hoped to retain it in 1969, with the Orange Bowl in Miami as the site. Dallas defeated Minnesota 17-13 before a crowd held to about 22,000 by rain in the last game.

Money from the Playoff Bowl goes into the players pension fund. Each member of the Dallas Cowboys received $1,200 and the losers $500 per man.

Rozelle pointed out, however, that the Playoff Bowl, as it is now set up, was not in his future plans.

"I would like to find a format to make the game more meaningful," he said, "In fact, I feel all post season games should be meaningful."

Tars, Alumni In Basketball Deadlock, 51-51

Tom Seidenberg hit on a free throw with six seconds on the clock to give the College of Marin varsity basketball squad a 51-51 tie with an Alumni team of past Tar headliners in Kentfield last night.

A tie in basketball? Yep.

Since the alums had played an intrasquad game (two 12-minute quarters) before the clash, it was decided to leave the score tied and not play an overtime period.

The Alumni, led by 6-7 Jim Halm, star of the '66 Golden Valley Conference champions and now the Tars' frosh coach, ran up a 23-18 lead after the first quarter, only to have the current Mariners come back to lead with a minute left on a bucket by Seidenberg, 50-49.

Seidenberg had 18 points to lead the scoring for both clubs while Halm and the Varsity's Pat Schafer had 12 apiece, with Jay Johnson hitting for 10.

In the all-alumni preliminary, the players of the '60's beat those of the '50's convincingly, 59-47.

In the evening's first offering, the Tar junior varsity dropped to .500 on the year (5-5) by losing the Mare Island Marines 73-60. Gary Hanson had 18, Art Goepp 16 and Bill Hoge 12 for the jayvees.

Random New Year Yield From Desk's Pigeon Holes

Here's one from the Licensed Beveraged Industries Association. It says, "Nearly 90 per cent of the U.S. population now live in areas of legal liquor sales." That has to mean that more than 10 per cent of the U.S. population lives in areas where sale of liquor is still unlawful.

"Newspapers are not monopolies, but face ever-increasing competition from diversfied sources," says the Newspaper Information Committee. You can say that again, especially in Marin where the air waves were never more burdened with radio and TV commercials, the mail was never more bulging with advertising materials, even the telephone book yellow pages take more and more of the advertising dollar, leaving ever less for newspapers. In spite of the ever-increasing competition for the advertising dollar, the I-J still seems to do all right most of the time.

HERE'S "STATE COLLEGES and the Youth Revolution," a 24-page opus prepared by State College Trustee Louis Heilbron for presentation to the California Press Association last month. "The hard-core disrupters at San Francisco State," he declared, "number from 70 to 100 students and there is a marginal group of from 300 to 500 disrupters who can be stimulated to action. Thus, the hard-core disrupters constitute about one-half per cent of the student population and their activist supporters less than five per cent. But, such a number, when even loosely organized, cause a great deal of difficulty and can gather a larger following by expoiting a carefully selected issue." Amen.

Nixon Inaugural Ball invitations carry the notation that "this invitation entitles the recipient to subscriptions for two persons at $35 per person." Also, "Boxes accommodating eight persons are available at $1,000 per box." Long live cloth-coat Republicanism!

Invitations to the Spiro Agnew reception require only $10 per head.

The 1969 Inaugural Committee reports all $10 tickets for the "All-American Gala" are sold out, but you can still get in, on invitation, "on a first come first serve basis," for from $25 to $100 per person.

RANDOM NOTES ON the Generation Gap: How do you communicate with someone who has never gone hungry, worked for $1 per day, worked shoulder-to-shoulder with a guy so poor his wife made his shirts from old flower sacks, helped cover up for an aged and infirm man on a 50 cent per hour job with no other possible source of support for himself and his equally aged and infirm wife?

This note is from the California State Automobile Association: "Since 1922, when the AAA School Safety Patrol was initiated, the traffic death rate of children from age 5 to 14 has been cut in half, while the death rate for all other age groups has nearly doubled." Those youngsters directing traffic at the school crossing aren't just playing at what they are doing; they are really saving lives.

Here's an excerpt from Senator Kuchel's farewell statement to his colleagues with whom he served 16 years. "Some of the votes I have cast I know have been very costly to me politically. I think, however, if there is one measure of satisfaction in the life of a legislator, it comes at the time he tallies the votes which he believed in his own mind were right, just and appropriate, even if he knew that the balance of public opinion was against him, and, sometimes, violently against him." We cry for politicians who will stand up for what they believe is right, who will be truly independent. When a rare one comes along, we vote him out of office.

Remember the Literary Digest poll? In this pigeon hole are facsimile copies of the Literary Digest's report of its fateful 1936 election polling. Among the most curious items is this gem—uttered by Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley: "The Literary Digest poll is an achievement of no little magnitude. It is a poll fairly and correctly conducted." Farley was mostly correct; but the poll couldn't have been more wrong.

THE TAM HIGH "District Doings" newspaper for faculty and staff reports a note of protest from Europe. It comes from John George, former Tam teacher and administrator, now retired and fresh from a tour of Europe's great art museums. "I am sending a hot letter of protest to North Central High in Spokane asking why they did not make art appreciation compulsory back in 1922." It's a good bet that the answer, if he gets one at all, will claim art appreciation in 1922 at Spokane was "irrelevant" and "deemed unlikely to contribute to the enrichment of the curriculum." It may even be that state support funds were not available. He should get the class of '22 together for a demonstration.

With riots much in the news, a note on Pope Gregory's calendar troubles seems of more than passing interest. By Gregory's time, Caesar's solar calendar was 11 days out. Gregory, 400 years ago, determined that an 11-day adjustment was needed. He decreed, therefore, Oct. 4 should be followed by Oct. 15. An uproar followed. People claimed they were losing 11 days out of their lives. Landlords lost rent money, workmen lost 11 days' pay, money lenders lost 11 days' interest. Finally, there were riots in many cities. Today, Gregory is most often recalled as the author of calendar reform, unpopular though it may have been at the time. Does this tell us anything about how Dr. Hayakawa may be remembered?

Bouquet And Brickbat

BOUQUETS to new County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni for suggesting, and to his fellow supervisors for endorsing, legislation to do away with June elections of county officials and to shorten the interim between primary and final elections.

BRICKBATS to the American Federation of Teachers at San Francisco State College for, among other things, ignoring a court injunction against their strike and picketing. Weren't these same teachers berating southern governors and white citizens councils a few years ago for ignoring court orders to integrate schools?

AFT Shows Ethics Of Street Fighter

Every street fighter, every hoodlum knows that the best way to finish off a man is to kick him when he is down. Never mind that it is a contemptuous, despicable act. It is effective.

San Francisco State has been in turmoil for weeks. Its existence as a school may be coming to an end. The education of many of its 18,000 students may be coming to an end. By choosing this particular time to call a strike the AFT might very well take credit for all this. They might very well finish off San Francisco State. They are at least getting in one brutal kick.

The AFT has grievances. Everyone has grievances. The AFT is composed of educated, intelligent people, and educated intelligent people attempt to settle their differences in a calm, reasonable atmosphere. But the atmosphere at State at this time is not calm. It is not reasonable. Blood pressures are high. Still, the AFT called a strike.

A street fighter, a hoodlum has no concern, no decency. He looks only for the most propitious time to strike a low blow. That is being street wise.

The AFT has struck a low blow. It seems the AFT is street wise. But is this a quality people admire in those who teach our youth?

Bigotry Disregards Natural Law

I have just finished reading the article in the I-J about the bigotry against black educator Lanny Berry (Jan. 8). I'm glad that the article was put on the front page. It might wake up some people to the fact that there is prejudice, even in Marin County.

It makes me furious every time I read or hear about something of this sort. These whites who are prejudiced are just a little "too big for their britches." How can it be gotten across to them that "all men are created equal"?

Berry said that "it seems there is no law against the white man harassing me." Well, there is a law, a natural law; it's just that not enough people acknowledge it.

Also, I wonder how many have heard of "love thy neighbor"?

LINES ON LIVING

The Time Of Our Life Should Not Be Its Ruler

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

With the passage of every year, we become ever more mindful of the fleeting quality of time and ponder anew the meaning of our life on earth.

We can become saddened by the resistless onrushing waves of time and we can feel like atomic dust in an eternity of time and space. But we need not measure our significance and value in terms of last year's discarded calendar, or in the unstoppable ticking away of the clock, or in the many sunsets that lengthen our shadows. For the measure of our time on earth is best recorded in the marks we leave in memory and conscience, in the heart throb of feeling and in the glow of promise that is evoked by the sunrises that lie ahead of us. We shall not fret, remembering the wise man's adage that those who make the worst use of their time complain most of its shortness.

TIME IS NOT to be feared and regimented, but to be fully understood and experienced. It is a gift flowing from the liberal hand of the Eternal's inexhaustible stream of eternity and it is to be embraced with cheer and savored with sensitivity. We cannot mutilate it and compress it "without injuring eternity," if we are to live all the time of our life, never to feel shame or regret.

Time cannot be rushed, expanded or chopped up in discontinuity. Those who try to manage time with the efficiency of a bookkeeping operation will soon find that the time they are struggling to manipulate is being more endured than enjoyed, more misspent than ennobled.

American efficiency and management have probably made us the most time-conscious society. We plan our time as we manage our assembly lines. We crowd our calendar with appointments and dates not only in the course of a day's work, but also in anticipating our vacation and leisure. We often energize, overwork and exert ourselves unnecessarily to burdensome proportions. Overtime has become synonymous with our way of life and our mode of work. Our time schedule can be very basic and productive, but not always very meaningful. Put together the most beautiful notes of a song and take the "rest times" out of the score, and you'll produce an unrhythmic jingle-jumble of sounds.

MODERN TECHNOLOGY and medical science have accomplished the miracle of saving life's time and prolonging man's pilgrimage on earth. We have added more years to our life, but have we also added more life to our years? We have raised our standard of living, but have we also raised our standard of life? Have we mastered the art of using our time wisely to enable us to derive more meaning from every hour of life, or is boredom killing many of us?

The theme of modern life, much like the shock waves of contemporary beat-beat music, is too overpowering in sound and fury. The "rests" are conspicuously absent and frenetically out of joint with time; the tempo and timing is too dehumanizing, too demoralizing, too scandalizing.

We are more often occupied with the timely and practical at the expense of the timeless and eternal. We roam in the outer spaces of physical nature, but fail to enter the inner spaces of human nature. We spend too much time with the business of living and too little time on the business of life. Human experience requires moments of quietude when we are hushed to the secret sounds of deepening meaning and mystifying strength.

WE CAN TRULY mark time by taking time out to celebrate life, to engage in the contemplative insights of human encounter by watching the sky, by observing the stars, by admiring a sunrise, by viewing a sunset, by dreaming and by feeling, by relating and reaching out from the innermost alum of self to the outermost realm of the infinite. We need time not only to be, but also to become, not only for the length of days but also for the fullness of life, not only for ripeness of age but also for maturity of experience. For we can be rich in years and poor in time and experience, if we waste the opportunities for life that each day offers us.

Nixon's Appointments Prove He'll Hew To The Hard Line

(Marquis Childs is on vacation.)

WASHINGTON — For those who had managed against all the evidence to persuade themselves that Richard Nixon would somehow simply liquidate the American commitment to Vietnam, now daily dies the dream.

Every move by the President-elect in his evolving mosaic of policy operations in Southeast Asia is making it plain beyond doubt that he willingly inherits not merely the Johnson Administration's resolution but also the hard core of the Johnson operatives. Whether right or wrong in their ultimate judgment — and this only history can at length answer — these men have stood with memorable courage against any and all proposals to give up the game in Vietnam under one or another rhetorical device meaning "surrender" while proclaiming only "peace."

More specifically, what Nixon has done is to give profound reassurance to our South Vietnamese allies that rational hard-liners are here to stay in the American government. Indeed, they will, if anything, be more influential than before.

NIXON HAS ASKED Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, an indestructible old yankee friend of the Vietnamese, to stay on in South Vietnam; and this has been deeply welcomed in Saigon.

He has requested the veteran Henry Cabot Lodge to take over as head of our mission negotiating in Paris with the North Vietnamese Communists. And this is even more significent. For Lodge is the dean of all our men in Saigon He had before Bunker's time served both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson there, and no man in the world has at once a greater respect from our friends and a fuller knowledge of our adversaries. When Lodge takes over from Averill Harriman in Paris, it will be a case of a tough successor relieving a man who was himself no stick of sugar candy.

Beyond all this are two other Nixon appointments whose relevance to Vietnam could not be higher. These are Alexis Johnson, an ald career man who is to be third man in the State Department and in practice probably its highest actually operational figure, and Stanley Resor, who has agreed to go on as secretary of the Army. Too, it is understood that another of the Johnson strong-men on Vietnam, Asst. Sec. of State William Bundy, has been asked to linger at least a while. Whether he does or not, his counsel will be available.

NOW, WHEN ALL this is put together, it is clear that Nixon has sent to Hanoi the strongest signal of which he is capable that he has not become President of the United States in order to find some merely clever way out of our burdens in Vietnam. This does not mean that the new administration intends to go about madly flexing its muscles. It does mean that this new administration has no slightest purpose to retreat from it all under some fog of words.

To say that this is hardly surprising is — well, hardly surprising. Nixon's whole career has rested upon containment of Communist expansionism, and in his campaign he said he would never waver from that line.

THIS, THEN, is precisely what Nixon and Nixon's establishment propose to make him see; this is the whole meaning of his selections of personnel.

ART BUCHWALD

When The Teams Are Changing, Be Careful At Whom You Smile

WASHINGTON — Power, the opiate of the people who live in Washington, is starting to slip through the hands of the old administration and is being grabbed by the new. There are signs of the switch taking place every day. For example, Tuesday I was at the Sans Souci restaurant, the place where the White House power structure usually has lunch.

One of President Johnson's aides came in and was escorted to his usual table. He sat there for two hours, alone. The person he was supposed to have lunch with never showed up.

The man I was eating with, who has lived through several administration changeovers in Washington, shook his head sadly and said. "The poor S.O.B. They're trying to tell him something."

"IS THAT HOW they usually do it?" I asked.

"Sometimes they cancel his table before he arrives. That way nobody knows he was stood up for lunch. This way, everybody knows. It will be all over town in an hour."

"But suppose the person who was supposed to have lunch with him just couldn't make it?"

"You don't understand. If you've got the power, the person makes it. Somebody else gets stood up. But if you don't have the power any more, then you get stood up. He's looking over here and smiling at us. Whatever you do, don't smile back."

"BUT HE'S MY FRIEND," I protested. "If he smiles at me, I'll have to smile back."

"He doesn't want you just to smile back. He wants you to invite him to sit with us so it doesn't look as if he's been stood up. We can't afford that."

"Why not?" I asked.

"You don't know anything about this town, do you? Suppose word got out that we had lunch with him —I mean just two weeks before the inauguration."

"WELL, HECK, he's still a decent guy, even if he is on his way out."

"That's not the point, stupid," my friend said. "We have to deal with the new guys over at the White House, and if they think we have any ties with the old guys they won't trust us. If you still want to have something to do with that loser, meet him at a coffee shop, but don't get me involved. I've got my job to think of."

"Are you trying to tell me that the new guys wouldn't trust us if we bought an old administration guy a cup of coffee?"

"I'm trying to tell you that everyone in this restaurant is aware of what is going on. Sure, it would be a nice, brave, gutty thing to wave and say, 'Come on over for a brandy.' And there are probably a few people in the restaurant who would admire us for it. But most of the people in this restaurant feel exactly as I do. The guy came in here alone. Let him leave along."

"IT SEEMS so cruel."

"Government is cruel," my friend said. "But he'll be all right. He'll probably get $100,000 a year when he gets out of the White House, not to mention an advance of half a million dollars on a book, plus lecture fees. He's not going to starve to death."

"But the thought of nobody ever eating lunch with him . . . " I said.

"Couldn't I just go over to his table and say goodbye?" I asked.

"I wouldn't chance it. Herb Klein just came in." My friend waved wildly at Klein, Richard Nixon's new communications chief. "Hiya, Herb, baby. How's the old boy?" My friend muttered to me, "Wave at him. Maybe he'll stop by the table for a minute. It won't hurt us if he does."

In the excitement, my friend from the White House got up from the table and left the restaurant. No one else in the Sans Souci noticed he was gone.

The Country Parson

"I've seen folks laugh when they were full of sorrow — and a little of the pain seemed to escape with the laughter."

Britisher Claims Regional Bay Government Workable

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — A British government expert says that regional government is working well in London and can work in the Bay Area.

Professor W. A. Robson of the University of London's School of Economics and Political Science predicted that regional government would see "the necessary regional job being handled with tremendously increased efficiency with advantages to all the communities in the Bay Area."

Robson, who helped form the Greater London Council, which governs more than 8,000,000 people, noted that its formation was opposed by every one of the 110 local governments in the London area.

Today, after about five years of operation, the council is working smoothly and the opposition is negligible, he said.

Robson, interviewed at San Francisco International Airport while en route to Japan, faulted the Joint Committee on Bay Area Regional Organization's proposal that regional government be formed only after a vote of the people living in the Bay Area. "I know of no regional government anywhere in the world that has not been created by a higher authority."

The Kent Family And Marin

They've Played Prominent Part In County's History

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

For nearly a century, Kent has been a prominent name in Marin County affairs.

Communities, a school, streets and a lake all bear the family name as testimony to their importance in the county's history.

Indeed, the county's world-famous national monument, Muir Woods, would have borne the name Kent had it not been for the modesty and humility of its donor, a public spirited member of the family.

THE KENT association with Marin County history had its beginning in 1871 when Albert Emmett Kent, with his wife, the former Adaline Dutton, and their son William came West to live.

Albert Emmett Kent, in poor health, had come to California first for a long camping stay in the healing airs of the California mountains. He had lived for a time in a ranch house in the Chileno Valley in North Marin. But it was his intention to return ultimately to the East where he had extensive agricultural and business interests, particularly in Chicago.

Then he heard about the terrible fire that had wiped out much of Chicago.

He wired his business associates in Chicago: "Go right on . . . as if nothing has happened."

BUT AT THE same time he also wired his wife and son telling them to join him in the Far West for a new start in life.

Only a week after the Chicago disaster, Mrs. Kent and William started west. Later William Kent was to recall those seven days and nights of travel across plains and mountains, with buffalo, deer, antelope, wolves and coyotes a common sight.

The mother and son were accompanied by Daniel Brown, a Negro who had been their coachman in Chicago and who now, in California, became the man-of-all-work upon whom the family relied heavily.

THE CHILENO Valley farmhouse did not prove comfortable, so that in the following spring the Kents moved to San Rafael.

But driving through the Ross Valley, Mrs. Kent saw a spot she described to her husband as "a paradise." He bought the property. And there they built their permanent home and took roots in Marin.

Albert Emmett Kent had been born in Suffield, Conn. His father, Albert Kent, had a tobacco plantation and traded with the Indians.

AS THE OLDEST son, A. E. Kent was given a choice between inheriting the family property, or going to college. He chose college.

He had attended the Connecticut Literary Institute in Suffield, and now he joined the class of 1853 at Yale University.

There he took up the study of languages, mastering French and Spanish. He proved especially adept, too, in debates, delighted in reciting classic poems, and read extensively from the works of English scientists.

HE BELIED the frailty of his appearance with his vigor, and even crewed for Yale in its traditional rowing race against arch-rival Harvard.

On graduation, the young man decided to take up the practice of law and studied in the office of a prominent attorney in Binghamton, N.Y. He was extremely poor, but upon being admitted to the bar spent all his money on a dress suit for the occasion.

Two years after graduation, he moved to Chicago to get his professional start. For teaching French to some people who ran a boarding house there he was given his meals. He slept on a lounge in his law office.

THE YOUNG man decided to establish a commission business. Soon he had a partner, Sidney Kent, his brother, who had been working in a wholesale store in Chicago. The firm name was A. E. Kent and Co. Corn and grain were shipped on commission, and the firm also handled furs and buffalo hides.

It was a fellow New Englander, John B. Lyon, a big merchant and speculator in Chicago, who suggested an entirely new field to young Albert. During a visit he pointed out to Kent a truck loaded with dressed, frozen hogs, that had been killed by the farmers and had been hauled to Chicago for marketing. Lyon said there was big money in butchering and packing hogs. Thus began the packing firm of A. E. Kent and Co.

The company was a success and became the largest packing house in Chicago. But the young businessman found a much prettier Chicago attraction in Adaline Dutton.

THE DAUGHTER of Alvah Dutton and Elizabeth Holt, Adaline had five sisters. The family had lived in a rural log cabin. Then when his daughters were older, the father decided to move to Springville, Erie County, N.Y., where there was an academy. He sold his farm and the family moved into a brick house which he built in Springville. When Adaline was 14, her mother died.

Adaline was a good student who graduated with honors from the academy and taught school in Springville.

When her father married again, Adaline resented her stepmother and the ties between the sisters were intensified. In 1855, Adaline's older sister, Melissa, married Augustus Parsons and went to live in Chicago, where her husband was in temporary partnership with Albert Emmett Kent. Adaline visited her sister in Chicago and there she met young Kent.

It was not until 1857 that they became engaged and Adaline returned to Springville to prepare her trousseau. They were married in Springville and returned to Chicago to live.

ALBERT, THEIR first child, died when he was 2. A daughter, Mary, the second child, was an invalid. Although she lived to be 29, she spent many of those years under the care of a physician in Philadelphia. William was the youngest child.

In 1868, A. E. Kent traveled to Europe for his health and later sent for his family to join him. They were some time in France and Geneva. On their return to Chicago, the senior Kent's health was found not bettered, so with T. H. Richardson, superintendent of the packing business, he came to California for the decisive camping trip.

William Kent described his father as rather stern but said he gave much time to his son's early education, teaching him Latin and French and correcting his English.

ALTHOUGH A. E. Kent was opposed to gambling or betting, he considered speculation an exercise in judgment. The son said he dealt in provisions, wheat, corn, cotton and coffee, and anything that offered a chance for profit. He had faith in his country's potential and bought large tracts of land.

A. E. Kent took his brothers, cousins and a few friends into the partnership. He had large ranches in Nebraska and Nevada and also bought much property in Chicago. Well before the Civil War, he opposed slavery and, according to his son, was involved in the "underground railroad" which helped Negroes escape through Illinois into Canada.

After the Kent residence was built in what is now Marin's Kent Woodlands, the senior Kent and his wife gave much attention to the "home place." About 20 acres were cultivated. Orchards and vineyards were planted as were exotic trees and shrubs.

Mrs. William Kent tells how her mother-in-law liked to drive to San Rafael for the mail and to shop. The "carriage horses," manes and tails brushed into glossy waves and hooves painted, were driven by the coachman. The carriage resembled a Victoria, with a top that could be lowered. This elegant vehicle was not taken out for mere errands.

THE SENIOR Mrs. Kent rode in a high "spring wagon" to do the errands, carrying a parasol to protect herself from the sun or an umbrella against the rain. Although she must have missed the busy life of Chicago and her friends and relatives in the East, she found new interests in Marin.

She had her problems, too. Her husband, now an invalid, had a nervous dread of meeting people.

But she had a busy life. Gradually the family circle increased. Two of Mrs. Kent's nieces, Mary Stearns and Elizabeth Parsons, came to live with the Kents after their mothers died, and William Savage, a nephew of the senior Kent, had his place in the household.

THE HOUSEHOLD ran smoothly under Mrs. Kent's direction. A Chinese cook presided over the kitchen, a housemaid had several assistants, gardeners took charge of the grounds and the coachman supervised the stable, where there were the "carriage" and riding horses plus William's pony, which he cared for himself. The boy had other regular chores such as bringing in wood.

Mrs. Kent recognized when her husband was bored by "country" living. She frequently addressed him by his second name and would say: "Emmett, we are going East," and would add "tomorrow."

If he demurred, she would say firmly: "I have made reservations."

ARRANGEMENTS would be made to see that everything at home ran smoothly in their absence. Then the senior Kents would make their journey.

The early years at Kentfield, called Tamalpais when the trains came through in 1875, were happy ones for the young son. On his pony he would gallop from his home over Wolfe's Grade to a private school, Miss Wilson's, on Fifth in San Rafael. He was like other young lads who delighted in throwing what was at hand, mudballs and stones, and was expert in the use of sling shots, pea shooters, bows and arrows and boomerangs, usually making them.

He would get into fights with other boys, but was not strong enough to win, as he was underweight.

BEFORE HE was allowed to own a gun, he loaded cartridges for his father. When he was 11 he was given a gun and his father taught him how to shoot. The boy became an expert marksman and hunter. The hills were full of game.

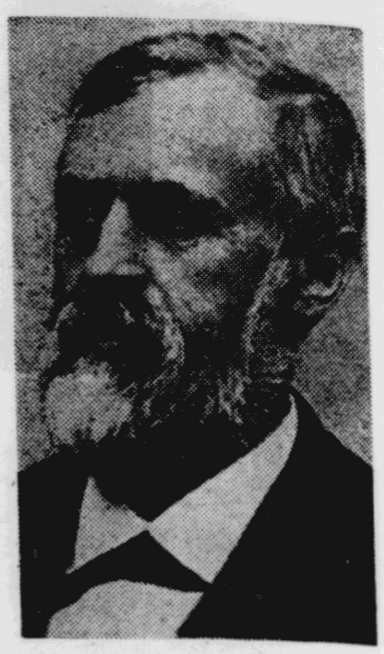
However, there were the long evenings, in which he read many of the classics and enjoyed The Youth's Companion.

William learned the Morse Code and sent and received business messages for his father, who had a private wire installed in the house that connected with the Western Union office in San Rafael. From there the messages were sent on to the San Francisco office and to the Chicago and New York stock exchanges.

AFTER A FEW years at Miss Wilson's, William attended the public school at Ross Landing for a short time. He was also taught at a private school by an Episcopalian minister.

Then there was an unhappy period when the boy was sent to boarding school, or seminary, in San Francisco. His classmates were a delinquent lot, "packed guns," chewed, smoked and gambled. Their favorite sport was preying on the helpless Chinese laundrymen by breaking his windows and throwing mud on the clean clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent finally relented and employed a young Englishman, Octavius S. C. Bates, as William's tutor. The tutor was admired and loved by his "boys." He took them on vacation trips where they studied wild life.



IT WAS Albert Emmett Kent, above, who brought his family West in 1871 from Chicago and settled in Marin County, beginning an association that was to have a great significance in the county's history and growth.

FOR THREE years, Bates was the Kent tutor, sometimes living at the Kent house and sometimes in San Rafael, where, in 1882, he established the Selborne School for Boys. In England, Bates had had as his friend and backer the Earl of Selborne.

The tutor was a firm disciplinarian and extremely critical. Young William often showed his resentment and there were frequent clashes between teacher and pupil. Indeed, home life was not always pleasant with an irritable and nervous father and an invalid older sister. But the boy's mother had a strong and buoyant nature, and a never failing sense of humor. His tensions were also alleviated by long walks with his gun and dog through the foothills of Mount Tamalpais.

When their son was 17, William's parents decided he should have a more formal education. Albert E. Kent had been a pupil of Prof. Thomas A. Thacher, a graduate of Yale and a professor of Latin there, and the friendship had continued over the years. The senior Kents asked Professor Thacher to act as guardian and counselor for their son, which he agreed to.

YOUNG WILLIAM was enrolled in Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, Conn. The Hopkins School had a strict college preparatory course.

After a short time, a change was made in the educational plan to which Professor Thacher and William's parents agreed. The boy became the pupil of Walter R. Bridgman, a recent Yale graduate who helped the Kents' son bridge the educational gaps.

This meant long and hard study after school hours to make up in a year and a half the required work which ordinarily took three years in the regular school course.

BRIDGMAN WAS a splendid tutor and a good companion, and William became proficient in the Greek language and literature.

The boy had been staying at a freshman rooming house but his tutor and Professor Thacher did not approve. So at his second year at Hopkins, another shift was made and William became a member of the household of Professor and Mrs. Thacher.

At home were the Thachers' three boys and a girl: Sherman, a Yale senior; William, William Kent's classmate at Hopkins; George, 12, a grammar school student, and Elizabeth, 14. She was to become Mrs. William Kent.

THE OTHER Thacher sons, all Yale graduates, were frequent visitors.

Despite a rigid study schedule, William was active in sports. He played on the football and baseball teams and was manager of the baseball nine. He was a member of Pi Sigma Tau fraternity. He was also one of the editors of the school paper.

The young man was in the highest division on entering Yale in September of 1883.

At the beginning of his sophomore year at Yale, the student moved into a college dormitory. His dorm was heated entirely by wood fires. There were no bathrooms in the building and students had to go to the gym for hot and cold showers.

LIKE MANY other college men, William found himself short of money and he was irked when his father demanded an accounting of his expenditures. He was constantly overdrawing his account.

At Yale William Kent did not play on the baseball or football teams, but he was active otherwise and during vacations he went hunting and fishing. He belonged to several literary societies.

IN MUNICH he studied German. The Thacher brothers visited doctors, hospitals and labs.

In a letter to his mother and father, William Kent explained how he spent his money: dinner with good beer, 50 cents; German lesson (an hour), 50 cents; hotel room, 50 cents a day.

William particularly enjoyed the course in political economy at Yale. Then, from this stimulating life at college, the young man, at the age of 23, was catapulted into the hard, cold world of business. He went to Chicago to take charge of the family enterprises. They were so many and varied that young William had much difficulty in deciding what businesses were good and which should be liquidated.

people in Chicago. The Armours, Swifts and Cudahys had become leaders in the meat industry. Refrigerated cars carried meat on the transcontinental trains, and refrigerated lockers on the steamships took beef to foreign countries.

A. E. Kent wanted his son to do some speculating on his own by studying the market, then buying stocks and grain. The son was not interested in this phase of business but he was a keen judge of land value.

He found most of the earlier Kent investments in Chicago real estate satisfactory. But the ranch property, for the most part run by "remote control," was another matter. He went to all of the ranches, and though he appeared to be hunting prairie chickens and sage hens, he was actually studying the land, itself, with its resources of water, timber and minerals, plus grain and livestock.

THE YOUNG businessman was also watching the managers and it was his unpleasant duty to give a few "walking papers."

He made several large investments on his own, sometimes combining business with his hunting and camping trips. While in Louisiana bayous, he observed the wonderful cypress trees growing in the water. He realized that the trees were rot-resistant and bought a large tract of this timber.

Like his father, the young man also took friends into partnership on his deals. One of these transactions was made in North Carolina where he purchased a large tract of land because it had a mild climate and had direct rail transportation to New York.

MOST OF his deals met with his father's approval, but this was not so when he decided to subdivide a portion of the Chicago property. His father was furious and tried to break off the arrangements. But, the father had to admit later, the subdivision was a success.

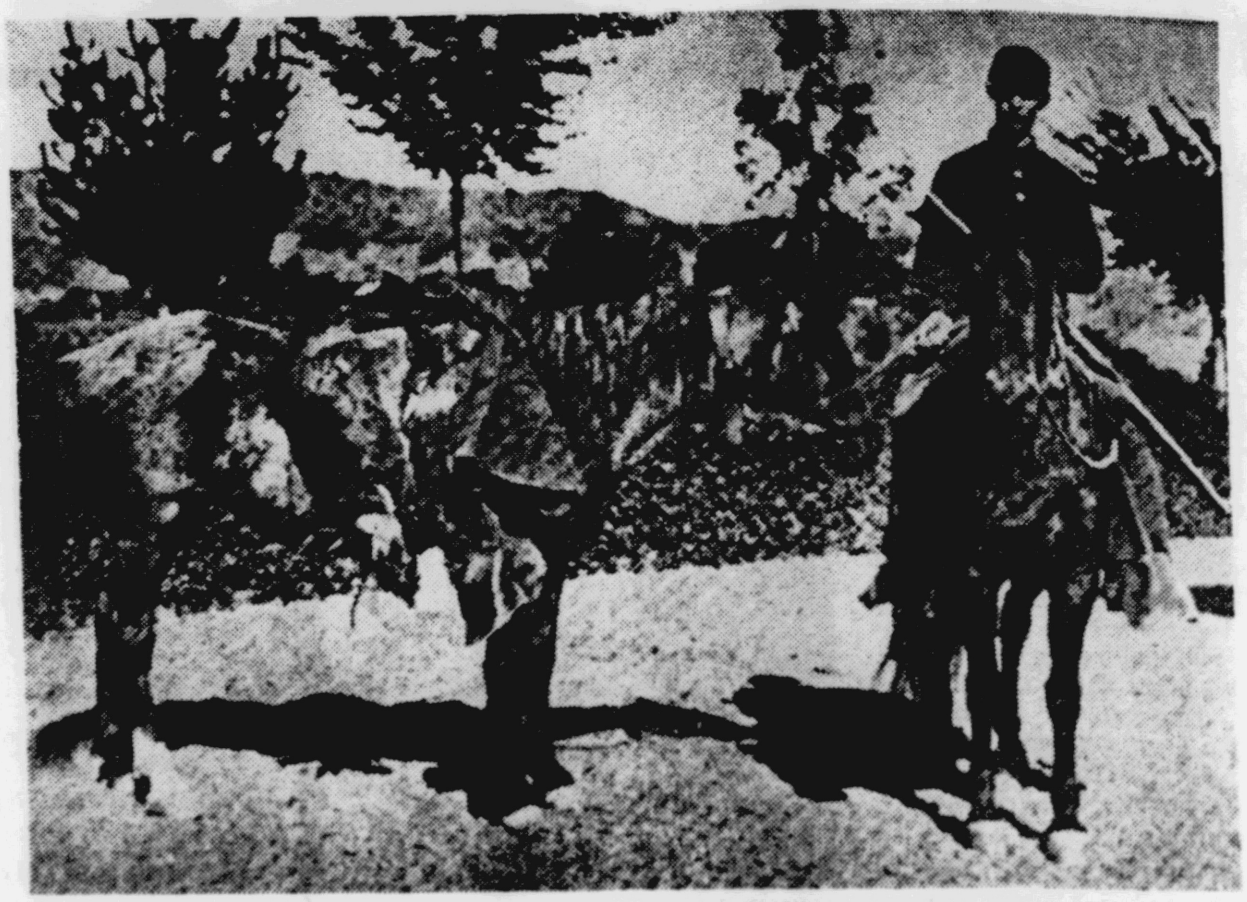
THE KENT STORY

A Major Force In Marin's Growth



AS A YOUTH, William Kent loved to roam the countryside on horseback and with gun. This faded photograph shows him as a 16-year-old, on his pony and with packhorse, returning from a successful hunt in the Marin hills.

All was not business for the busy young man. He kept in close touch with the Thacher family, and his special interest was Elizabeth, to whom he wrote many letters.

For his first two years in Chicago, William divided his time between the home of his aunt (Lucinda Dutton) and her husband, Judge McCoy, and that of his uncle, Sidney Kent. In the fall of 1889, William's mother came to Chicago to establish a home for him on the South Side.

For the wedding, guests arrived by four-horse stage from the nearest railroad station in the town of San Buenaventura (now Ventura). The wedding party assembled on the wide porch of the ranch house, and Dr. Jesse W. Hough, a Yale classmate of A. E. Kent, officiated at the ceremony.

William and his bride lived in an eight-room house on the South Side of Chicago. A. E. Kent was delighted when the couple's first child was born and the baby named for him. By mutual agreement of A. E. Kent and William, the firm name was now A. E. Kent & Son.

IN 1892, BEFORE their second child was born, William and Elizabeth moved to another house on the South Side. They were able to buy this property and an adjacent lot where a cow was pastured. The family traveled to the business and shopping district five miles away, in a horse-drawn phaeton.

As the family grew, more rooms were added to the house. But William Kent was impatient with city life. He liked to hunt, fish and camp. To be outdoors, he took up the game of golf. His wife said he was never a good player but it was an easily available form of exercise and he enjoyed his association with golf club members.

The role of landlord was an irksome one. In 1894, an article written by Florence Kelly, appeared in a Chicago newspaper attacking unsanitary conditions of some property in the Hull House district "owned by A. E. Kent & Son." The rapidly growing city had built up around the little house for which small rent was charged.

WILLIAM KENT was greatly disturbed and went to Hull House to talk with Jane Addams (famous social worker and Nobel Prize winner) and explained the situation. He said that improvements would mean the rents would have to be raised and the tenants would have no place to go. The outcome was that he turned the property over to Hull House supervisors. The houses were torn down, the grounds cleared and a public playground established.

This project was given financial support by the former owner. But he was disappointed the rental problem had not been solved.

On the lighter side, William Kent found pleasure in meeting young professional and business men at the University Club. Here city problems were discussed. William Kent had taken also on himself the duties of alderman.

Then, with a relative or pal, he would leave for one of the ranches or the wilderness, to camp, fish and hunt. He liked to do the cooking in camp, and would return to Chicago refreshed and relaxed.

In January of 1901 Albert E. Kent died, and William came to Kentfield temporarily to be with his grieving mother. Back in Chicago, his friends urged him to run for Congress from his Illinois district, but he decided against the campaign.

In the summer of 1903, William Kent came to Marin again to visit his mother. He decided a change of scene would be good for her, so he took her to Lake Tahoe. There he bought a large parcel of land on the lake shore and engaged an architect to build a house.

AT THAT TIME, Tahoe land was cheap, and William was quick to realize the potential.

In the spring of 1906, William Kent arrived yet again in California on what he thought was a short business trip. On April 18, 1906, San Francisco was devastated by the earthquake and fire. William Kent was with his mother during those terrible days, and his boundless energy was felt in the reconstruction period. He supplied food to the refugees and arranged for a supply of currency in small denominations.

In 1906, Roger, the seventh child in the William Kent family, was born. It was then decided that the family should move West permanently. Plans were made to enlarge the Kentfield residence. The following year, William and Elizabeth Kent with their children, Albert Emmett, Thomas Thacher, Elizabeth, William Jr., Adaline, Sherman and Roger, arrived in Kentfield to make their home.

BUSINESS interests in Chicago had been consolidated and now were under good supervision.

While William Kent missed the busy life and his friends in Chicago, he took an active part in western political life and in conservation of natural resources. He was greatly disturbed by the cutting down of the giant redwoods.

According to William Kent's own story of the saving Muir Woods, then known as Redwood Canyon, the property had been a part of the grant to Capt. William A. Richardson. Samuel Throckmorton had acquired most of the Richardson land, but the San Francisco Savings Union held a mortgage on the property and was forced to foreclose. Kent's friend, Sidney B. Cushing, and others urged him to buy Redwood Canyon. He bought the land for $45,000.

IN 1907 THE successors to the Tamalpais Land and Water Co., the North Coast Water Co., started condemnation proceedings to create a reservoir in Redwood Canyon that would have destroyed the largest part of the magnificent timber.

William Kent went to work immediately to cut red tape and succeeded in having Muir Woods declared a national monument. It was President Theodore Roosevelt, to whom the donor had sent photographs of the woods, who proclaimed the national monument on Jan. 9, 1908.

JOHN MUIR was a frequent guest at the Kent home as were other celebrities.

In 1920, Kent bought 70 acres more on the mountainside and added this tract to Muir Woods.

Then, as now, juveniles were a problem. Boys were vandalizing the railroad station at Kentfield as well as the postoffice. It was a difficult situation. William Kent, his wife and mother and their friends held long discussion on the matter.

As a result, Mrs. A. E. Kent gave 29 acres of land opposite the station for a civic and recreational center. She and her son built a commodious clubhouse there for community use.

TO MANAGE the project, the Marin Stadium Association was formed, and an executive committee of 50 was appointed. Represented were all the cities and towns in Southern and Central Marin.

The first annual entertainment was held on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, 1908. In the printed program was a statement by the committee that read: "Already Mrs. Kent and her son have engaged men and teams who are at work putting the tract into shape and it is expected to have a portion of the grounds ready this summer."

J. W. Dolliver, architect, outlined plans for the center. He said the structures would be built in the mission-style, the main one to be a meeting hall with stage and with removable sides to take advantage of the verandas in the summer time. There would also be gymnasiums, croquet grounds and playgrounds for the children, ball fields, running track, tennis courts, swimming tank and boating house.

"THE SYSTEM for supplying water is through the aid of a Dutch windmill which will add to the attractiveness of the grounds."

In the spring, the school children gathered for Maypole dances and on June 7, 1923, the Marin Journal reported: "Marin Rodeo draws 3,000 Sunday at Kentfield Stadium."

On Oct. 31, 1909, Tamalpais Centre Women's Club was dedicated with Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago as principal speaker. William Kent, speaking for his mother, said: "She resents the idea that her gift should be described as generous; rather it should be considered sensible. She believes it is putting land and capital to better and more productive use."

THE SENIOR Mrs. Kent also was much interested in the Presbyterian Orphanage and Farm in San Anselmo (later Sunny Hills). A Marin Journal issue in October of 1903 reported: "A garden fete for the benefit of Presbyterian Orphanage was held on the grounds of Mrs. A. E. Kent's residence in Kentfield." The annual event became the Grape Festival with grapes from the Kents' vineyards decorating the booths.

William Kent watched political trends closely. In Chicago, he had served as alderman to fight what he said was "the most disorderly and probably the most blatant corrupt assemblage that our country has ever produced."

A Municipal Voters League had been organized and William Kent was its president.

IT WAS NOT unusual for league members to be waylaid and beaten. As a result of one attack, the young reformer, Kent, offered a thousand dollar reward for evidence on the crime. He accomplished much during his terms as alderman. It was an education in the realities of political life.

The Marin Great Register of Voters in 1910 listed William Kent, 46, occupation, livestock, as a Republican, but he preferred to consider himself as an Independent or Progressive.

In January of 1910, A. J. Gregg of Mill Valley, also registered as a Republican, but who introduces himself as an "Independent in politics," wrote to Kent urging him to run for Congress "to serve not only this district but the Nation."

KENT REPLIED that he did not feel able to stand a strenuous campaign but added he would "take the honor if it were offered." He was now urged to enter the campaign by Jane Addams, Theodore Roosevelt, Gifford Pinchot, Jenkin Lloyd Jones and many others. He agreed and set forth as planks for his platform: a downward revision of the tariff; a parcels post; regulation of common carriers; spread of the merit system, especially in the postal service; curtailing of the franking privilege; conservation; election of U.S. senators by direct vote of the people; a graduated income tax; development of water ways; revision of immigration laws.

So forthright was his stand in behalf of the Orientals and for the rights of the Negro that he was accused of prejudice against his own race. In spite of this, William Kent was elected to Congress.

HE WROTE to Albert E. Kent, his eldest son then a sophomore at Yale: "I won the second round in the fight by something over three thousand majority . . . (Hiram) Johnson

The William Kents went to Washington where they found a house for their large family on a corner of F Street in an older part of the city. They became acquainted with congenial neighbors.

Mrs. Kent found the life in Washington exciting. As the wife of a congressman, she made new and interesting friends, among these was Mrs. Bob LaFollette, wife of the progressive senator.

MRS. LAFOLLETTE was a member of the board of the National American Woman Suffrage Association and at her suggestion Mrs. Kent was appointed congressional chairman. She was to see that the suffrage amendment was introduced into both houses of Congress, and time alloted for hearings and publicity given.

Congressman Kent was heartily in favor of woman suffrage and encouraged his wife to give her time to it. She gave a reception at her Washington home at which noted women including Jane Addams and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw gave impassioned addresses on the right of women to vote.

After the Kents returned to California Mrs. Kent joined with other women in this state who were fighting for the right to vote.

IT WAS NOT until June of 1919 that the 19th Amendment to the Constitution was approved by the states. The amendment, stating that "the right of citizens to vote shall not be denied because of sex," became effective Aug. 28, 1920.

In March of 1911 William Kent went from his Marin home to Washington D.C. to take the oath of office. His wife remained at home, but he was accompanied east by his mother and his cousin, Elizabeth Parsons, who remained with him for a month during the extra session of Congress which began in April.

In a letter to his wife, Congressman Kent admitted he had "stage fright" every time he spoke — but speak he did. He made his first address on April 28, 1911, on the production and distribution of wealth under a protective tariff, explaining that while he believed in protection of infant industries, once they became self-sustaining they did not need a protective tariff.

IN HIS new position William Kent was called upon to make important decisions.

In letters to constituents he stated plainly his convictions on the conservation of timber and other natural resources.

The menace of the Mediterranean fruit fly alarmed California orchardists. The Simmons Bill establishing a quarantine against the fly had been introduced in Congress, but it was feared it would die in committee. Through William Kent's efforts the bill was passed in both the House and Senate. The congressman considered this a great victory.

THEN HE TURNED his attention to the Seaman's Bill, later known as the LaFollette Act. Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union, worked with Senator LaFollette, who wrote the bill.

When William Kent learned the seaman was bound to his ship and had no redress for wretched living quarters, poor food, overwork and harsh treatment, he went into action. In an impassioned address to the House, he likened the condition of a seaman to a peon. Kent labored for the bill for three stormy years before it was finally passed.

At the end of his term Kent, impatient at the slow process of law-making and restless, decided he would not seek reelection. His district had been changed from the Second to the First, and Sacramento was no longer in his district. Two counties with a small population were added.

HOWEVER, AFTER consideration, realizing much work remained to be done in Congress, the congressman changed his mind. On July 6, 1912, at the close of the summer session of Congress, he announced his candidacy for reelection.

He did not seek a party nomination at the primaries and his name did not appear on the ballot. He was nominated by petition as a Progressive.

Gifford Pinchot toured the district in behalf of his friend. David Starr Jordan of Stanford gave him strong support and California women, jubilant on having been given the right to vote, rallied to the cause of the man who had helped them in their fight. His own record in Congress, however, was a big reason for his election Nov. 5, 1912.

ON MARCH 6, 1913, two days after the opening of 63rd Congress under the administration of President Woodrow Wilson, Congressman Kent, his wife and sons Albert and Thomas, on their spring vacation from Yale, and Sherman, 9, sailed for Panama on a trip for national legislators with their families to acquaint them with government affairs in the Canal Zone.

The delegation reached the canal before the water was turned in and watched the working of the locks.

Back in Congress on April 26, Kent spoke again on the tariff. He declared: "We need a system that will lead toward productive endeavor, not one that will encourage misplaced effort."

IN THE SUMMER of 1913 Mexico had civil disorders. The United States was being urged to intervene to protect property owned by U. S. citizens.

In a personal letter to his colleagues, William Kent stated: "The lives of American soldiers should not be sacrificed, the people's treasure should not be wasted, in protecting 'the property rights' of those of our citizens, who, having gone beyond our borders, have taken a chance on the laws and conditions of peoples beyond our control.

"As one financially interested in Mexico, inasmuch as I would not jeopardize my own life nor the lives of my sons to protect my property, I would be a coward and a murderer if I should send any of my countrymen to death in behalf of that property."

THE CONGRESSMAN constantly talked for peace with Uncle Sam's southern neighbor and urged that food be sent to the poor of Mexico to lessen the tensions there.

For more than three years William Kent served on the Public Lands Committee. Most of the members insisted that all of the public lands should be turned over to the U. S. to administer them as it saw fit.

Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, cooperated in drafting two principal bills, the Coal on Oil Lane Leasing Bill and the Water Power Bill, both relating to and providing for the reservation and leasing of water power sites and rights-of-ways on public lands. The bills were opposed on the floors of the House and Senate, but finally became law.

The year of 1914 brought success in political life but also great personal sorrow to Congressman Kent.

HIS MOTHER, who had been such an inspiration to him, died. In March, with a companion, she was traveling on an eastbound train when she was taken ill. She was rushed to a hospital in Ogden, Utah, where she died before her son could come to her.

Services were held in Graceland Cemetery Chapel in Chicago and interment was in the family plot there.

In April of 1914 Congressman Kent felt obliged to oppose President Woodrow Wilson's policy in Mexico. There the dictator, Victoriano Huerta, was opposed by Wilson. An incident involving U.S. sailors in Tampico caused trouble and a resolution was offered in Congress which stated the President was justified in the employment of armed forces to enforce demands made upon Huerta.

KENT EXPLAINED why he voted against the resolution. He said the record of U.S. citizens in Mexico had been "scandalous until recent times," that "our outlaws, promoters, grafters" had gone there, treated the Mexican people with contempt, killed the men, had not dealt fairly with the women and had participated in the larceny of their land. The California lawmaker said he had great sympathy and liking for the Mexican people.

However, the United States sent forces to Mexico. Then, at the brink of war, the U.S. and Mexico agreed to mediation, and Huerta abdicated.

IN 1914, CONGRESSMAN Kent did not enter the primary of Aug. 25, but sent letters to his constituents reporting on his "stewardship" of two terms. Then he went with his family to Lake Tahoe to rest during August.

AS A PROGRESSIVE and independent-minded congressman, William Kent fought courageously the battle for equal rights for all people long before the current interest in civil rights and liberties. His wife, the former Elizabeth Thacher, too, took an active part in public affairs, particularly the suffragette movement and conservation.

He was elected to his third term Nov. 3, 1914. In December, he joined in the general debate on the Hobson Prohibition Amendment, which he opposed. He was not in favor of saloons and the "liquor traffic," which he termed wasteful and demoralizing, but he spoke of the hardship prohibition would cause to the many honest, industrious and sober grape growers in his district and said the winemaking had been encouraged. That prohibition amendment was voted down.

Affairs of state were shelved temporarily as plans were made for the wedding of the Kents' daughter, Elizabeth, to George Stanleigh Arnold. They were married on Feb. 26, 1915, on the silver wedding day of her parents. The wedding and reception were held at the F Street house in Washington.

THE BRIDEGROOM, a San Francisco lawyer, was warmly welcomed into the family circle. On March 4, 1915, Kent once again took his seat in Congress as an Independent.

William Kent was on friendly terms with President Wilson and together they discussed problems and proposed legislation. Kent knew especially well the problems of cattlemen and the flagrant abuses of the popular Homestead projects.

The summer of 1915 was the first summer since he had been in Congress that an extra session was not called. He was glad to rest in California where the Panama Pacific International Exposition was held in San Francisco.

ON MAY 28 HE invited all visiting congressmen and their wives to an excursion up Mount Tamalpais and down to Muir Woods for a barbecue luncheon as his guests. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, inspired by the natural beauty, made an eloquent address.

The California congressman had intended to go east in November but he had to remain at home because of an appendicitis operation. While recovering, he wrote 12 bills which he wanted to present to Congress. One of these was for the creation of a National Park Service. Many organizations gave support to it and it was passed Aug. 26, 1916.

In the 1916 presidential campaign, Kent accepted the office of national chairman of the Woodrow Wilson Independent League. Although Wilson was a Democrat and Kent did not belong to that party, he had a close friendship with and great admiration for Wilson.

MRS. KENT told of an interesting facet of this campaign. She was a member of the National Woman's Party and opposed the candidacy of Wilson because he had said the country was not ready for woman suffrage. So while her husband campaigned for Wilson, Mrs. Kent traveled through California and Oregon opposing Wilson.

Her husband said he had valued his independence and she had a right to hers.

The second session of Congress, which began Dec. 4, 1916, was one in which William Kent had a busy and satisfying part. A congressional investigation of food packing, production and distribution was conducted. The President asked for an appropriation to carry on the investigation and Kent spoke strongly in favor of it. The appropriation was voted.

IT WAS A long time before laws requiring supervision and regulation of the packing industry were passed, but the pioneer work done by the California congressman was ultimately rewarded.

Mrs. Kent told another amusing story about herself in Washington. Beginning in January of 1917, Mrs. Kent and other members of the National Woman's Party picketed the White House to dramatize the fight for women's right to vote.

The picketers carried suffrage banners and finally Mrs. Kent and others were arrested for obstructing traffic.

The sentence was three days in jail or a fine of $25.

Against his wife objections, William Kent paid the fine. He said he would spend his last cent to keep her out of jail.

William Kent believed wholeheartedly in preservation of Mount Tamalpais, a part of which he owned. He wanted to keep it for public use and to protect its watershed. Now William Kent found a bitter water controversy going on in his home county.

San Rafael had sought to get lower water rates and a more adequate service from the Marin Water and Power Co., but had been blocked by law suits. Other towns protested, but to no avail.

WILLIAM KENT, in answer to pleas from his neighbors, returned from Washington to battle for the water-users. A petition had been launched proposing the organization of the Marin Municipal Water District.

In San Rafael, where the public meeting was held, he noted there were about 60 saloons on its main street. He began his address by saying: "The people of Marin County do not know how to mix their drinks. We have too much whiskey and too little water."

The formation of the MMWD was beset by controversy. Small companies, which were to be included in the district, fought the plan, and bonds had to be issued.

WILLIAM KENT said his father owned 305 shares of the capital stock of the old Marin County Water Co. He said that the stock had paid 6 per cent ever since he knew anything about it, and that the company was practically a protected monopoly for which the people in their water rates had paid.

Finally the MMWD, having taken over the smaller companies, became a reality.

William Kent was greatly concerned because the program for conservation of natural resources, such as coal, oil, water and minerals, was stymied in Congress. He protested to President Wilson in a conference but did not get far.

On April 6, 1917, Congress, in special session, declared war on Germany. Domestic matters were shelved to give full attention to the war effort.

STILL, KENT threw all his influence towards inducing President Wilson to act upon a new plan which finally resulted in the Federal Water Power Act. With the President in personal command, assisted by the secretary of war, secretary of the interior and secretary of agriculture, a strict control of leasing water-power sites was established.

Kent did not seek a fourth term in Congress. He returned to his Kentfield home.

He had taken part in framing the Revenue Act of 1916, within which a Tariff Commission was formed. On March 21, 1917, President Wilson appointed him to the commission. He served a 1917-1920 term. He had always opposed tariff for revenues, pointing out that it could justifiably be levied on luxury articles but worked a hardship when levied on necessities.

THE TARIFF Commission made an exhaustive study of foreign trade zones or free ports, and Kent, who was in charge, gave free zones his endorsement. He spoke in San Francisco, New York and New Orleans on the advantages of free ports. However, the bill, of which William Kent was the "father," did not pass the Congress.

In 1920 William Kent announced he would be a Republican candidate for the United States Senate from California in the primary election.

His platform was simple and direct: the right of free speech and freedom of the press; opposition to any extension of war powers during peace time; deportation of aliens who assail U.S. institutions; a regard for universal military training as more conducive to strife than to peace.

IN A STATEMENT that concluded his platform, he declared that if he were elected he would be counted as a Republican member and would vote as a Republican but he would not be bound by caucus pledges and he would cast a nonpartisan vote on all important issues.

IN APRIL, the Kents' son, William Jr., and Sophia Morris were married in Oak Park, Ill. The parents of the bride, Gardner and Sophia Morris, were old Chicago friends of the Kents'.

The Kents had welcomed another member into the family circle earlier when their son, Thomas Thacher Kent, took as his bride Anne Thompson of Whitestone, Long Island. This was during World War I when Tom was a second lieutenant in the Air Service.

As for the political campaign, Kent was defeated by Shortridge in the primary election of Aug. 31, 1920. Weary but not disheartened, the former congressman turned his attention to matters in California which concerned him greatly.

THE PRESERVATION of the natural beauty of Lake Tahoe was a continuing fight. Early in January of 1913 the Lake Tahoe Protective Association was organized. Among those most active in it were William Kent, E. C. Voorhies, A. Crawford Greene, V. S. McClatchy (editor of the Sacramento Bee) and E. G. Schmiedell.

The association contended the natural run-off from the lake should be used for irrigation first and power production afterwards. There was a long battle with the power companies and it was not until 1935 that Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes made the final decision fixing the highest level of the lake above sea level, providing storage for the irrigationists, protecting the houses on the shore and keep it for "those who go to Lake Tahoe to enjoy the beauty of the scenery and to rejuvenate themselves in its natural surroundings."

William Kent did not live to rejoice over that victory for the conservationists.

The former congressman now had more time to devote to his family, although he kept abreast of national and international affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent cruised the South Pacific. Then the Kents, with their daughter Adaline and son Sherman, sailed for Europe for a summer holiday. Later they were joined by Roger Kent.

When Robert LaFollette sought the presidency as a Progressive and Socialist in 1924, William Kent was drawn into his campaign, although he did not entirely approve of the platform.

IN THE SUMMER of 1925, Mr. and Mrs. Kent, with several of their children and two other couples, sailed on a chartered boat along the British Columbian coast.

William Kent, who loved the outdoors greatly, had suffered a number of illnesses.

These brief interludes did not interfere with his many projects. He was determined that the beauty of the Redwood Highway 101 be preserved and wrote many letters to the State Highway Commission objecting to the straightening and widening of the roadway to permit more rapid transit. He pointed out that it was the most unique stretch of highway in the country and depended for its charm on the trees. He suggested that in the future, if heavy traffic demanded a speedier route, it would be better to put in another cut-off road for such a purpose rather than destroy the scenic effects.

On May 25, 1927, William Kent suffered a slight stroke on his left side. Although partial recovery was quick, he had to accept the life of a semi-invalid. But he was alert and continued to send letters to newspapers and high officials.

ON SEPT. 22, 1927, in a letter to the executive secretary of the National Conference of State Parks, he wrote: "As far as California is concerned, the two important things . . . are the program of the Save-the-Redwoods League . . . and the establishment of a comprehensive Tamalpais park, which will join Muir Woods. . . ."

Before the close of the year the California State Park Commission was appointed and Tamalpais State Park was established under its jurisdiction.

Those who enjoy the park should be aware that one of William Kent's last acts was to deed 296 acres in Steep Ravine as an addition to Tamalpais State Park.

WILLIAM KENT died March 13, 1928. A memorial service was held in Tamalpais Centre on a Sunday afternoon, March 18.

Among the speakers were Rev. Ernest Bradley; Jesse K. Brown, president of Tamalpais Conservation Club; Mrs. E. G. Stetson, chairman of Tamalpais State Park Association; William E. Colby, president of the Sierra Club; Miss Alice Eastwood, famous botanist and secretary of the Academy of Science; Lynn T. White, D.D., and Sherman Day Thacher, brother of Mrs. Kent.

The latter concluded his remarks by saying of William Kent: "He liked appreciation and was full of sentiment, but he hated over laudation and sentimentality. . . .

"It has been a great experience to watch through over 40 years the development of his character and his powers and note the persistence of his vivid and unique personality. . . ."

Mrs. Kent never indulged in sentiment and kept her deep grief to herself. Each year she made the welcoming address to the thousands who attended the Grape Festival held in the Kent gardens. She maintained her interest in the Tamalpais Centre Women's Club, of which she was a charter member and first president.

WITH MOST of her family married and moved into homes of their own, mostly in nearby Kent Woodlands, Mrs. Kent built a new house in 1936 on the estate which she called New Haven for the city in Connecticut where she was born and reared and where she first met William Kent. Roger Kent and his family moved into the old Kent home.

Nearby were the homes of the

In August of 1952 Mrs. Kent died at her home, New Haven.

But both Roger and Sherman Kent, after long and distinguished careers in public life, remain prominent in U. S. affairs.

SHERMAN, WHO married the former Elizabeth Gregory, is the retired national estimates director and board chairman of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Roger, who married the former Alice Cooke in 1930, is a leading figure in the Democratic Party in California whose many public posts have included the state chairmanship of that party and service with a number of federal boards and commisssions.

And there are grandchildren and great - grandchildren to carry on the Kent tradition of service to community, country and humanity established by William Kent.

PIONEER Albert E. Kent built this Kentfield home in the early 1870s, and it was renovated and enlarged in 1917 by his son, William Kent, to accommodate his family. Today it is the home of the Roger Kents.

Folk Music Is Part Of Sunday Mass

By DON KEOWN

The lady customarily attended evening services at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael, but on one recent Sunday she decided to go to 9:15 a.m. mass instead.

To her surprise, she was ushered to special seating at the altar.

The reason became apparent as she looked around the sanctuary. All of St. Raphael's considerable regular seating facilities were filled to capacity.

The attendance was surprisingly larger than that to which she was accustomed. And there seemed to be more than the usual number of young faces among the worshipers.

THE SERVICE that followed told her why. For what is Marin County's most unusual church choir and accompaniment regularly take part in the Sunday 9:15 a.m. mass at St. Raphael's. And it has become the best attended mass of the day, at least partially because of that.

Barbara Quinn Riordan began her St. Raphael's Folk Mass Group in mid-September, 1968.

The folk mass, she explains, is a new development within the Roman Catholic Church, but one that has been winning increasing acceptance.

CONSEQUENTLY, Fr. Thomas Ignatius Kennedy, St. Raphael's pastor, was approached by some of his parish with the suggestion that the San Rafael church, too, should take part in the folk mass movement.

Father Kennedy was receptive to the idea. And for help he turned to a parishioner with a solid musical background — Mrs. Riordan.

Barbara Quinn Riordan is Irish-born with training and experience in opera. She studied and sang in Rome, London and Dublin before coming to the United States 10 years ago with her husband, architect Cecil E. Riordan, also Irish, and their young son, Mark.

STILL, THE gulf between folk music and opera seemed a wide one. Mrs. Riordan's original instrumental background was with the classical piano and violin.

"Yet I had always liked the sound of the guitar," she says, "and when we came to America, we had to leave our piano behind. I was lost without an instrument. I seem to have to be with music. So as an inexpensive and portable replacement, I eventually bought a guitar."

IT'S TUESDAY and practice night for the folk mass group of St. Raphael's Church. And director Barbara Quinn Riordan leads off one of the sacred tunes that the folk singers and guitarists will perform at the 9:15 a.m. mass at the San Rafael Roman Catholic church the following Sunday. The group has been participating in the Sunday morning services since their organization in mid-September, 1968.

She is largely self-taught on the instrument, but did study flamenco under Mariano Cordoba of San Francisco.

THE INSTRUMENT led her into folk music. "It is quite a contrast to opera," she admits. "But I love it."

She accepted Father Kennedy's assignment to organize a folk mass group for St. Raphael's with typical Irish enthusiasm and energy.

In the middle of September, 1968, her group of 50, about 20 of them vocalists, the other 30 guitarists, some of whom also sing, began practicing.

And at about that same time they became a regular part of the Sunday morning mass.

MRS RIORDAN, a service representative in the San Rafael business office of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., gives much of the credit for the success of the program to Fr. James D. Halligan, the St. Raphael's assistant pastor who has worked closely with the folk mass program.

Mrs. Riordan teaches both the playing of the guitar and the folk singing at the practice sessions that are held every Tuesday night at the church.

ALL THE instrumentalists began, she adds, with some guitar experience, although most were in the beginner stage.

While she admits that the guitar is not an easy instrument to master on the professional or expert level, she adds that it is "an instrument from which one can gain enormous satisfaction very quickly, simply by learning some basic chords."

The folk mass group includes among its members her son Mark, now 14, who both plays the guitar and sings.

HUSBAND CECIL helps out with observations sharpened by years of being around good music, and by recording on tape practice sessions so that the members can listen to and improve upon their work.

Mostly from young seminarians, says Mrs. Riordan.

Since the folk mass itself is a recent development, all of the music has been written within the past two or three years.

THERE IS a considerable outpouring of it. Yet groups like that at St. Raphael's are constantly on the look for more.

"What we would love," says Barbara Riordan, "is for some one in Marin to write some folk mass music for us."

Barbara Riordan takes great pleasure from the fact that the 9:15 a.m. Sunday mass with its unusual choir and accompaniment has become St. Raphael's best-attended service.

"The young people seem to like it especially," she says. "But older members of the church have also told us how much pleasure and inspiration they receive from it." Many young couples bring their children and it has become "a family mass."

SHE SAYS that in picking the music the group is careful to avoid the hard rock music sound and to pick softer folk tunes.

"What we look for," she explains, "is something that is simple and melodic — that is easy on the ear."

As for the words, Mrs. Riordan says the emphasis is upon "a great feeling of general Christian love for people," and she adds, "People love the words because they have such practical meaning and so much commonsense."

The congregation is encouraged to sing along with the guitarists and choir, and does so with zest.

FOR THE usual 9:15 a.m. folk mass, the group will select four songs or hymns. Mrs. Riordan usually sings one solo.

They have also made some special appearances including a Christmas service for which violins, flutes and clarinets were added to the accompaniment.

A smaller group from the folk mass guitarists and singers performed at a wedding — and were, according to Mrs. Riordan, "a big success." She hopes there will be more calls in the future upon them for participation in such ceremonies.

BUT THE BIG event of the year for Mrs. Riordan and her charges will be coming up later this month.

On Wednesday Jan. 22, at 8 p.m. in St. Raphael's Church, they will present a folk mass as part of the annual week-long ecumenical observance, the Unity Octave, in its seventh year and opening next Saturday.

"We feel especially proud to have been asked to take part in the Unity Octave," she says. "It seems such a splendid idea and purpose."

IT WILL represent an opportunity by members of all denominations in Marin County to hear and appraise one of the new developments in the Roman Catholic Church in America.

It will also tell them why there is seldom an empty seat in St. Raphael's for 9:15 a.m. Sunday mass. And why, when voices are then raised in praise of God, they are done so with such special vigor and feeling.

AMONG THE several mothers who sing and play with the folk mass group is Mrs. Valerie Gutterling. Ages range from a 9-year-old to a grandmother.

Those Other Islands

The Caribbean Beckons To Marinites

It used to be that when a Marinite announced plans for a vacation "in the islands," you could take it for granted he would soon be winging or steaming his way across the Pacific Ocean to Hawaii.

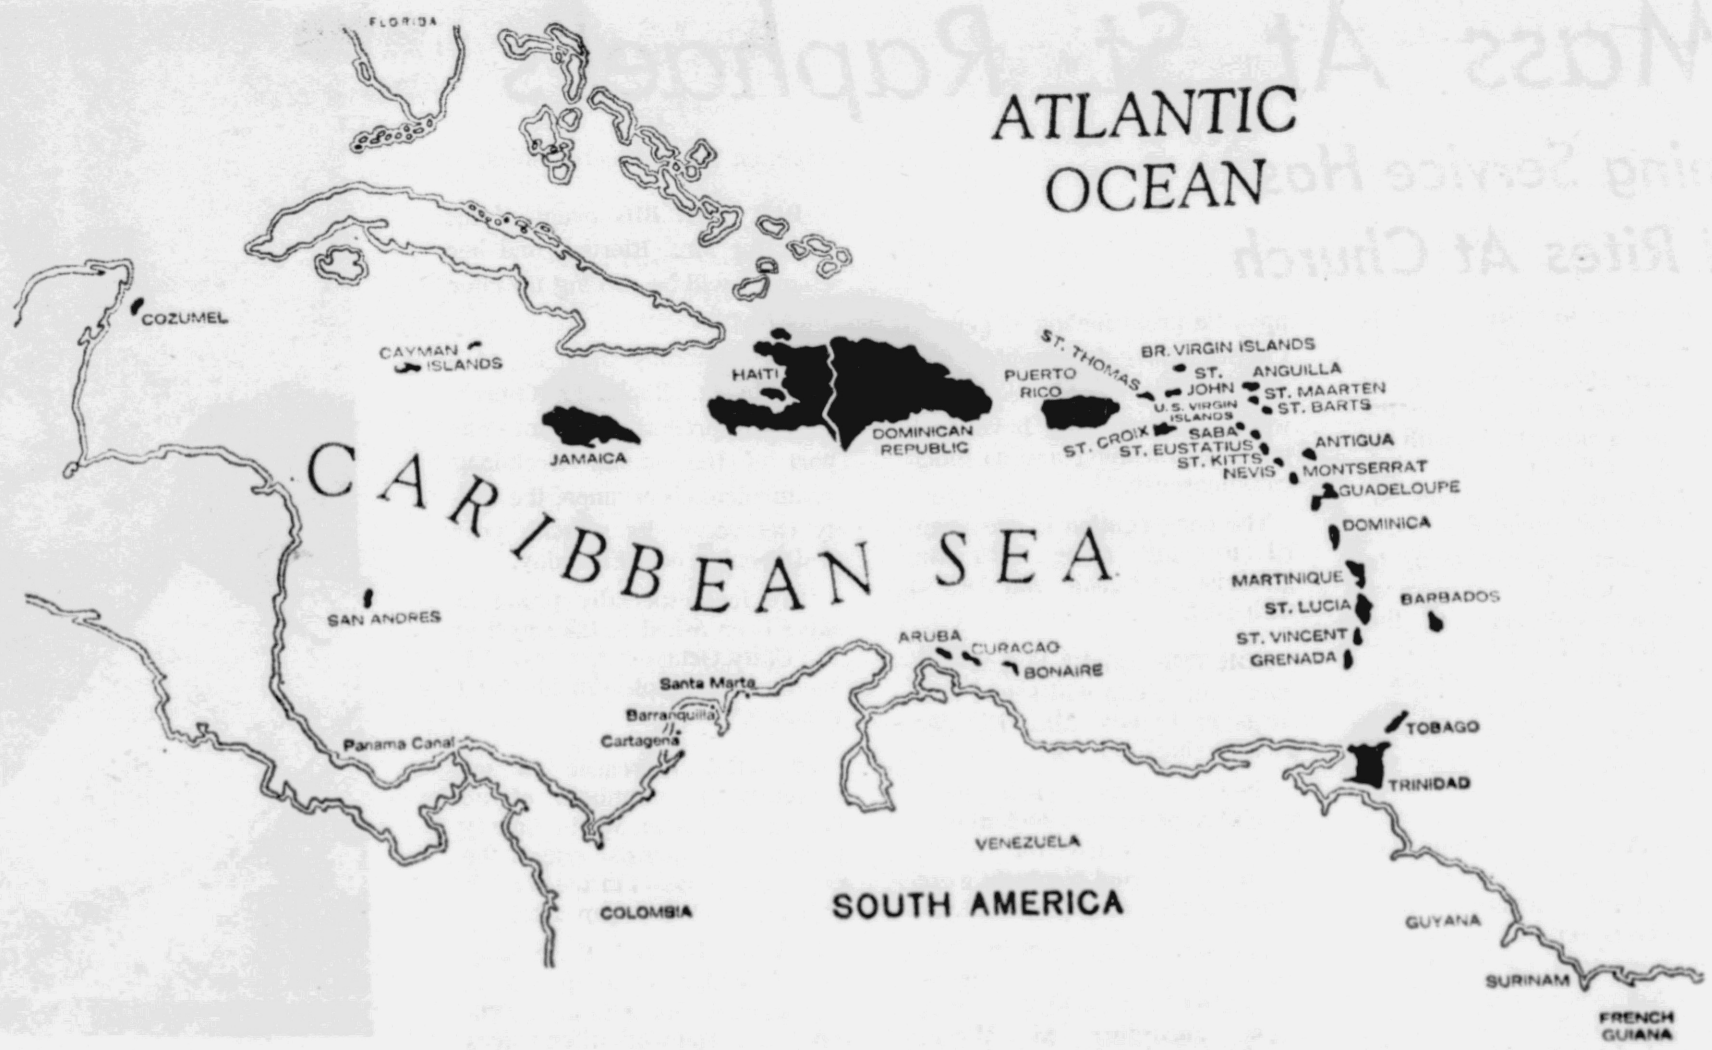
No longer can you do so.

For while Polynesia remains — and deservedly so — a popular holiday spot with traveling Marinites, more and more of our vacationers are discovering the delights of a different group of islands — the West Indies in the Caribbean.

THERE, TOO, they can romp or relax in idyllic climate conditions. There, too, they can enjoy beautiful beaches and other exotic scenery. There, too, they can investigate a cosmopolitan culture that, if anything, is even more international and more diversified than that of the Hawaiian Islands.

The major islands in the Caribbean number some 50, and represent varying cultures of Europe as well as America, plus pockets where African and Asian traditions hold forth.

The Caribbean Travel Association has compiled a thumbnail digest of the principal attractions of those islands offering tourist accommodations, giving the 1967 count for their visitors and their ranking in the area in tourism when available:



THE CARIBBEAN SEA is dotted with islands of all sizes that offer vacationing Americans not just a change of pace, but several changes. The isles feature a rich variety of cultures and a great diversity of terrain. Surroundings range from cosmopolitan cities to untamed jungles. More and more Marinites are discovering the delights of a holiday in the Caribbean.

A lively, swinging crowd enjoys casinos, night clubs, big-name entertainment, water sports, beaches, championship golf and tennis, horseback riding, a Spanish atmosphere, sightseeing, surfing, — most everything you might want in a tropic isle. The wide range of accommodations offers seclusion, too, but not in the major resort areas.

U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS: (611,361; second) A scenic group of islands where Americans enjoy a $200 duty-free exemption as against $100 elsewhere in the Caribbean. The major islands are:

ST. THOMAS: The 28-square mile capital of the U.S. Virgins is the leading cruise port and duty-free shopping center in the Caribbean. Visitors enjoy a wide range of accommodations, beaches, water sports, big-game fishing, yachting, golf, tennis and night life.

"SPANISH ISLANDS"

COZUMEL: This 28-square mile island off Mexico's Yucatan coast claims the clearest ocean waters in the world for skin divers. Visitors will find a fair choice of accommodations, top beaches, all water sports, horseback riding and ancient Mayan ruins.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC: (16,800 visitors, rank, 14th) The Caribbean's highest peak, 10,420-foot Pico Duarte, overlooks this 19,332-square mile historic nation which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti. Visitors enjoy beach and mountain resort areas, water sports, hunting, cockfights, shopping, horseback riding, golf, tennis, casinos, night life and sightseeing.

SAN ANDRES ISLAND: (A territory of Colombia, 189 miles off the Costa Rican coast). A new tourist destination for Americans, this palm-covered 26-square mile isle hosted some 70,000 visitors last year, mostly Colombians taking advantage of special duty-free exemptions on shopping. Visitors enjoy a good choice of accommodations, excellent beaches, shopping, all water sports and casinos.

Some Of The Uncrowded Isles

By MURRAY J. BROWN

Tired of following the crowds?

Looking for a retreat where you can fulfill suppressed desires as an adventurer, recluse, philosopher or beachcomber.

A man who should know says there still are "undiscovered" islands in the Caribbean where you can get lost if that is your bag.

He is Martin Winsch, general manager of the Caribbean Travel Association, who spends most of his time traveling through the islands.

ACCORDING TO Winsch there are dozens of islands which can lay claim to being the least-visited destination for American and other tourists.

Take Redonda, for instance.

This mile-square rock plunk in the center of the Lesser Antilles totals a big zero not only in visitors but in inhabitants too—if you don't count the goats.

Redonda was once claimed as a personal kingdom by an Irish sea adventurer — a claim, incidentally, recognized by the British government.

FOR THE adventurous, there are dozens of other uninhabited islands and cays in the Grenadines and the U.S. and British Virgin Islands. You'll have to rough it, of course.

Statistics are not available, Winsch said, but it doesn't take much imagination to guess the "seclusion index" of such off-the-track spots as St. Eustatius, which is recognized in history as the first foreign land to salute the U. S. flag during the Revolutionary War.

Once a major thriving port, "Statia" has faded into passing oblivion with but eight guest house rooms for visitors. Similarly offbeat are St. Barts with 17 guest house rooms, Saba with 25, and Anguilla with about 30.

Montserrat, first settled by the Irish in 1632 and where the natives speak English with an Afro-Irish lilt, with six moderately priced hotels and guest houses; St. Vincent, Captain Bligh's island with 15 small hotels and guest houses; Dominica, with 13 small hotels and guest houses, and Bonaire, with two hotels and five small guest houses.

On such uncrowded islands you can find all the attractions for which the Caribbean is famous, with more elbow room to enjoy them.

The First Men To Fly

CONTACT! THE STORY OF THE EARLY BIRDS by Henry Serrano Villard; Crowell, 263 pages, $10. Reviewed by Charles T. Stoffer.

The age of mechanical flight began only 65 years ago when Orville Wright completed his historic flight at Kitty Hawk. This was followed by a five-year lull which in turn was followed by an audacious and romantic flying era that extended to the start of World War I.

The 1909 awakening in France became aviation's most exciting period.

The London Daily Mail's offer of 500 pounds to the first flier to cross the English Channel was the incentive. Hubert Latham, Parisian sportsman and scholar, arrived at Calais to assemble his Antoinette monoplane for the attempt. Grounded by rain and fog for two weeks, word was finally flashed that he had taken off in clearing weather. Halfway to Dover, his motor failed. He was rescued unharmed by a following French destroyer.

Latham's backers quickly obtained a second plane that was readied for another attempt.

Wealthy headlight inventor and manufacturer Louis Bleriot arrived suddenly and proceeded to erect his Bleriot model monoplane. Although he was on crutches because of leg burns received from an exhaust manifold in flight, he was soon ready. The competition became so intense that it was not equalled until 1927 when unknown Charles Lindbergh suddenly arrived at Roosevelt Field where Richard Byrd and Clarence Chamberlin were both poised for the first New York to Paris flight.

Bleriot was awakened by his helpers at 2:30 a.m. on July 25, 1909. He readied his plane for flight, lashed his crutches on the side and took off just as the sun broke through the darkness. Latham, awakened by the hum of his rival's engine, rushed to his plane to engage in the race. Before he could take off, word was received confirming Bleriot's successful landing near Dover.

Hysteria prevailed throughout Europe and Louis Bleriot became the idol of mankind.

The first aviation meets were soon organized and James Gordon Bennett, American publisher of the Paris Herald, sponsored a trophy to lure the leading aviators of the world into international competition at Rheims. The Wrights declined, but Glenn Curtis, little known outside the USA, entered a pusher-type biplane. Other contestants included Bleriot, Latham, Henri Farman, Louis Palham and Captain Ferber, making the meet predominantly French.

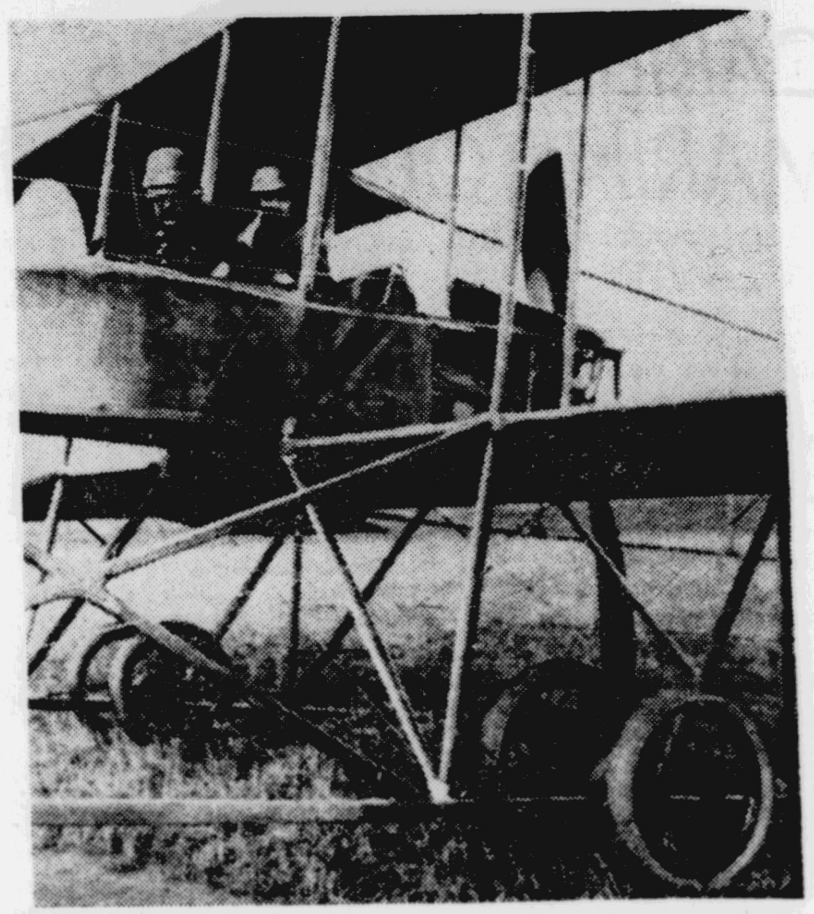
The French were stunned when Curtis emerged the winner, beating the famed Bleriot by the slim margin of six seconds.

The first listing of pilot licenses on Jan. 1, 1910, totalled 16 names, including the Wright brothers and Glenn Curtis. Ten different types of planes were listed for sale, and the Wright Flier was priced at 30,000 francs as the most expensive.

Villard's book reveals that the Wright brothers used a piledriver-like contraption that released a weight to create speed for takeoffs on all their early European flights. And that they did not replace their skid-type landing gear until 1910, although they constructed hundreds of lightweight wheels in their Dayton bicycle shop prior to inventing the airplane.

"Contact" is full of excellent detail regarding nearly every notable flight of "the early birds." France was by far the most spectacular contributor to those dramatic days of air races with fabulous monetary prizes.

It is possible to mention here only a few of the heroic exploits which Villard has recreated in his book: Roland Garro's great non-stop flight over the Mediterranean; French-born Peruvian Georges Chavez' fatal effort to fly across the Alps, and bewhiskered Adolphe Pegoud's death-defying first "loop the loop."



HENRY SERRANO VILLARD, author of "Contact! The Story of the Early Birds," was pictured at right in a Farman biplane at Aerodome de Buc near Paris on July 2, 1912, preparing for his first flight, with a French Army officer as his pilot. It is one of 125 photographs in the book.

It appears that the men who led the way to the present-day air industry colossus considered flying more of an art than a scientific endeavor. In Villard's telling, art or science, it is tremendously exciting.

The Killer Who 'Squealed' On His Cosa Nostra Henchmen

THE VALACHI PAPERS by Peter Maas; Putnam's, 276 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Roger Boone.

The Cosa Nostra or Mafia has attracted many spoken and written words in recent years, and this seems somewhat relevant, what with the cry for "law and order" thundering through the nation.

Words so far have exceeded deeds in respect to organized crime.

The Federal Bureau of Narcotics has taken steps to cut down the Cosa Nostra's illegal narcotics sales. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has started to devote more of its energies against organized crime. The federal Treasury and Immigration departments and some local law enforcement agencies have moved to harass the Cosa Nostra.

The Cosa Nostra, however, presents a formidable adversary. It grosses better than 40 billion dollars a year, according to U.S. Justice Department estimates. It has infiltrated legitimate businesses and labor unions to a disconcerting degree. It has corrupted some public and law enforcement officials.

Greatly aided by Prohibition, the Cosa Nostra has taken advantage of Puritan restraints against gambling and prostitution. But to attribute the syndicate's power to Puritan morality would be myopic and naive, as its illegal narcotics sales, loan "sharking" and outright homicidal activities display.

Interest in the Cosa Nostra heightened when in 1963 Joseph Valachi appeared before a U.S. Senate investigating subcommittee to testify about organized crime in the United States.

Peter Maas, now a New York Magazine editor, has written "The Valachi Papers," an interesting, crisply written and somewhat chilling book based on interviews with Valachi and a comprehensive, generally dispassionate chronicle by Valachi totalling 1,800 pages and detailing his long career in crime.

The reader not only gets a detailed account of a man's life in crime, but also can observe an inside view of the operation, personnel structure and the personalities themselves in organized crime.

Maas doesn't portray Valachi in a romanticized role to either the extreme of being a totally cold-blooded criminal or as a man overwhelmed by circumstance and who therefore turned toward evil.

"The Valachi Papers" clearly shows that Valachi decided to tell federal officials what he knew about organized crime because of the fear of death. As a federal inmate at Atlanta on a narcotics charge, he had been condemned to death by Cosa Nostra overlord Vito Genovese, then an Atlanta inmate, too, and also faced possible federal capital punishment for killing another inmate in a case of mistaken identity — as it turned out that the victim wasn't even a Cosa Nostra member.

Maas portrays Valachi as a man who is quick to blame other persons or circumstance for his shortcomings. Valachi often complained that he was deceived by his Cosa Nostra henchmen and expressed the desire to get out of the syndicate. Yet Valachi had no qualms about killing several men he regarded as friends on Cosa Nostra orders, nor did he have any reservations about selling narcotics when he felt his money was low.

It is somewhat unsettling, but probably not typical, when Valachi describes a murder contract as any professional would his job, and when he points out the mistakes of Cosa Nostra henchmen and even himself as some Germans criticized Adolf Hitler for military strategy but not the concentration camps and genocide.

Valachi does occasionally provide some humor outside the gallows variety such as his describing his courtship and the retreat of Cosa Nostra leaders into Upstate New York woodlands after the famed Appalachia meeting was disrupted by state police.

"The Valachi Papers" provides interesting and usually critical portraits of such infamous Cosa Nostra gangsters as Genovese, Charles (Lucky) Luciano, Frank Costello, Albert Anastasia, Thomas (Three Finger Brown) Lucchese and Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno, and fairly comprehensive accounts of such infamous events as the Castellammarese and the Genovese-Anastasia gang wars.

Maas also comments some on the alleged political pressure of some Italian-American groups to have U.S. Atty. Gen. Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach suppress his book. But fortunately this isn't dwelt upon too much nor does it hamper the presentation of Valachi's story.

Pictures Aplenty

THE PHIL SHERIDAN ALBUM by Lawrence A. Frost; Superior, 173 pages, $12.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

There are plenty of pictures. In fact, the effect seems to have been simply to crowd in as many as possible. Some panoramas have been squeezed into such small space as to lose their value, while some portraits of men who scarcely figure in an account of Gen. Phil Sheridan's life at all are given large display. There is much repetition in the pictures, and to make it worse, several are incorrectly identified.

The writing by Lawrence A. Frost, a Monroe, Mich., foot doctor, is pedestrian at best. Frost follows Sheridan's career from boyhood to death, but with no attention whatever to what is significant and what is minor.

The research is very spotty, resulting in inaccuracies.

Pictorial history books are desirable, but they should be done better than this.

A Wartime Naval Novel Focuses On Individuals

Hank Searle, an Annapolis graduate, adroitly develops a novel about a Navy aircraft carrier, the USS Shenandoah, which was gutted by an enemy aerial assault off Japan and yet returned to Pearl Harbor during World War II, and of how the carrier became pivotal in the conflict between Capt. Ben Casco and Adm. Christopher Lee, which began before the war in Annapolis and was resolved some 25 years later in Washington with an interesting twist of irony.

"The Hero Ship" offers entertainment not ideology, a plot marked by crisp writing and effective use of the flashback technique, and an adept, plausible portrayal of characters and events avoiding the stereotypes often induced by combat and the men who wage it in literature, cinema and television.

This fictional work isn't an anti-war tract nor a glorification of combat and combatants. To its credit, it is much more a story of individual men than of events or institutions.

The characterization of Casco, who rose up through the ranks, is particularly well done, befitting his role as the central character through whose mind and eyes the story flows.

A Pair Of 'Passing Fads' That Didn't Fold Up And Fade Away

By DON KEOWN

Taking them too seriously and attempting to read hidden significance and great thoughts into their songs and antics only gets in the way of that enjoyment.

At least that was the conclusion we came to after ploughing through "The Beatles Book," a collection of 14 essays offering differing points of view of the Liverpudian kingpins of the pop music scene.

The commentary, as edited by Edward E. Davis, ranges from the cynical ridicule of conservatism's "golden boy," William F. Buckley Jr., who manages to sound stuffy along with his usual arrogance, to an embarrassingly gushy adulation from some of the less restrained Beatles admirers.

We see them through the eyes of a composer, Ned Rorem; of an educator, Richard Poirier; of two hipster "father figures," Bay Area syndicated columnist Ralph J. Gleason and Greenwich Villager Nat Hentoff; of a poet, Al Lee; of a black, Larry Neal; of a middle-age square, Buckley; of a psychologist, Dr. Herbert J. Freudenberger; of such critics as Richard Goldstein and Leonore Fleischer.

THE TALBOTT AGREEMENT by Richard M. Garvin and Edmond G. Addeo; Sherbourne Press, 255 pages, $4.95.

In in the end the inescapable conclusion is that the Beatles are the fantastic hit they are simply because they are fun. They spoof life and they spoof themselves, doing so with taste, talent and spirit. Several of the essayists say pretty much this very thing, and say it rather well. "Clown gurus," Goldstein calls them.

But does it really need to be said at all? Isn't it self-evident to any Beatle fan? So why should he shell out $5.95 for a book that confirms what he already knows, when that sum might better be applied to Beatle records?

As for the Buckleys of the world, nothing said by others is likely to convert them. Once soured, no amount of sugaring is likely to re-sweeten a curdled substance. This is especially true with the human soul.

REMEMBER back several years when literary pundits were predicting the quick demise of the spy thriller?

Those forecasts belong along side those that even earlier were saying that rock music was a passing fad and the Beatles a fleeting fancy.

John LeCarre's "A Small Town in Germany" and Helen MacInnis' "The Salzburg Connection" have been running at or near the top of the best-seller lists now for a number of weeks, and are only the most recent of a long string of such successes, with more certain to follow. In fact, just about the surest way to crack those select charts is to write a good spy yarn.

Two Marin writers, Richard M. Garvin and Edmond G. Addeo of Mill Valley, made their bid with "The Fortec Conspiracy." While it didn't quite lift them into the upper echelon of spy novelists, it was a deserved success. Now they have collaborated on another, "The Talbott Agreement." Again it falls barely short of being up there with the very best being produced by suspense fiction's elite, and is excellent entertainment.

Garvin, a former advertising copywriter and executive, and Addeo, an ex-newspaper man, focus on the tension between Red China on one side and the United States and its former arch-enemy Russia on the other. The premise is that the U.S., the Soviet Union and Great Britain, fearful of growing Chinese nuclear strength and aggressive intentions, have decided upon a preventive invasion.

China, however, has a secret weapon of its own, thanks to an American-trained scientist who has developed psychokinesis to the point of massive destructive potential.

The Garvin - Addeo yarn revolves around the espionage struggle that ensues. Chang, an American plant in Peking, brings out the news of the Chinese accomplishment, but America's scientific, political and military leaders are difficult to convince. Among his converts, however, is agent Jim Moser. Eventually, Chang and Moser must undertake a perilous mission behind the Bamboo Curtain not only to nullify China's ultimate weapon, but also to cancel out the U.S.-British-Russian invasion strategy and avert war.

It's a good action story with a sufficiently high believability quotient for acceptance by spy fiction fans, although the hard pseudo-realism of a LeCarre or Len Deighton is not attained.

The spy novel remains one of our most relaxing forms of escapist reading, and Garvin and Addeo have written a book that serves that purpose well, and which may even contain some thoughtful truths about the tense international scene.

The jacket tells us that the co-authors are currently at work on separate books on non-fiction topics, Garvin's about strange beliefs and mystical practices, Addeo's about Yosemite Valley's history.

Hopefully, and highly likely, the team will be heard from again in the spy thriller field. And they may yet write the American counterpart of "The Spy Who Came In From the Cold."

SUPERIOR Publishing Co. is a Seattle firm with a penchant for publishing pictorial histories on regional subjects. The photos in those collections are usually good and well reproduced, although sometimes they do not hang together very cohesively. And the texts at times tend to seem hurried and routine, as though the pictures were the only real excuse for the book. No such criticism of "This Was Wheat Farming" ($12.95) is possible. Along with an excellent array of colorful wheat farming scenes such as those above, the buyer gets a text by agricultural journalist Kirby Brumfield that is lively and literate as well as authoritative as it recounts the colorful history of grain farming in the Pacific Northwest. It is perhaps Superior's best effort to date.

Billed as the first in a new series of mystery novels featuring Sam Benedict, a fictional San Francisco lawyer patterned after Jake Ehrlich, the book stars the same character who appeared in a television series.

Although the author is a law professor, he writes more like a television scripter than either a teacher or mystery writer.

The San Francisco descriptions will probably seem trite to Bay Area residents, who might tend to doubt that a famous lawyer would set up a conference with a leading psychiatrist at the Top of the Mark. Oleck's descriptions of Cleveland and its suburbs ring truer, possibly because that's where the author lives.

"A Singular Fury" is not so much a mystery as a rather intriguing account of how an attorney builds a defense for a difficult case.

Although the defense centers around a rather odd medical premise, the final courtroom scene has enough dramatics to please television fans — and even readers.

The original edition came out in 1962, and San Francisco and its environs have, indeed, undergone considerable change since then, some of it for the good and some of it not.

Gentry's interesting book is heavy on history, relating the sights of the city and suburbs in colorful detail to what has gone on in the past, and is particularly helpful, therefore, to students of Californiana.

NEW PRODUCT — Several articles have been written about the increasingly popular CASSETTE type tape recorder. This type uses small cartridges of tape that are simply inserted into place and the recorder is ready to record or play. Cassette units are now available in very small portable monaural models or as stereo models.

The very latest is the new SONY Model 124-CS stereo cassette-corder system. This is a complete four-track stereo system, lightweight and small enough to take anywhere in its briefcase-size carrying case. Full-range extension speakers provide true stereo separation. It is pushbutton operated and extremely simple to use. The Sony Model 124-CS is a three-piece unit. One unit is the control center, housing the push-button controls, tape transport mechanism and the connecting jacks. This unit is a complete portable recorder/player in itself. It houses one speaker in its case so it can be used without the extension stereo speakers for compact portability. The two other pieces house two full range speakers that can be separated for true stereo playback. A new Sony stereo dynamic microphone is included with this system enabling stereo recordings anywhere. The 124-CS operates on four flashlight batteries, or on household AC, or on car battery. There is a built-in charger for use with optional rechargeable battery pack.

This new Sony cassette is very versatile. Not only is it an excellent portable stereo music system and excellent stereo recorder, but it can also be used in conjunction with the home stereo for recording and playback.

Cassette tape cartridges are available as four-track stereo pre-recorded tapes. Blank cassette cartridges are available in the 60 minute, 90 minute, and 2 hour size. Since they are quite small, a large library of music will occupy a very small space. The quality of response is excellent. They do not get scratched and worn as do records. Actually, the tape is never handled since it is encapsulated within a container. Only the container is handled. Visit us soon for a demonstration of the ease and simplicity of the cassette system and enjoy the sound of stereo.

Reading For The Juniors

Just how much sex education should our youngsters receive, at what age, and from whom should it come?

These are all questions that cause controversy and concern these days.

For parents who favor sex education at an early age, and who believe it is their responsibility to administer it, a couple of new books should prove helpful.

"How Babies Are Made" (Time-Life, $3.95) is a tasteful, straightforward, illustrated explanation by Andrew C. Andry and Steven Schepp of the "facts of life" questions that most often puzzle children ages 3 to 10. The book begins with flowers as the example of the reproductive processes, moves on to animals, and finally to human beings. The paper sculpture technique has been used effectively for a three dimensional effect in the illustrations.

"About Sex and Growing Up" (Association Press, $3.50 clothbound, $1.50 paperback) is by Evelyn Millis Duvall, a respected writer and authority in the family life education field. The book, "for near-teen boys and girls," assumes a greater maturity than the Time-Life book from its young readers, being more explicit and more direct in its approach, and takes up personality problems as well as the sex questions. It is illustrated with simple drawings.

Some other new books for the juniors:

Another in a series of science activity books by Tillie S. Pine and Joseph Levine is "The Incas Knew" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95), illustrated by Ann Grifalconi. How the Incas solved their problems, in much the same way as we do today, proves to be quite interesting to young readers, and they are eager to tackle the experiments included. Our own children were most intrigued with the way the Incas constructed suspension bridges and built their villages; older children might well construct their own irrigation systems, very much like the Incas did. The realization that people who lived hundreds of years ago, in another country, learned to make maps, build roads, construct bridges, devised a calendar and solved basic problems of living, provides a valuable and fascinating lesson.

Did you know that penguins are the only birds who have flippers instead of wings? Or that they only eat when in water? Or that the covering on their body is not fur but a thick growth of tiny feathers? These facts and many other interesting aspects of the penguin life are told in "Penguins, the Birds With Flippers" by Elizabeth S. Austin (Random House, $1.95). The reader may wish to skip over some of the details of the numerous species and how they were discovered. The black and white photographs add greatly to the very interesting life of the penguins.

Any young Marin County horse-lover should enjoy learning how the horse became man's friend. "The Story of Horses" by Pat Johnson (Random House, $1.95) retraces this history of horses. The photographs by Walter D. Osborne make the book an enjoyable story even for the non-reader.

Harriet E. Huntington is producing a series of nature books with photographic illustrations for youngsters, the most recent of which is "Let's Go To the Wood" (Doubleday, $3.50). With typewriter and camera she conducts boys and girls on a field trip to observe and to appreciate the richness of the plant and animal life that flourishes among the trees. Her pictures range from a close-up of a mushroom to wide scenic vistas. Her writing is a practical explanation of the natural wonders most likely to arouse the curiosity of the children.

Inflated Nothing

In the old days when 80 per cent of the film shot in Hollywood was made by motion picture studios instead of for television, there used to be a permanent press corps of 50 so-called "correspondents," at least 150 of whom used to be from foreign countries.

Hamblett, author of this enormously inflated nothing, was one of them — from England. In 435 pages of large type, larger empty spaces and scores of old photographs from the news and wire services, he has dished out nothing that you could not have read (and probably did) in dear Hedda's column, or Louella's, or Sheilah's, or almost anybody's. And most of it seems to have been written anywhere from five to 15 years ago.

Here are "interviews" and philosophical comments on a Hollywood that never existed even in the wildest dreams of its imaginative press agents. They have nothing to do with the industry or with its people.

This is the way Mr. Hamblett writes — in his very first sentence: "Stick a pin anywhere into the sunlit nightmare that is Hollywood and you nail madness." Had enough? It gets worse as it goes along.

Dropping names like grass-seed, the knowledgeable author tells you the inside thoughts of such "great" performers as Kim Novak, Elvis Presley and Elizabeth Taylor.

He calls Humphrey Bogart's biographer Richard "Gayman" (it's Gehman), producer Dore Schary is Shary, the president of the United Arab Republic is named Nassar, Griffith Park becomes Griffiths, one fellow is spoken of as lying "prone on his back" and Mort Sahl is called a "sick comic."

But perhaps these are typographical errors. If so, they are the only authentic things in the book. The rest is verbiage.

A Crowded Life

FACTS AND FICTIONS by Ann Bridge; McGraw-Hill, 207 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

"It was my great good fortune to be an eye-witness of (historical) happenings. . . ." Miss Bridge, wife of a British diplomat and author of the series of widely read intrigue and mystery novels, made excellent use of her fortune.

Without pausing to draw full breath, she pours out here an account of the crowded life she and her husband led in chanceries all over the world during the first half of the century. It was a privileged life that exposed her to an astonishing amount and range of knowledge — Chinese racing ponies, California wildflowers, the fine points of "harmelik" (harem life in Turkey) which she turned to good use in her fiction.

"Some literary recollections," her subtitle, is somewhat of a misnomer. Other than pointing out which events ended up where in her books, she leaves her literature out of this more or less chronological story of her glamorous way of life. Full of a luxury that is no more, it brought her and her family, on occasion, face to face with danger and hardship; and she handled that too with unshakable aplomb, and her customary eagerness to record what she saw about her.

For the most part she was content to accept her class' prevailing view of the history she witnessed, and one cannot help wishing such a perspicacious observer had been moved to probe a little beneath the official surface of events.

She feels the books she calls "modern historicals" are her best — "The Tightening String," "A Place to Stand," "The Dark Moment" — novels that are "fiction, but made as factual as possible," and in her hands the results have been suspenseful entertainment.

Vim In The 60s

Most exercise programs, unquestionably, are too strenuous for men and women over 60 unless they have been extremely active through the years and thus maintained their physical condition.

The exercises are simple and generally on the easy side. Simple figure illustrations demonstrate the movements. And there are special exercises for special problems, as well as some general hints on how to perform household chores without harmful strain.

Some more active men and women in the 60s may disdain the King-Herzig program as too easy. But most will probably find it just about their speed. And the knowledge that it is within their capabilities will serve as an incentive for them to begin to bring new vim into their lives.

"What Is Meant By 'Invisible' Stains?"

So-called "invisible" stains are those that are not apparent until a garment or fabric is drycleaned. A number of everyday-used household items, such as perfume, hair spray and cold wave solutions are causes of these stains. Usually, the stains only show up when the fabric is subjected to drycleaning, drying or the heat of pressing. However, sometimes, simply storing a garment in a hot area for a few weeks or months may bring the "invisible" stain into sight.

Whenever something is spilled on a garment or fabric, whether or not a stain appears, send the article to your professional drycleaner at once. Delay or storage may cause irreparable damage. Pin a note on it explaining what was spilled so that special attention can be given to prevent permanent damage.

The heart-breaking thing about "invisible" stains is that they do not remain invisible unless they are removed promptly.

Some Newly-Released Records On Vox And Turnabout Labels

By JOHN SUNIER

Some releases on the Vox and Turnabout labels:

SERGEI PROKOFIEFF: "The Complete Music for Solo Piano" — Gyorgy Sandor, piano — Volume I (Vox SVBX 5408); Volume II (Vox SVBX 5409):

The total of six LPs contained in these two volumes represent a magnificent tribute to the genius of Prokofieff. It is also the first time all of his piano music has been presented in such a collection.

Sandor is the equal of all other Prokofieff interpreters, and shines even more in this Vox Box set than he did in the fine complete Bartok set released some years ago.

Of course the main interest here are the nine amazing piano sonatas, the first five in Volume I and the rest in Volume II. Beethoven is the basis of Prokofieff's keyboard sonatas — they are built on classical form and structure, and however much wild dissonance, the music is always tonal. His music is easily recognized by emotional vitality and intensity coupled with a simple and compelling lyricism, especially in slow sections.

Sonatas six and seven are my personal favorites, the first a huge structure full of agitated and nervous energy, and the second known for its unusually popular-sounding and lush slow movement.

Of the other 15 sets of piano pieces included in the two volumes, the "Visions Fugitives" are probably the best-known for their weird minor moods. The "Toccata" is a short and raging piano exercise.

Some of the short pieces were written to satisfy educational purposes of the Soviet state and lack a certain spark. Others, such as the two "Chose en soi," are almost too introspective to be very enjoyable listening. But throughout the piano music of Prokofieff runs a thread of nervous energy that always makes his creations more than merely a pleasing assembly of notes.

The stereo sound and surfaces on these sets are excellent.

The major work in this smashing virtuoso recital is the improvisation on themes from Mozart's opera "Don Giovanni," titled "Reminiscences of Don Juan." It is a miniature symphonic poem in three parts, each concerned with a different dramatic point in the opera.

The tempestuous passage which follows the invitation of the statue to dine with him (in hell) is spinetingling in the good old spirit of Romantic pianistic fireworks. Other music on the LP are fantasies on themes from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" and Gounod's "Faust." Kentner equals the fine performance of the Don Juan music on an Epic release, and the Turnabout is bargain-priced, too.

CARL MARIA VON WEBER: "Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet"; "Concertino in C Minor for Clarinet"; "Quintet in B Flat Major for Clarinet and Strings" — David Glazer/Wurttemberg Chamber Orchestra/Innsbruck Symphony/Kohon Quartet — (Turnabout TV 34151S):

This is the first time these three wonderful pieces featuring the clarinet have been assembled on one disc, and at a bargain price yet.

The "Concertino" is Weber's best-known for the instrument and quite operatic in flavor. The "Quintet" is more than chamber music, having a big sound and giving the clarinet all the limelight, musically speaking.

Glazer has many other albums out for Vox and is a superb soloist.

"ELECTRONIC MUSIC III" — BERIO: "Omaggio a Joyce"; DRUCKMAN: "Animus I"; MIMAROGLU: "Piano Music for Performer and Composer"; "Six Preludes for Magnetic Tape" —(Turnabout TV 34177):

From a start of only two or three LPs about 10 years ago, the library of electronic and associated avant garde music on disc has expanded so greatly that one trying to hear all the new material finds it an impossible task.

The Turnabout series is excellent, though it sometimes duplicates (as in the "Homage to Joyce" piece).

Cathy Berberian, who is Mrs. Berio, uses her amazing voice in amazing ways that will not fail to affect the listener. Mimaroglu, who works at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center, pursues some rather unique theories of the relationship between performer and composer in his first work on the disc. The preludes are a good demonstration of many tape manipulation techniques, for each of the six are base on a different source sound —for example, one is only a rubber band.

"MUSIC FOR MANDOLIN" — BEETHOVEN: "Four Pieces for Mandolin and Harpsichord"; SCHLICK: "Divertimento for Two Mandolins and Basso Continuo" — Kusochak and Hladky, mandolins/Maria Hinterleitner, harpsichord (Turnabout TV 34110S):

A very unique and delectable album.

Although Vivaldi used the mandolin a great deal in his music, perhaps the height of its popularity was in Vienna in the last 18th Century. While these compositions are not musical masterpieces, the nostalgic sound of the mandolins weaves a spell that is thoroughly enchanting listening.

ODE TO A LITTLE GIRL

Think, little girl with stringy hair,
And minus a tooth or two,
Skipping along on spindly legs
With such knobby knees in view:
Think! What those years
That make an old man of me
Are going to do for you.

SAN RAFAEL — ALFRED J. BOUSCAL

OPINION

Much is heralded these days
'Bout Eastern, Himalayan ways
Of Pure
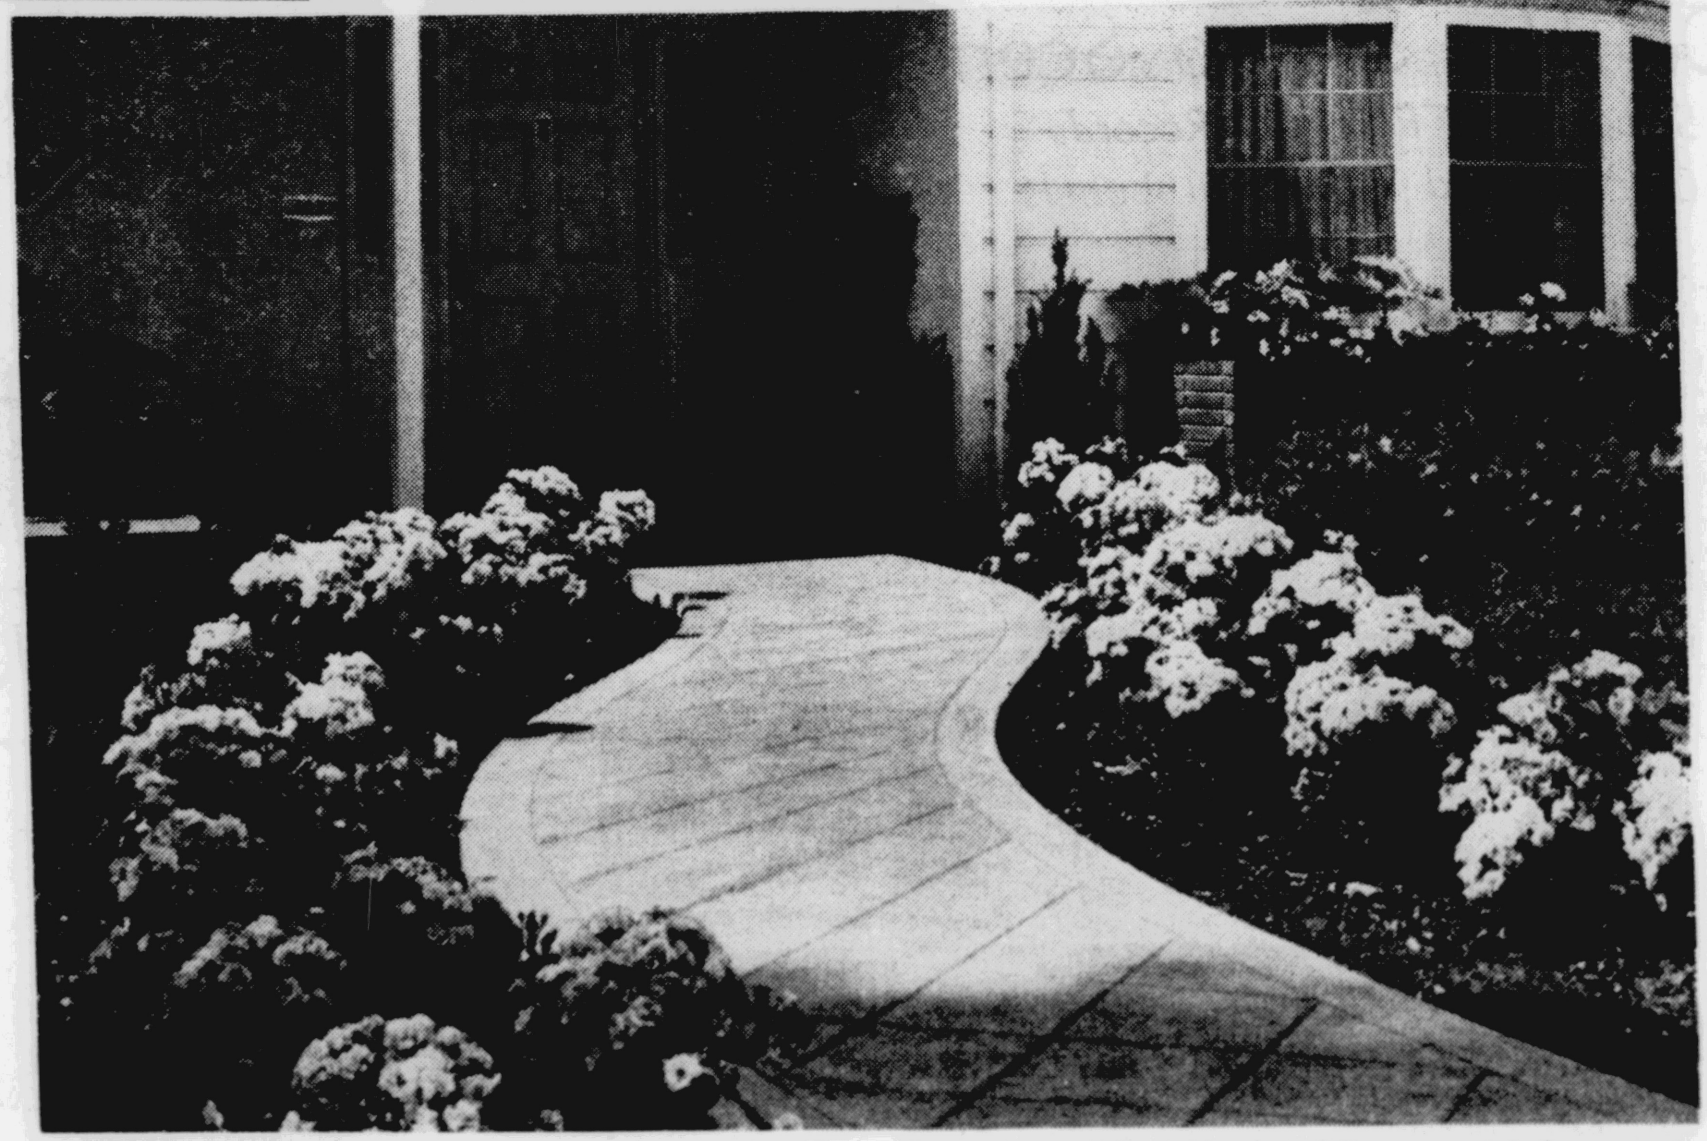
Thought.

I'll take a little impure thought
'Most any day,
'Cause that's the only kind
A poem can say.

TIBURON — BARBARA FLYNN

Roses By The Clusters



TO BORDER A walkway or a drive, there are few plantings as effective as the floribunda roses. Nurserymen say that Marinites are not using these low-growing, prolific-blooming beauties to anything like their fullest potential. But now, during bareroot planting season, is a good time to correct that oversight. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

Say "rose" to most Marin gardeners, and they immediately think of the lovely hybrid teas.

It is difficult to fault that kind of thinking, for there are few things more beautiful on this earth than a well-shaped hybrid tea rose.

Yet nurserymen say that Marinites are making a mistake when they limit themselves to tea roses only. What they are overlooking are the floribunda roses.

AND WHILE a floribunda might not be nearly so attractive as a hybrid tea on the individual specimen basis, it is ever so much more versatile.

Floribunda roses are ideally suited to landscaping, and our nurserymen would like to see Marin home owners use more of them in beautifying their grounds.

Most floribundas grow less than three feet high and bear blooms in clusters that provide garden color from spring to winter.

BECAUSE THEY are the most prolific of the roses, the floribundas are perfect for informal hedges, for massing, for borders and for containers.

They are most effective as border plantings along side driveways or walkways. They do a splendid job as color accents in front of foundation plants. They can be grown in redwood containers for portable color.

Since they come in a multitude of hues, some very striking color combinations and coordinations can be achieved with them.

THEIR ONE major requirement for good performance is a sunny location. Give them that, and they will flourish with less attention than the hybrid teas.

While Marinites have lagged in their use of floribundas, there have been those among us who all along have made good use of their landscaping potential. With these growers, the two most popular floribunda roses have been the Margo Koster and the Pinkie.

But there are others, including two new introductions for 1969 that have been accorded All-America Selections honors. These are Angel Face, the first lavender rose ever to earn the award, and the Gene Boerner, the lone pink rose among the four All-American roses for '69.

ANGEL FACE bears king-sized blooms for a floribunuda that measure up to four inches across and last for days. In addition to their unusual coloration, the flowers are delightfully fragrant.

Special features of the Gene Boerner include an unusually long cutting stem of 10 to 12 inches, and long pointed buds that unfurl into good-sized blooms in a rich pink.

The fact that half the 1969 All-American roses are floribundas testifies to the high regard which nurserymen hold for these most useful roses.

LIKE ROSES of all kinds, floribundas are available now at the height of the bareroot season in their largest selection. A delay might mean that the gardener will lose out on some of the newer or more popular selections, particularly the All-American roses which always go fast.

But remember: when you visit the nursery looking for roses, don't stop with just the hybrid teas. Take a look, as well, at the floribundas, keeping in mind as you do so the specific landscaping problems in your garden where roses by the clusters might provide you with an enduringly beautiful solution.

ROSE BOOK IS READY

The American Rose Society has published the 1969 edition of its "Handbook for Selecting Roses," listing and describing more than 1,000 varieties and assigning each a rating based on a survey of more than 18,000 rosarians.

The pocket-size booklet can be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a self-addressed stamped, regular-sized envelope to American Rose Society, Department B, 4048 Roselea Place, Columbus, Ohio, 43214.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✒Now is the time for pruning most deciduous shrubs and trees. But before you begin, make sure you have a quality pair of shears that are sharp and working well.

✒It's also the time for dormant spraying of most deciduous plantings. While in their winter sleep, shrubs can withstand a stronger dosage of chemicals than they can at other seasons of the year.

✒Two perennial vegetables — artichokes and asparagus — can be planted in January.

✒Summer-flowering bulbs should begin to appear in Marin nurseries this month. Keep your eyes open for the likes of watsonia and tigridia.

✒Check staked plants periodically throughout the winter to make certain they are still secure against strong winds.

CAN YOU EVER have enough storage? Seemingly not. And especially in a children's room. There, insufficient storage can contribute to a seemingly continuous state of chaos. Given an adequate place to put their clothing, toys, books, etc., you have at least an outside chance that the youngsters will maintain some semblance of order in their room. This double built-in holds just about everything kids can accumulate. The storage wall requires only 10½ panels of plywood, some light framing lumber and miscellaneous hardware. The size can be adapted to meet your needs. For the construction details, send 10 cents to American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., and ask for Plan No. FW 56-170.

It's Humidity That Hurts The Interior Of A House

Handyman's Page

Marinites have no snow to shovel, but they do have their winter problems.

One of them doesn't remain outside, but comes right into their homes.

That's the water that forms on the inside of the window panes. Sometimes it is no major problem, little more than a fogging of the glass. And sometimes it is a serious matter with water almost streaming down the pane. Then you have real trouble.

The condition is, of course, much the same as that encountered by the automobile driver who finds his windshield fogging. The best and easiest solution is the same, too —ventilation.

YOU CRACK a side window of the car and the condensation on the windshield soon disappears.

It isn't always that easy in the house, but ventilation is still the necessary step on the right direction. The modern house is planned to hold warmth. But it also holds humidity. And excessive humidity means water vapor inside the home.

In Marin, winter, with its dampness, is the time when that problem is at its worst. Outside, cool air chills the window panes. Inside the cold glass attracts and extracts moisture from the warmer humid air that settles on the surface of the window.

THE COLDER and damper the weather, the greater the condensation.

Corrective action calls for either reducing the humidity indoors, or warming up the cold surfaces of the window panes. Failure to provide remedies invites such damage as water-stained sills, walls and floors, hidden damage from seepage inside the walls and even harm to the exterior walls when the humidity works its way through insufficient vapor barriers.

To avoid such consequences, you can act to let the moist air escape from the house more easily and quickly. This can be accomplished by leaving a trouble spot window open a half inch or so, in some cases. One home owner solved his problem by opening the damper of his living room fireplace for one hour twice a day.

PERHAPS LOUVERS and exhaust fans will be needed to do an effective job.

Another approach is to trap the excessive moisture through the use of dehumidifier. These are sold in sizes and kinds that range in cost from a few dollars to hundreds of dollars. Naturally, the greater the problem, the greater the need for one of the more sophisticated, electrically operated models.

The investment may be more than just worthwhile if your inside-the-house humidity problem is an aggravated one. The damage being done to your dwelling could be far more expensive in the long run.

LBJ Will Deliver State Of Union Message Tuesday

Still No Decision On Surtax; Delay Stalls Composition Of Fiscal Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson will deliver his farewell State of the Union message at a nationally televised joint session of Congress at 6 p.m. PST Tuesday, the White House announced today.

Press Secretary George Christian said that Johnson was putting the finishing touches on his message in his office today.

Christian said the budget message will be sent to Congress after Johnson has delivered his State of the Union message, but he gave no date for the budget's submission.

He said an economic message would follow.

SURTAX ISSUE

Christian indicated with a gesture of the hand that Johnson had received no commitment from President-elect Nixon about the troublesome question of whether to recommend an extension of the 10 per cent income surtax.

Asked for a yes or no on this matter, Christian merely smiled and held his hands palm up.

Christian said Johnson planned to spend a family weekend at Camp David. He added that some friends and staff members may join him.

But he said he does not expect the President to leave the closely guarded area during a visit expected to end tomorrow night.

NEW YORK TRIP

The President and Mrs. Johnson expect to fly to New York Monday where they will be guests at a dinner.

Previously, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana had said Johnson was reluctant to deliver his State of the Union message in person. Mansfield said the outgoing President did not want to project himself into the political picture at a time when a new president is about to take over.

U.S. Ambush Squad Caught In Fatal Trap

SAIGON (AP)—An American squad sent out to ambush the Viet Cong in the Mekong Delta was overrun early today and all 11 men were killed or wounded.

The squad numbered nine GIs and two Tiger Scouts, former Viet Cong who had defected. A spokesman said six Americans and one of the scouts were killed, and the others were wounded.

The squad, of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, managed to radio a distress call from the area 30 miles southwest of Saigon, but reinforcements arrived too late to catch the enemy.

It was one of numerous small skirmishes across the country. Military authorities also reported enemy gunners shelled 28 airfields, army camps and district towns in the heaviest wave of overnight attacks since the Nov. 1 bombing halt of North Vietnam.

It was the second consecutive day of unusually heavy rocket and mortar assaults, and caused immediate speculation that the enemy command had ordered military pressure increased to emphasize Hanoi's displeasure with the deadlock in

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO — Acting President S. I. Hayakawa has been negotiating with the Black Students Union in an attempt to end the strike which has drastically chopped attendance at San Francisco State.

He revealed yesterday that he has been meeting informally with Roscoe Blount and others of the Black Students Union as well as various attorneys and mediators.

But when told by newsmen that there were rumors of a possible settlement of the disputes which have torn apart the campus, Hayakawa cautiously commented "there has been progress but nothing down in black and white." He added that he was "not too optimistic" at this stage about a quick settlement.

He said the participants of the secret talks "have reached a certain degree of trust in each other."

QUIET DAY

On the campus yesterday, American Federation of Teachers pickets and militant students paraded before the campus without any of the violence that has frequently marked the past two months of police-student confrontations. Two arrests were made during the day.

The AFT pickets were joined by their national union leader as they picketed in the face of possible arrest and loss of their jobs.

The teachers, who went on strike Monday, had been warned that they would be considered by college administrators to have resigned if they were absent from classes five days. They also picketed in defiance of a court injunction.

DEFY ORDER

"We will continue to strike," a union leader said. "Our attorneys tell us the state cannot declare involuntary resignations and the courts cannot stop us from picketing."

National AFT president David Selden joined the pickets and huddled with local leaders on strike strategy. Selden also denounced Gov. Ronald Reagan for proposing that the 18,000-

One Of Three Sierra-Bound Buses Crashes

A chartered ski bus — one of three provided by Diablo Charter Lines to the Mogul Ski Club of San Francisco — plunged over an embankment on Interstate Highway 80 near Sacramento today, killing one boy and injuring all others aboard.

Several young people from Marin were aboard one of the three chartered buses, but the one which crashed carried passengers from Lafayette, Orinda and Moraga in Contra Costa County, the California Highway Patrol in Sacramento reported.

The buses were en route for a day on Sierra ski slopes when the one skidded on the rain-swept highway and went over the bank.

Name of the boy killed was not immediately available. Sacramento County Hospital reported treating 26 persons, with at least one kept in surgery. The highway patrol, however, said there were 30 aboard the bus and all suffered some injuries. The patrol said all the passengers were from 9 to 18 years old.

The crash occurred shortly after 7 a.m. on the freeway at an interchange in West Sacramento, just within Yolo County.

The other two buses of the charter were ahead. The third bus was attempting to flag down the other two when it skidded, according to the highway patrol.

Petaluma's Employees Win Raises

Petaluma City Council today approved a 5 percent salary increase for unclassified employees after a one-hour closed door session.

Retroactive to Jan. 1, the increases were opposed by Councilman Robert S. Lipman, who said he felt salary negotiations should begin in January and become effective on July 1 for better budget control.

Agreeing with him, the council directed City Atty. Edouard E. Robert to prepare a resolution

Astronauts Go South After New York Fete

Astronauts Frank Borman, James A. Lovell Jr. and William A. Anders, who spent the night at the Waldorf-Astoria, were to take off from Newark Airport at about noon.

A final ceremony at the airport—the formal "presentation of the keys of the city of Newark" by Deputy Mayor Paul Reilly—was to speed the three space pioneers on their way.

Despite sub-freezing weather yesterday and winds gusting up to 27 miles an hour, New Yorkers by the hundreds of thousands turned out to cheer the spacemen on a day whose ceremonies included lunch at Lincoln Center, a state dinner at the Waldorf and a reception at the United Nations.

The main event of the day was a ticker-tape parade up the skyscraper-lined canyon of lower Broadway—renamed "Apollo Way" for the occasion—from Bowling Green to City Hall.

"It's overwhelming!" Anders said, looking at a crowd of several thousand in the 28-degree cold of noon at City Hall. "You know they're your friends when they come to see you in this weather."

"This is the greatest—the greatest American—day I have ever had in my life," said Borman's wife, Susan, holding her husband's arm. "I have never felt so warm. It's a warm city. I don't care what the temperature is outside."

A 70-second standing ovation greeted them in the U.N. Security Council chamber. Sec- Lincoln Center lunch had as its them as the men who "actually did jump over the moon."

Although the day's events included a number of formal speeches and such ceremonies as the award of New York City's gold medal to the spacemen, most of the talk was on the lighter side.

Olompali Raid Figures Deny Dope Counts

Donald C. McCoy Jr., patron of the Rancho Olompali commune north of Novato, was freed without bail along with several of his "Chosen Family" in Marin Municipal Court yesterday after pleading innocent to marijuana possession charges.

McCoy, who reportedly spent $300,000 in eight months on his colony, was the only one who entered plea. All cases were continued until Friday.

Highest bail set was $5,000 for Robert McKendrick, 35, accused of possessing heroin and possessing marijuana, LSD and methamphetamine (speed) for sale.

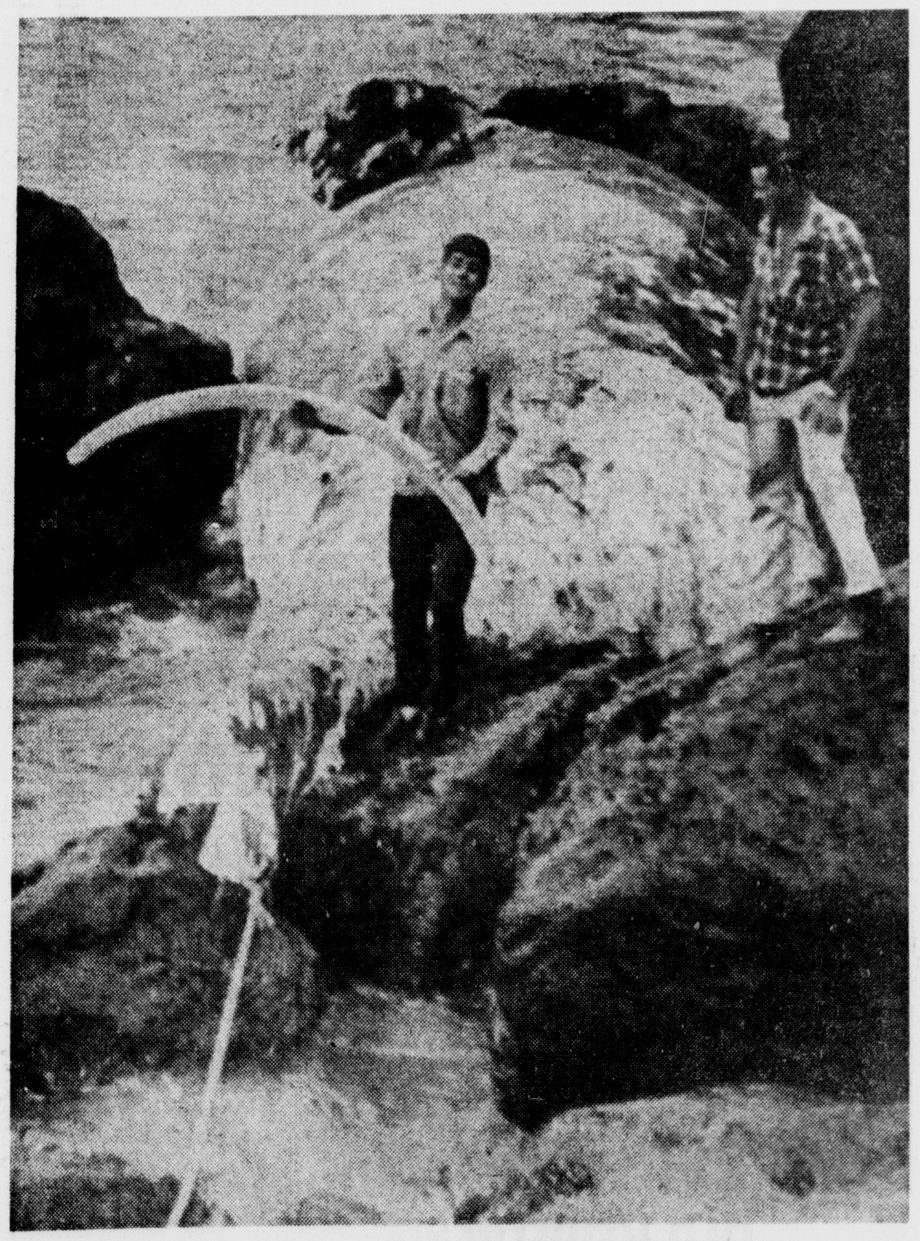
Asst. Dist. Atty. Leonard Shaw argued in vain that the bail should remain at $31,250, saying McKendrick's bedroom at the rancho contained large quantities of the drugs.

Friends reported McKendrick is a law school graduate, holds a degree in theater arts, promotes concerts, and owns a management firm in Los Angeles.

Released without bail were: Walter Hanson Doyle, 22, a Sonoma State College student who lives at the ranch; Mary Norbert, 34, a former Dominican nun, who lives at the ranch; Robert John Ellison, 23, a light show producer living at the ranch; Joseph John (Jo-Jo) D'Amore, 38, a former comedy writer who is foreman of the ranch; and Sandra Barton, 48, a former singer and dancer who lives at the ranch with her 18-year-old daughter.

The judge set $350 bail each for William David Candelario, 19, who cares for the horses at the ranch, and Olag Valeri Minakov, 30, mechanic and gardener there.

Yet to be arrested were Dennis Kalfas, accused of marijuana possession, and Stan Kris Anthony, accused of possessing heroin.



WHALE OF A FIND ON MARIN COAST

This dead whale, between 35 and 40 feet long and with a harpoon attached to a marker buoy still sticking in it, washed up yesterday in Steep Ravine, about one and one-half miles south of Stinson Beach. The carcass had been seen for several days floating with the tides off the West Marin coast. Exploring the smelly find are Bob Mendonca, who holds aloft one of the whale's ribs, and Wayne Nielsen, both of Stinson Beach. Sheriff's officers said the county probably would blast the carcass to oblivion. (Photo by Douglas Smith.)

Two Storms Pummel Marin, To Continue

Two storms brought heavy rainfall to Marin County today and are expected to continue in the Bay Area throughout tomorrow night, according to the Weather Bureau.

The storms, one centered off Vancouver Island in British Columbia and the other 700 miles west of San Francisco, are also expected to bring heavy snowfall and winds gusting to 40 miles an hour in the northern and central mountains this weekend. Travelers' warnings have been issued for blowing snow through tomorrow night.

Gale wind warnings were posted from Point Arena south to Point Conception for winds reaching 30 to 45 knots today.

In Marin County, the storms brought up to .63 inches of rain by 8 a.m.

Homes in the Black Point area were without power for 20 minutes after a tree limb fell on a power line at 1 a.m., according to Pacific Gas and Electric Co. officials.

San Rafael recorded .6 of an inches of rainfall to noon.

Other rainfall in Marin County at 8 a.m. today were: Bolinas, .63 of an inch; Civic Center, .35; Larkspur .64; Point Reyes .43; Woodacre .43; San Anselmo .30; Novato .29; Tiburon .28; Sausalito .35; Mill Valley .43; Tamalpais Vailey .42; Terra Linda .25.

In Petaluma, .28 of an inch was recorded at 8 a.m.

YOUTHS SAVE DAY — PAY DAY, THAT IS

The students, Lisa Stephenson of 58 Arguello Circle; Ron Kafton of St. Vincent's School; Bonnie Leifried of 110 Ross Valley Drive, and Jutta Kreig of 201 Auburn Street, found an envelope containing $131 in Mayfair Market, San Rafael, before school.

The turned the money over to store officials, and the frantic owner soon claimed it. Second Lt. Kent Smith, whose address was not known, told store officials that the money was his wife's recent pay.

New Careers Expert Accepts Adviser Role

By JOANNE GRANT

The co-developer of New Careers said yesterday he plans to accept Marin County's invitation to become a consultant for its New Careers program.

Dr. Arthur Pearl, professor at University of Oregon who made a brief stop in Marin yesterday, said the county has asked him to work with its staff to review concepts and to narrow areas of disagreement between his proposal and that of the county administrator's office.

The contract offered by the county, pending approval by the board of supervisors, would give Pearl a fee not to exceed $700.

If the supervisors approve hiring Pearl, he will begin consultation on Jan. 24, he said.

County Administrator Alan Bruce said the item would be on the board's agenda as soon as Pearl returns the contract.

Earlier Pearl said he would not be a consultant unless the program adopted by Marin County included the concepts he believes should be in the program. He also has disagreed with the costs built into a county program developed by Asst. Administrator Thomas Cam-

REAGAN UNVEILS GOLD DUST TWINS

Governor, Lieutenant 'Think Alike,' Press Told At Capital Introduction

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan and incoming Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, dubbed the political "gold dust twins" by Reagan, held their first public meeting yesterday and agreed they think alike.

Reinecke, a Republican businessman-politician like Reagan, promptly declared his intention to run for lieutenant governor in 1970, a post he will not hold for at least nine days.

The Tujunga congressman will succeed Robert H. Finch in the state's No. 2 political post when Finch is sworn in as federal secretary of health, education and welfare later in the month. Finch's unexpired term is two years.

Reagan and Reinecke held a joint news conference yesterday to introduce Reinecke to Capitol reporters. Reinecke said in response to a question that he had no plans "at the present time" to run for governor.

PLANS ON RACE?

He volunteered, "I might say right now I don't mind announcing my candidacy for election in 1970 for lieutenant governor."

Reinecke said he and the governor had discussed no future political plans, including whether Reagan would seek a second term in two years.

He said if Reagan "wants to talk to me about it, that's fine," but added that was not the reason he accepted the job.

Reinecke, who will be a University of California regent and state college trustee, said he had a "completely open mind" about disorder at San Francisco State. He said he would work "very hard" to find solutions to issues.

But he echoed Reagan's hardline on campus disorder when he warned, "I have no intention of yielding to ultimatums or intimidation."

He said if existing grievance procedures needed "modification" he would support doing so.

CHANGED PARTY

The third term congressman, like Reagan a Democrat who changed his affiliation to Republican, called himself "somewhat of a conservative" on fiscal matters and that he agreed with Reagan's "creative society" philosophy.

But he said, "the people who claim to be marching for various purposes call themselves liberals and yet I find myself in great sympathy with the objectives of their particular purpose of the moment, although I don't always agree with their methods."

Reagan told reporters he and Reinecke "are in agreement about the same things." He said the similarities in their backgrounds "are cropping up to such an extent that you and I may become known as the gold dust twins in politics."

Loaded Gun Charge Leads To Probation

David Reese Darnell, 34, of Point Reyes Station, was given a 10-day suspended jail sentence and placed on two years probation in Marin Municipal Court yesterday for carrying a loaded gun in his car Oct. 31 in West Marin.

A condition of probation is that Darnell surrender all his firearms for destruction by the sheriff, Judge Hadden W. Roth said.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lobbyist Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Donald W. Cleary, 64, lobbyist in Sacramento for the city of San Francisco for 23 years, died in a hospital yesterday.

His expense account reputedly was the largest of any lobbyist in the state and he had an enviable reputation for wheedling — or suppressing—legislation in the interests of San Francisco.

Cleary planned to retire next summer. Death was due to complications following surgery for cancer.

He is survived by widow, a son and daughter.

Mace Weighed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Chemical Mace is less dangerous than a "billyclub or a bullet in the belly," but is not entirely safe or without danger, according to San Francisco's chief health officer.

Dr. Ellis Sox yesterday said improper use of the controversial chemical irritant may lead to permanent eye damage and even death by suffocation.

In a three-page report to the board of supervisors, Sox recommended that Mace be kept away from a person's face or eyes and that persons sprayed directly in these areas should be rushed to emergency hospitals for treatment.

HIJACKER RETURNS — Carrying his daughter Patricia Sue, 2, army deserter Willis Jessie, 27, steps off a plane in Miami and into the arms of the FBI on charges of hijacking a charter plane to Cuba Aug. 4, taking the girl with him. He surrendered last night, returning via Mexico City for the daughter's sake, he said. (UPI Telephoto)

Gump's Is Sold

SAN FRANCISCO — (UPI) Gump's, an internationally known fine arts store with a 108-year history in San Francisco, will be sold to Crowell Collier and Macmillan Inc.

Sale price was estimated at $12 million.

If the sale is approved by the boards of directors of both firms, the store will function as an autonomous subsidiary of the diversified publishing and educational supplies firm.

Red Rebels Killed

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Burmese troops killed more than 150 Chinese-trained Naga tribesmen rebels in the dense jungles of upper Burma during the past three months, the Press Trust of India said yesterday. The report said about 1,000 rebels were carrying out forcible collections of money and food in the region.

Smoke Protest

Hot Lava Kills

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A 30-year-old woman was killed by hot lava and at least three other persons are missing and feared dead in the eruption of central Java's Merapi volcano, Antara news agency reported today.

The volcano which erputed Tuesday for the second time since 1961, has destroyed more than 400 homes and 1,000 acres of rice fields, Antara said.

Leash Law Set

BERKELEY (UPI) — Dogs will have to be leashed or at least in sight and control of their owners henceforth when they come on the University of California campus.

School officials announced the policy yesterday and said the dog problem had been the subject of the second largest number of written complaints received in the last three years.

Bomb Hoax

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — About 400 employees of the Kansas City Star were evacuated from the building today after an anonymous caller warned that a bomb was set to explode in the building at 4 a.m.

Workers returned to their jobs after police had made an hour-long search of the building.

Moon-Destined Trio Relieved By Choice

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The three astronauts picked to carry America's flag to the moon's surface said yesterday they felt thrilled to have received the historic assignment and "a feeling of relief" that competition for the job was over.

Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin (Buz) Aldrin also said they did not know yet which of the two moonlanders—Armstrong and Aldrin—would be first to step out on the chalk-white lunar landscape. But the place they hope to do it is the one surveyed by the Apollo 8 crew at Christmas.

Since the moon-orbiting flight of Apollo 8, they said, the name of this three-by-five mile spot on the right-hand edge of the moon's face has been changed to "Landing Site One" because it looks so promising.

Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin were named by the space agency Thursday to fly Apollo 11 to the moon and land there. They said the soonest they could blast off would be July 15.

Plans call for Armstrong, a 38-year-old civilian who commands the crew, and Aldrin to make the landing while Collins orbits alone in the Apollo command ship 69 miles above them.

One astronaut will step out on the moon, leaving footprints about two inches deep, some 45 minutes before the second man leaves their special landing craft. But it will take months of practice in make-believe missions to work out which man is first.

All three men are veteran space pilots.

Armstrong piloted Gemini 8 to its successful emergency splashdown in the Pacific Ocean after a wildly firing steering rocket whipped it out of control.

Collins, a 38-year-old Air Force lieutenant colonel, was the spacewalker of the Gemini 10 flight. Aldrin, who made the Gemini 12 spacewalk, is a colonel in the Air Force and will be 39 on Jan. 20.

In addition, Armstrong and Aldrin served on the backup crew for Apollo 8, and Collins went through most of the training for Apollo 8 before an operation knocked him off the prime crew.

The spacemen will spend 21 hours on the moon, but will only be out on the lunar surface for two or three hours. During that time they hope to set out three experiments, take numerous pictures and collect 50 pounds of moon rock to bring back.

Although it will not be known until after their mission how well man can perform in the one-sixth gravity of the moon, the astronauts were emphatic in expressing the view that man should land there.

"At this stage of the game (not landing) would be the equivalent of Columbus sailing within 60 miles of the coast of the New World and then turning back toward Queen Isabella and going home," Collins said.

Robbers Execute Guard, Elude Armored Car Chase

BERKELEY (AP) — Virtually without clues, police sought three — possibly four — men for the execution-type killing of a Brink's armored car guard Friday. One man was apprehended.

The slain guard was Joseph W. Martin, 49, of San Leandro.

They fled on foot, leaving a 9 mm. submachine gun, a .45-caliber pistol and a bag containing the $6,000 they stole in a crowded parking lot across the street from the University of California.

Police in North Oakland soon picked up a man identified by the FBI as Willie Smith, 26. Smith and those sought are Negroes.

The FBI said Smith had no police record, but that his fingerprints were on file because he had been in military service. He was held in the Berkeley jail.

Police declined to speculate which of the robbers killed Martin, but Police Lt. Tom Johnson said the guard was "literally executed."

Johnson said the slayer grabbed Martin as the guard was entering the Consumers Co-op Store with the bag of cash, dragged him 70 feet, threw him to the ground and "fired four shots point blank, standing right over him."

Martin was hit in the head, chest and both arms. He was carrying cash into the store and was to pick up its bank deposit.

As the killer fled to a waiting car, a firebomb was thrown into the parking lot, but failed to explode.

Scores of persons in the store and on the lot saw a portion of the tragedy, but none was hurt.

Neither was anyone in the ensuing chase by Godwin, the truck's red light flashing and siren screaming.

The Negroes fired frequently at Godwin's truck. They hit it and a number of parked automobiles and sprayed several bullets into houses along the route from Berkeley into Oakland.

An unidentified witness thought one of the fleeing men was limping as he left the abandoned getaway car, presumably hit by one of four bullets from Godwin's .38.

Police had virtually no clues. Witnesses couldn't agree whether there were four or five men in the getaway car.

Johnson said the only clue police have is that one man was wearing a red shirt, plaid coat and a red cap and had a moustache.

Las Gallinas Board Selects New Officers

Sesto F. Lucchi, Lucas Valley engineer, has been elected president of the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board for 1969.

He was chosen Thursday night to succeed John E. Duckett. The directors also named Lelia Sayers as secretary of the board, succeeding A. M. Petrofsky. Mrs. Sayers is also office secretary of the district.

In other business, the directors asked their insurance carrier, Walter Carter, to reopen an investigation of damage claims filed by two residents of Lucas Valley.

Robert L. Sideroff of 324 Arias Drive and James Elliott of 325 Arias Drive charged that the main sewer line clogged last Nov. 22, and the water backup caused damages of $1,082 and $828, respectively.

Mrs. Sayers said Carter had notified the district that the line blockage was not caused by district negligence, but the directors decided to ask him to reopen the investigation.

The directors set an adjourned meeting for 7:30 p.m. Jan. 16 to hear from Carter.

Marin City Girl Hit With Bottle

A 17-year-old Marin City girl was attacked in the 200 block of Drake Avenue about 8 p.m. yesterday, sheriff's deputies reported today.

Maxine Hall of 43 Cole Drive told deputies she was crossing Drake Avenue when a youth threw her to the ground and started hitting her with a wine bottle. Deputies said witnesses confirmed the girl's story.

The assailant had not been found today.

Bizarre Details Come To Light In Mackle Kidnaping Hearing

MIAMI (UPI)—Gary Steven Krist's penchant for the bizarre in the kidnaping of Barbara Jane Mackle last month was disclosed at a preliminary jail hearing yesterday in which the 23-year-old convict was bound over for grand jury action on three federal extortion charges.

His bond was continued at $500,000—the same amount involved in the kidnap ransom.

Testimony by three FBI men and a Southern Bell Telephone Co. security chief alleged that Krist, just before entombing the half-chloroformed and drugged Miss Mackle, demanded she "wake up and smile" for ransom photographs.

In a ransom note buried in her backyard, her millionaire land-developer father, Robert Mackle, was ordered to "dress in an all white outfit" and to use his Lincoln when delivering the $500,000 in $20 bills.

Mackle also was told to pack the bills in a suitcase whose dimensions were to be exactly 31.5 inches by 18.75 inches.

In a "head-shot" photograph of Miss Mackle, mailed to her home, a sign with the lone word "kidnaped" was stuck under the chin.

The ransom instructions to Mackle warned "any deviation from this outline will result in your death" as well as the death of his daughter.

Conviction on the extortion charges could result in a maximum penalty of 45 years in prison for Krist. The government dropped federal kidnap charges because Miss Mackle, abducted Dec. 17 from an Atlanta motel, was not transported across state lines.

The hearing was held in the second-floor chapel of the jail for security reasons. Krist, brought down from the fourth floor cell he has occupied since his capture on the edge of the Florida Everglades Dec. 22, was unshaven and his hair was unkempt.

FBI agent Joseph St. Pierre, citing details given him by Miss Mackle, said Krist and his alleged accomplice, Ruth Eisemann-Schier, transported the girl to secluded woods outside Atlanta.

Krist called her "Ruth" and she called him "George"—he had been using the name "George Deacon." After half-chloroforming her in a station wagon and giving her an injection of tranquilizer, Miss Mackle was laid out on the cold ground beside the coffin-like box Krist allegedly had built to hide her in.

"George" told her he had personally "tested" the box, which he called a "capsule," St. Pierre said. "He told her not to use the pump unless the capsule sprang a leak."

He also told her there was a special "sugar pill" embedded in the wall of the box. If water seeped in, the pill would melt and set off an alarm, Miss Mackle was told.

In addition, if she did use the pump, a "device" in a nearby house would set off an alarm "and they would know she was in trouble," St. Pierre testified.

"She said she used the pump twice but nobody came to see what was going on."

Doris Day Wins Poll

"The Doris Day Show" on CBS-TV has been voted "favorite new television show" of the 1968-69 season by the readers of TV Radio Mirror in the magazine's annual reader poll.

Named as the "least liked shows" of the season was ABC-TV's "Don Rickles Show," with "The Ugliest Girl in Town," ABC-TV and "The Beautiful Phyllis Diller Show," NBC-TV close runners up in this "Dubious Award" category. All three shows have been canceled by the networks.

Big Hoss Is No Dumb Ox Off Television

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Dan Blocker, the lovable lout of television's "Bonanza," portrays Hoss Cartwright with such authority he ultimately is confused with the big dumb ox seen on the tube.

Physically he is an imposing six-feet, four-inches tall and weighs 280 pounds.

Intellectually he is a giant among actors. He has earned bachelor of science and master or arts degrees in the academic world.

HE IS VITALLY interested and active in politics. A man of strong convictions, he supports civil rights and becomes almost apoplectic at the thought of bigotry.

On the other hand, he is prone to strong language, as hard and earthy as the Texas land from which he sprang. He is at once tough and gentle, belligerent and soft: a complex man of many attitudes and moods who seldom has been captured in word or print.

As a boy in the dust bowl that was Texas, Blocker was fortunate if he could find an unpatched pair of overalls. He was given a new pair of shoes every two years.

"WE WERE POORER than poor," the big man boomed, pulling at a noontime drink. "When my father's farm failed —and he cleared that 80 acres over a period of six years with his bare hands and an ax — he became a blacksmith in deep east Texas.

"Later he moved us to O'Donnell, Tex. He had lived alone there in a dugout for awhile because of the dust and winds. And my sister died of pneumonia.

"It was a time and place where only the strong survived."

THOSE HARD years in Texas made Blocker a "progressive liberal." He doesn't like to identify himself as a Democrat or Republican and rarely identifies himself as a Texan. He has his reasons.

"I get angry when I hear people belittle Texas," he said. "They're talking about the loud mouth braggarts with airplanes and oil wells. Those guys are professional Texans and amateur human beings."

Blocker also is aware that he isn't a handsome leading man and never will be. That suits him.

"I'M SO HAPPY I think it's a frame-up," he said, laughing. "Audiences want someone to identify with. It began with Wally Beery, and Marjorie Main and Anna Magnani helped it along.

"If it weren't for my size I never would have played Hoss. So my bulk has given me entree to innumerable career opportunities. But there are hundreds of thousands of outsize guys. So I had to capitalize on my talent too.

"My face? I look like Porky Pig. And who can hate him?"

UNTIL TWO months ago Blocker lived in a $37,000 tract house in the San Fernando Valley. Now he has moved into an enormous old eight - bedroom mansion in a fashionable but decaying part of Los Angeles.

He has had the 43-year-old home fitted with new plumbing and rewired. Around the house Dan is mistaken for a workman. His favorite outfit is overalls (blue denim), a polo shirt and $7 shoes. He wears the outfit because it's comfortable, not to create an image.

BLOCKER DOESN'T need an image. He earns approximately $15,000 per episode of the NBC-TV series with 100 per cent residuals—in reality, $30,000 a week.

Dan is married to his childhood sweetheart, Delphia Lee Parker. They are parents of twin daughters, Debra and Danna, 15; David, 14, and Dirk, 11.

Papa Blocker is devoted to his offspring, participating in their activities and filling the generation gap in his own family with his time and love.

"I HAVE A baby face and some women have called me cuddly," Blocker gruffed. "Well I'm built for comfort not speed. Maybe that's why I try to build racing cars, to make up for my lack of speed."

Blocker is president of Vinagroon Motor Racing Inc. The company builds Grand Prix cars for road racing. They cost from $20,000 to $75,000. So far it has been a losing proposition economically, but Dan enjoys nothing more than tinkering with automobiles.

"I am one of the 10 best experts on the internal combustion engine," he said. "And during races I'm in the pits, working on the cars. I can't drive them because I'm too big to get in 'em."

DAN BLOCKER
An immense man

A FORMER school teacher, Dan taught government, history, drama, English, biology, and coached football at schools in Texas, New Mexico and California before becoming an actor.

At little Sul Ross College in Alpine, Tex., he was a football star, but didn't like it. He was always afraid of seriously injuring the smaller men who played opposite him.

"I liked boxing better because it was a fairer contest," Blocker says today. "I had 43 amateur fights and lost only one —the last one by a split decision."

THEN BLOCKER, who some people mistake for an ignorant galoot, said something else:

"I hate a bully worse than anything; I'm a big man. I don't like fights. But if I see a 180-pound guy beating on a 130-pound guy, you can damn betcha I'll take care of the big guy in a hurry.

"Some big men are bullies because they are insensitive to the power of their strength. I never forget it."

DAN HAS MIXED feelings about "Bonanza."

He is fond of his co-stars, Lorne Greene and Mike Landon. He also knows the scripts are repetitive after 11 years. But he is proud that it has been high in the Nielsen ratings for more than a decade. He knows the show is responsible for making color television a reality and helping to sell millions of sets.

Blocker is not deluded by the artistic merits—or lack of them —on "Bonanza."

"I haven't read a complete 'Bonanza' script for eight years," he sighed. "I just learn my lines and do my best."

THE ACTOR recently completed "Lady in Cement," playing a villain opposite Frank Sinatra. Three or four other movies are in the offing for the big fellow.

Once "Bonanza" runs its course Blocker is a good bet to go on to a long and successful career in motion pictures playing leading roles as well as character parts.

Although Hoss Cartwright isn't very bright, Dan Blocker has imbued him with some of his own personality and character. And that, perhaps, is why almost everybody harbors a special warmth for big old lovable Hoss.

STATE

The strike effect on over-all attendance was severe with a campus officials' survey showing only about 21 per cent of the students went to afternoon classes yesterday.

In other developments:

San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, a strong backer of Hayakawa, also denounced Reagan's bayonet statement in a talk before the Commonwealth Club. He said "state intervention with National Guardsmen and their bayoneted rifles" would be unnecessary. He blamed the crisis on "hard-core troublemakers who thirst for violence" and said the police could maintain order.

The California Teachers Association denounced the strike by teachers at State as "a raw power grab" to bolster union membership. A spokesman said "of itself, the AFT does not have the membership or the power to close the schools so they are using the students for a power base."

Brandeis University President Morris B. Abram today suspended the 65 Negro students who took over the university communications center four days ago in Waltham, Mass.

Abram lifted the amnesty he had granted the students after they failed to appear for a 9 a.m. meeting.

Earlier it had appeared fate of the Negro student uprising hinged on an agreement by the faculty to establish an Afro-American Studies Department. Abram had said yesterday it was within the province of the faculty to meet the Negro ultimatum for the department.

Ninety union teachers picketed at entrances to San Jose State College yesterday despite a statewide rule providing for the firing of teachers who stay off their jobs for more than five days.

The teachers, members of the American Federation of Teachers, began their strike Wednesday in sympathy with the AFT strike at San Francisco State.

A group of Fresno State College teachers yesterday set up an informational noon-hour picket in sympathy with striking teachers at San Francisco State and San Jose State colleges.

Four Shaken Up By Collision

A Fairfax woman and her three passengers suffered neck sprains in a rear-end auto collision yesterday at 5:50 p.m. on Highway 101 at the top of Alto Hill.

The driver, Phylis D. Griffin, 39, of 580 Bolinas Road, and her passengers, Suzanne Ruland, 31, of the same address; Juanita Delaney, 46, of 128 Forrest Avenue, Fairfax, and Maxine Nielson, 37, of 16 Upper Fremont Drive, San Rafael, were treated at Marin General Hospital.

Driver of the car which hit the rear of Miss Griffin's car was Gino A. Gauci, 23, of San Bruno, according to the California Highway Patrol.

Recreation Parlor Licenses Suspended

Both on-sale and off-sale liquor licenses of George's Recreation Parlor at 842 Fourth Street, San Rafael, were suspended yesterday by the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

The suspension was ordered on grounds that the licensee, George E. Lefevre, had permitted sales of liquor to a minor and permitted a minor to consume the liquor on the premises. The suspension is to begin Jan. 23.

SOME GAS SHORTAGES

Hollywood service station worker shows troubles resulting from the nation-wide refinery strike today, but major gasoline companies say their customers are getting plenty of fuel. Despite Stinson Beach reports of heating gas shortages, Petaluma suppliers today said the only sufferers are mountain towns hit by snow-blocked deliveries rather than lack of fuel available. Sanitary Board Votes Projects

A $57,715 capital improvement program for the current fiscal year has been approved by the Novato Sanitary District board.

The capital projects will be added to the next fiscal budget if they are not completed this year, said engineer-manager Charles Joseph.

Among the improvements scheduled are: Marin Village pump station improvement, $12,600; dump truck $5,800; improvements to recirculating system and pumps, $10,000; improvements to chlorination, $4,025; improvements to the water supply, $4,010; alarm system, $2,200; Villa Anita pump station, $3,930, and engineering and miscellaneous, $12,000.

The board, meeting Thursday, authorized Joseph to request that the Bay Region Water Quality Control Board hold off enforcing its new regulations on discharge into the bay until after the Feb. 19 meeting of the waterboard. Arguments will be given the board at that time.

Ex-Heart Aide Sued For Divorce

George Beal Willcutt, former executive director of the Marin County Heart Association, was sued for divorce in Marin Superior Court yesterday by his wife of nine years, Eunice B. Willcutt.

Mrs. Willcutt charged her husband with cruelty. They married Nov. 28, 1959, in Reno, and separated Nov. 29, 1968, she reported.

Willcutt, who left the heart association for a job with a San Francisco sporting goods firm in 1967, has also been an assistant field director for the American Red Cross in the Far East and Europe, and field representative for the American Cancer Society in Santa Clara County.

Pedestrian Hurt Crossing Street

A San Rafael woman was injured yesterday when she was hit by a car while crossing Bridgeway at Bay Street, Sausalito, police reported.

Police said Miss Peterson was hit by a car driven by Richard Joseph Lee, 22, a soldier stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Miss Peterson told police that she was crossing in the crosswalk when hit.

No Meeting

The meeting of the Black Point Improvement Association scheduled for last night was cancelled due to illness of several members. The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Feb. 14 at 81 Manzanita Avenue.

Election Set

The Bolinas Harbor District board will hold a special meeting to elect 1969 officers at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the district office on Wharf Road, Bolinas.

RAISE

for the Jan. 20 meeting establishing that policy.

City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer said changing the salary increases to a fiscal year plan would simplify preparation of the budget. "We should allow at least six months to talk with employee unions and groups," he said.

Meyer's five per cent raise increases his monthly salary from $1,600 to $1,680. Councilman Phillip L. Joerger voted against this saying he had compared salaries of city managers in Vacaville, Woodland and Novato, and said he felt an increase was not justified.

Joerger also opposed an increase for David D. Young, city engineer and director of public works. Young's salary was raised from $1,400 per month to $1,470. Joerger said he felt the salary was presently above the average of comparable cities.

City Clerk Lillian Nommsen's salary was raised from $627 per month to $658. The five percent increase for City Atty. Robert raises his monthly pay from $735 to $772.

It was not noted what the increases will mean to the city in additional costs.

The Petaluma City Council also:

PLANNING ORDINANCE — Gave first reading to an ordinance permiting the planning commission to add conditional uses in commercial zones.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT — Directed a letter to the state Division of Highways requesting tht that Baywood Drive be extended to intersect with Perry Lane and provide easy access to the Lakeville highway, State Highway 116.

"It would only happen in New York," Mayor John V. Lindsay said of the wrong-way capsule.

The astronauts were all but mobbed at the banquet by well-wishers among the 2,500 guests who besieged the head table seeking autographs. Detectives assigned to guard them were overwhelmed by the crowd.

"This started as a state dinner but turned out to be a love-in," quipped New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, the spacemen's host.

the Paris peace talks.

American-South Vietnamese headquarters said over-all casualties were light. More than 100 South Vietnamese and a lesser number of Americans were reported wounded and 10 helicopters were damaged.

The attacks were concentrated on outposts and towns in the thickly populated Mekong Delta south of Saigon and on American and South Vietnamese camps guarding the northwestern approaches to the capital.

Collision Hurts Motorcyclist

A 19-year-old San Francisco motorcyclist suffered a broken pelvis yesterday at 2:35 p.m. when he collided with a Pacific Telephone Co. truck on Panoramic Highway, about three miles south of Sequoia Road.

Bradley O. Hauersen was treated at Marin General Hospital and then transferred to Unity Hospital in San Francisco, where he was reported in fair condition today.

The California Highway Patrol said Hauersen rounded a curve and went over the center line, colliding with the truck, driven by Donald C. Smith, 40, of 24 Dellwood Court, San Rafael.

Citizen's Arrest After Squabble

Frank M. Smart, 26, of 75 Oakmont Avenue, San Rafael, was booked into Marin County Jail early today on a citizen's arrest charging assault and battery and disturbing the peace.

Police said Joyce Ann Post, 8 Charlotte Drive, San Rafael, reported she and Smart had been out for dinner and met Ron Wilder of 260 Canal Street. She said all three went to her home. An argument ensued and, she charged, Smart attempted to throw Wilder out.

Smart was held on bail of $315 to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Youths Arrested In Stolen Car

Two San Francisco youths were booked into Marin County Jail early today on suspicion of grand theft after they were found in a stolen car in Marin City.

Sheriff's deputies said Larry E. Bell, 19, and Robert Jackie Spears, 19, were found in a car parked on Drake Avenue in Marin City at 12:10 a.m. A check disclosed the car had been stolen Nov. 22 from Boas Pontiac in San Francisco, deputies said.

The two were held without bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

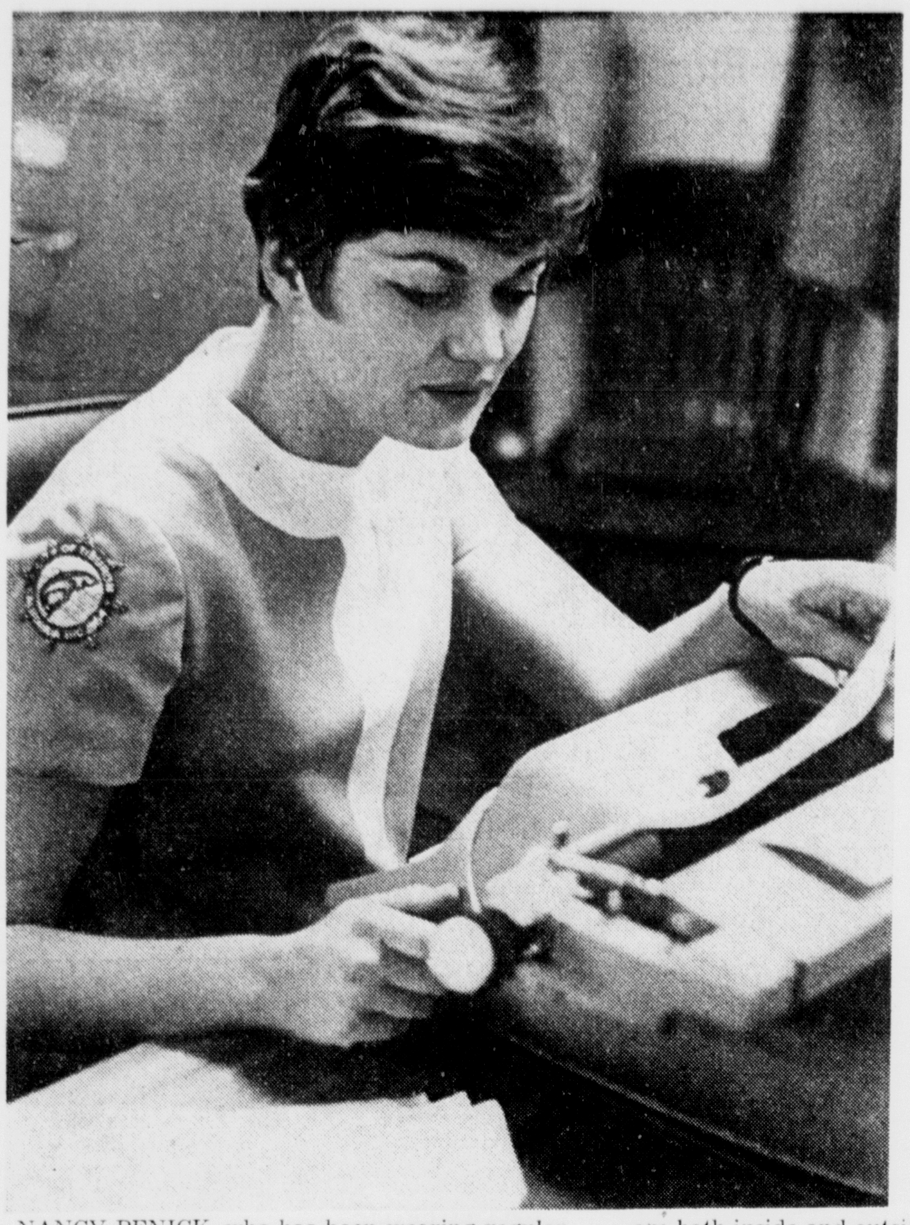
NO APPOINTMENT NECESSARY



NANCY PENICK, who has been wearing regular street clothes in her job with the Tiburon Police Department, yesterday unveiled her uniform, a chic cocoa and white A-line dress. Nancy's duties are both inside and outside of the office. Left, she performs clerical duties, checking a report she has typed. Then she literally dons another cap, part of her uniform, with the police insignia above the visor, and writes a traffic citation for an illegally parked automobile. Nancy's shoulder bag and shoes are also part of the uniform. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

Chic Uniform For Tiburon Police

By JOAN LISETOR

Three months ago the City of Tiburon hired Nancy Penick to serve its police department as a parking controller-clerk. Nancy is the first woman to work for the Tiburon Police Department and has been wearing street clothes on the job.

Yesterday, Nancy unveiled her uniform, described by Tiburon City Manager Lawrence D. Rose as a costume that is a bright and friendly symbol.

"We wanted a distinctive as well as attractive symbol of public service," he said. "This seemed to be an amiable way to do it."

While performing her duties, which consist of writing parking citations, assisting Tiburon motorists and being girl Friday to the police force, Nancy wears a chic A-line dress. When duty calls outside she has a double-breasted trench coat and a perky white naugahyde cap with a visor.

The dress is a cocoa color of a lightweight, tightly woven wool. A white wool knit stripe goes around the neck and down the center of the front of the dress. A beige shoulder bag and matching, stylish, low-heel shoes coordinate the outfit, which erases a police matron image without taking away from the dignity of her position.

The design was the work of the people on the staff of the city of Tiburon.

The women had a say about what was stylish and comfortable with the men holding out for feminity. Their combined interests on this unusual task is an unqualified success.

Nancy, who is a native of Marin, is an attractive addition to the Tiburon Police Department. There is little doubt she will evoke envy from other uniformed women employees.

HELEN HELP US!

Curious Daughter Questions Why She Doesn't Know Cousins

DEAR HELEN:

I'm an average teen with just one problem.

Ever since I can remember I've never seen anyone from my mother's side of the family: cousins, parents, no one. She never talks about them—it's as if they never existed. I've only known her sister, whom I'm very close to. I'd ask her, but I'm afraid she wouldn't tell me either.

When I was younger, I'd ask my mother what her name was before she married, and she'd say, "I'll tell you later," but later never came.

Helen, don't I have a right to know about my mother's childhood, my maternal grandparents, where they lived? We don't even have pictures of her when she was a child. My father acts touchy on the subject too.

I love my parents very much and we get along fine. Why won't they share this secret with me? Is there anything I can do to find out without coming right out and asking?

—SIMONE

DEAR SIMONE:

Sometimes it's best to let sleeping family skeletons lie. Perhaps your mother's childhood was so miserable that she prefers living in the present, without memories. If you stir them up, with too many questions, you may begin a "recall" that could upset her present happy life.

Why not discuss this with your father? I'm sure he'll level with you.

—H.

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree 100 percent with "Outdated" who thinks a man should keep himself pure if he expects chasity in his girl. I just broke off with a nice guy, aged 30 who had the same ideas as she. He feels that partaking of the goodies before marriage is a sin greater than murder. He seems to feel that on your wedding night things work out perfectly and being married cures all ignorance. Can you imagine the amount of confusion if two people of this type marry? I and most of my fellow females feel that one partner should be informed mentally and physically in the art of love because love is the most beautiful thing one can experience and it shouldn't be bungled.

The basic knowledge must be gained preferably by a young man having "been around" before the big step of marriage.

Maybe "Outdated" would like to meet my ex-boyfriend. After talking with him about the physical side of marriage, I found him quite inadequate in his attitudes and figured our relationship would never work out.

MISS E. E. G.

DEAR HELEN:

These girls who say they refuse to tolerate a double standard make me furious. Men's psychological and sexual dispositions make it nearly impossible for them to conform to a set of standards by which women can quite easily abide. To insist on a virgin husband is to completely disregard all the more important qualities of a man. As you said, Helen, "Let the past be forgotten."

My fiance was a junior James Bond, but he hasn't looked at a girl since he met me. I think his youthful flirtations (that's all they were) have made him more understanding of the wacky workings of female emotions. He is certainly sensitive to my every mood. I haven't been a saint, so I can't blame him for following hard-to-control emotions with willing girls.

—ME

DEAR HELEN:

Do you have any faith in the moral standards of today's young men? If so, why were your comments to "Outmoded Virgin" so discouraging? There are many young men willing to wait, and those men are looking for girls willing to wait. I am one of them—and I found my girl!

Garden Path Joins Other Shops At Ross Art And Garden Center

Opening days are festive occasions and so it will be Tuesday when the Garden Path is revealed to the public as the newest display room at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

It is a garden-crafts shop, located in the little Bottle House next to the Pixie Playground. Emphasis will be on unusual yet inexpensive garden decor — vases, pots, jars, plant-stands, chimes, aprons, hats, and other garden-oriented articles. Plants, too, will be offered with cymbidium orchids featured at the opening.

The garden-crafts shop is operated by the Path Finders Section, organized just a little more than a year ago to find new ways of assisting in upkeep and promoting interest in the non-profit cultural center.

Garden Path plans are to be open from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesdays only at the start. Visitors enroute are encouraged to stop at the Path Finders Magnolia Tea Room to enjoy their popular Tuesday luncheon. Reservations for the Jan. 14 opening date may be made at the center office.

Mrs. Sergie Gregoriev, Garden Path chairman, said that "enlargement of this new venture depends upon public acceptance of the idea, on growth in membership, and the continuing ability to obtain suitable materials from local artists, craftsmen and garden enthusiasts." She invites those interested to call the Marin Art and Garden Center.

FLORENCE DUNN, worthy grand matron of Reveille Chapter in Salinas, Order of Eastern Star, to the 11th district, will make her official visit to the San Rafael Chapter Monday. She will be accompanied by Richard T. Brassell Jr., worthy grand patron of Guardian Chapter, Southgate, and members of the grand family of the Grand Chapter, State of California.

Frances Goodwin, associate matron of the local chapter, has announced dinner for 6 p.m. to be followed by a meeting at 8 p.m., both at the Masonic Temple, Fourth and Lootens Place in San Rafael.

Participating chapters of the 11th district are Morning Star 61 of Petaluma, San Rafael 215, Mill Valley 219, Novato 609 and Fairfax 594 and Larkspur.

MRS. ERVIN C. TIPTON will speak at the Dorcas Society of the United Church of Christ in Fairfax Tuesday. Her topic will be "Russia Today," based on her experiences and impressions gained on a trip with the Doug Henderson tour last fall.

Dessert will be served at 1 p.m. with the program to follow.

A MEETING of the San Rafael Club of the California Federation of Woman's Clubs, Junior Membership, will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ronald Bender, 7 Corte Verano, San Rafael. Membership in the new club is open to women between the ages of 18 and 35.

Included in the program will be two speakers who will relay to Juniors the needs for Marin County and opportunities for possible projects related to youth, conservation, mental health and fine arts. Speaking will be Mrs. Marion Kelley, executive director of the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, and Mel Augustine, a supervisor in the Marin County probation office.

MARIN COUNTY Alpha Phi Alumni will meet at the home of Mrs. Coleman Sellers in Lucas Valley on Tuesday.

A sandwich exchange will be held at noon, and plans will be made for the annual fund-raising luncheon to be held in February.

McGruder-Grover Vows Recited In San Rafael

St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael was the setting for the wedding Saturday afternoon of Laurel Grover to Thomas Michael McGruder, both of San Rafael.

Laise Moran of San Rafael was Laurel's honor attendant, and the bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Amy Grover of San Rafael, Gail Grover of Sunnyvale, Marie McDonald and Kathleen Ponti, both of San Rafael.

Michael Pinske of Novato served as best man, and the ushers included the bride's brothers, Paul and Tom Grover of San Rafael, Kemp Dowdy of Novato and Ronald Durham of Petaluma.

A reception was held afterward at the Meadow Club, and the couple left on a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe. They will make their home in San Rafael.

Laurel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo E. Grover of San Rafael. A San Rafael High School graduate, she attended Marin Catholic High School and College of Marin. She is employed with McKenzie's Junior Vogue in San Rafael. Michael Grover of San Rafael is also her brother, and her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Vern E. Grover and Mrs. Allan H. Hillman of San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McGruder of San Rafael are parents of the bridegroom. He was graduated from San Rafael High School, attended College of Marin and is employed with Tom McGruder's Men's Shop in San Rafael.

His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Truett of San Rafael and Mrs. L. R. Durham of Petaluma.

Douglas Parkhursts Wed In Mill Valley

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter L. Townsend of Greenbrae, the bride chose Linda Hyna of Mill Valley as her honor attendant, and her sister, Dorothy Townsend, as the bridesmaid.

The bride's brother, Russell Townsend, was best man and Timothy Morgan ushered.

A reception followed at Dominic's restaurant in San Rafael. After a wedding trip to Southern California the newlyweds will live in Tiburon.

The bride is a Redwood High School graduate and attended College of Marin. She is employed with Pacific Telephone Co. in San Francisco.

Douglas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Nagel A. Parkhurst of Mill Valley. He is a graduate of the San Rafael Military Academy, College of Marin and the Academy of Arts in San Francisco and the Art Center School in Los Angeles. He is employed in San Francisco with Lanophere Associates.

Men Change From Tuxedo

Instead of the classic black tuxedo, men are greeting their dates these days in brown dinner suits, matching brown vests, pleated apricot shirts and apricot bow ties. And for the first time, America's largest manufacturer of men's formals is featuring green, grey, brown and medium blue tuxedos.

Lapels, in most cases, are vying for the spotlight with the classic shawl collar. Most are faced with satin that's coordinated to the color of the tuxedo. Formal separates also are "in" with men who like to express individuality. The separates come in sizzling solids, perky prints, brocades and velvet.

Yardage Chart Saves Fabric

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR READERS:

I have had many questions about the clinging quality of bonded fabrics: Seems that even if the garment has been lined it still clings like skin. Our readers have even used static-free taffeta slips to no avail. If any of you have solved the problem of knits that cling, please write me at once so that I may pass this information on to eager readers.

DEAR EUNICE:

I find it frustrating to purchase more fabric than necessary simply because it was wider than the pattern called for. Is there any type of chart that would list camparative yardages to be purchased in varying fabric widths?—MRS. R. T.

DEAR MRS. R. T.:

The following conversion chart was worked out by the government and has proved satisfactory in most cases for us. Please remember one thing: when choosing a pattern where you must add additional width to the side seams, you should decide the correct fabric requirement from the next largest pattern size.

Keep this conversion chart handy and I'm sure it will help you save money.

FABRIC CONVERSION CHART

Fabric Width	32"	35"-36"	39"	41"	44"-45"	50"	52"-54"	58"-60"
Yardage	1⅞	1⅜	1½	1½	1⅜	1¼	1⅛	1
	2¼	2	1¾	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜	1¼
	2½	2¼	2	2	1¾	1⅝	1½	1⅜
	2¾	2½	2¼	2¼	2⅛	1¾	1¾	1⅝
	3⅛	2⅞	2½	2½	2¼	2	1⅞	1¾
	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2¾	2½	2¼	2	1⅞
	3¾	3⅜	3	2⅞	2¾	2⅜	2¼	2
	4	3¾	3⅛	3⅛	2⅞	2⅝	2⅜	2¼
	4⅜	4¼	3½	3⅜	3⅛	2¾	2⅝	2⅜
	4⅝	4½	3¾	3⅝	3⅜	3	2¾	2⅝
	5	4¾	4	3⅞	3⅝	3⅛	2⅞	2¾

Add Additional ¼ Yard:

- For wide span conversion in fabric
- For nap or one-directional printed fabrics
- For styles with sleeves cut in one piece with body of garment

Mrs. Edgar Simpson, Barnhill, Ill., is this week's Tailor Trix winner for her suggestion:

"I stumbled onto a simple improvement for the bandless skirt with a grosgrain inner band. Having no grosgrain on hand, but some one-inch elestic last week, I thought, 'Why not?' It worked beautifuly; stretch it as you sew it to the top of the skirt just as you would the grosgrain. You won't have to make all the little darts, it's quicker, and as far as I can tell, a real winner!"

DEAR EUNICE:

So many of the new patterns call for a more fitted bodice with a very full, gathered skirt. I look absolutely terrible with this type of skirt and wonder if this should be more or less confined to the very young girls?—MRS. S. R.

DEAR MRS. S. R.:

I don't think age enters into the picture as much as one's figure. If you have a slim waistline, a gathered or dirndl skirt is becoming; the larger the waistline, the less fullness you need.

If the fabric is the least bit bulky or thick, you should take darts at the waistline about three inches deep, perhaps eight or 10 of them spaced evenly around the skirt. They will take some of the excess fabric from the waistline area and still not change the fullness at the hips. Experiment with the type of skirt that looks best; all patterns should be modified to fit the individual person.

DEAR EUNICE:

How soon can we begin wearing the lovely printed silks for dinner dresses? Somehow they look so fresh and gay after seeing winter clothes and yet, the weather in my part of the country doesn't say it's spring.—MRS. M. M. R.

DEAR MRS. M. M. R.:

The answer was in your statement concerning the part of the country you live in. Some parts of the country have eternal spring and summer, where others have a short summer.

If you are really up with the latest fashions, you will always be ahead of the season rather than behind it. For this reason, it is generally accepted that the printed silks and soft pastels make their entrance immediately after the first of the new year. Anything that will help brighten a drab season is worthwhile and should be encouraged.

Black Panthers Seen Via Couple's Lenses

By LAURA DEVENDORF

SAN FRANCISCO — "The Black Panthers: A Photographic Essay by Ruth-Marion Baruch and Pirkle Jones" is an arresting portrait of a movement not only for its photographic excellence but for the "like it is" realism of its content.

Wide-ranging photographs of party activities, its individuals and its mood were taken by the Mill Valley husband-wife team from July into October 1968. A total of 123 are included in this exhibit which continues through Jan. 19 at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in Golden Gate Park.

The photographers say, "We couldn't possibly photograph all the aspects of this virile, rapid-growing and deep-rooted movement; but we can show you: This is what we saw, this is what we felt; these are the people."

Their composite recreates an unvarnished, moving experience of those turmoil-riddled months. The scene moves from East Bay rallies, to guards drilling in Marin City, to Kathleen Cleaver addressing the Unitarian Church congregation in San Rafael. The cameras cover mass action and tighten on individuals.

Subjects include leaders Huey Newton, Bobby Seale, Eldridge Cleaver, Stokeley Carmichael, David Hilliard and George Murray (teaching his English class at San Francisco State College), as well as the unnamed.

At times arrogant, defiant and deadly, the Panther militance reverses to dignity, the innocence of children and the melting warmth of a parent's touch of a child. Through the expertise of the photographers, the faces, symbols and activities meld as a thought and a feeling about the movement as a whole.

There is neither uncertainty nor embellishment on either side. As one Black Panther told the couple when they first explained their project, "The beautiful thing about it is, that all you have to do is say it like it is." They have.

Although it has only one more day to show, mention should also be made of Margaret d'Hamer's "Photographic Environments." Her aim is to "create an active interaction between the viewer and the photographed material" and when she succeeds it is marvelous.

A wall of nine huge blowups of mustachioed sculptor Don Potts takes hilarious advantage of his elastic face and his facility for bending it insanely. And her floor maze of four-year-olds captures all their greatest expressions.

Miss d'Hamer also has a walk-in box that surrounds you with giant faces. But they are so low that unless hairlines turn you on, you'd have to be four-years-old high to enjoy it. Also, the bullfight scenes seem indifferent compared to the portraits which so strongly insist on being accepted as personalities through their enormous, often outrageous, presence.

Marinites Back Bridge Bus Plans

Both of Marin's representatives on the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District board gave cautious endorsements yesterday to a proposal that the district go into the bus business immediately at a cost of $8.5 million.

"It's a great breakthrough," said Supervisor Michael Wornum, attending his first bridge board meeting. "After all, the bridge district's primary function is to get people from Marin to San Francisco."

However, Wornum cautioned that the proposal "has to be evaluated in light of the ferry study." The feasibility study of water transportation, to be done by Arthur D. Little Inc., is due in the spring.

If ferries prove feasible, said Wornum, they would have to be coordinated with whatever new bus system is started.

Marin's other director, Joseph E. Sheeks of Belvedere, termed the proposal, drawn by the district's former chief engineer Arthur C. Jenkins, "the first really concrete and constructive solution I've yet encountered to our transportation problems." The bridge district, noted Sheeks, "is the only entity that has the money to finance a transportation solution."

Jenkins' proposal called for buying 150 new buses and setting up a new system that would require an annual subsidy from bridge district revenues of $1,411,000.

Board president William Moskovitz of San Francisco referred Jenkins' report, prepared for the district at a cost of $6,000, to the finance and commuters affairs committees. No date was set for them to meet.

Sheeks is chairman of the commuters affairs committee.

The directors did not comment on the proposal when it was presented to them yesterday, but the position of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors long has been that a ferry system must be provided before a new bus system is tried.

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors also:

TRAFFIC — Received a report from Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring that traffic totaled 30,929,965 vehicles in 1968, up 5.69 per cent over 1967. A record 7,033 vehicles crossed southbound between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. yesterday.

BIDS — Declared Amercoat Corp. of Oakland lowest of three bidders on 1,000 gallons of inorganic zinc silicate paint, with a bid of $11,016, and accepted a $4,950 bid from the Interstate Rubber Products Corp. of Los Angeles for 1,000 traffic tubes.

REPORTS — Voted to skip time-consuming readings of committee and staff reports during board meetings, and instead to mail the reports to board members before meetings.

CONCERT REVIEW

Symphony Fare Has Compatible Variety

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

SAN FRANCISCO — Anyone who believes that classicism, romanticism and impressionism in the same musical works are incompatible would have learned otherwise in the fifth program of San Francisco Symphony's 57th season last night at the Opera House.

Two of the four works chosen by maestro Josef Krips illustrated this possible affinity, for Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4 in D Major, Opus 90 (Italian) was the perfect example of the congruity of classics and romanticism, and D'Indy's Symphony on a French Mountain Air, Opus 25, was a fascinating blend of impressionism and classicism.

Weber's Konzertstuck in F Minor for Piano and Orchestra, Opus 79, was frankly romantic in its threatrical brilliance. Only the opening "Orpheus" ballet by Stravincky was in anything like contemporary idiom, and it, too, had classical elements.

GUEST ARTIST

A fine guest artist for the D'Indy and Weber works was 69-year-old French pianist Robert Casadesus, though there was some disappointment in the Symphony on a French Mountain Air. Either he was trying too hard to subdue the piano part to avoid making the piece sound like a concerto, or the orchestra was playing too loudly.

However, his sparkling virtuosity was fully revealed in the Konzertstuck. Especially notable were the exquisite clarity of each note in his fleet, rippling runs, finesse of his phrasing and his poetic, singing tone.

ORCHESTRA PLEASES

The orchestra as a whole was most impressive in a reading of the Mendelssohn symphony that brought out all the charm and grace characteristic of the composer. The allegro vivace and saltarello: presto movements were exciting, with some excellent work by the strings, and the andante con moto achieved a lovely cantabile quality.

The ballet "Orpheus," too, was performed with distinction and a refined and muted elegance very appropriate to its dream-like other-worldly character. This was achieved largely through the performance of woodwinds and strings, especially the harp, and very little brass and percussion except in one part.

Spurrlows Due

The Spurrlows, a group of 30 young entertainers, will perform at Terra Linda High School at 2 p.m. on Jan. 20. The group will sing folk songs and show tunes and perform a comedy routine.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Many Persons Perform Better When Heavier Than Charts Say

VAN DELLEN

Many individuals feel better when their weight is above the accepted figure. They eat well, are peppier, and are able to work harder than when carrying less weight.

Some are heavy boned and muscular, and the added pounds are a normal variation related to body build, even though the charts list their ideal weight as 25 pounds lighter.

There is no standard weight that is ideal for everyone of a certain height and age. The right weight is that at which the person functions best. Many athletes have found this out.

When this is reached, it is surprising how often it can be maintained without gain or loss. To my knowledge, there are no statistics on whether longevity is affected by the excess; even tho these people do not live as long as do the slim, at least they enjoy themselves.

EATING TO SATISFY an emotional need presents a different problem. The man is protecting himself from a nervous breakdown by gaining security along with poundage. The scale may see-saw back and forth according to the stresses encountered.

These persons eat like there was no tomorrow when confronted with family or job troubles, marital difficulties, disappointments, or accidents.

When in high gear, diets are followed like mad. Some are so dedicated along this line, they lose an unbelievable amount of fat in a short time.

THE MAN or woman with this type of personality cannot be given a routine regimen because eating less during emotional upheavals will increase hidden frustrations.

Tranquilizers are more effective. Sensible dietary changes must be adopted voluntarily.

This may explain why many physicians treat people and not fat. The individual may have many disturbing tensions and is helped when allowed to ventilate.

A long-term program of weight reduction allows more time for discussing problems that interfere with his sense of well-being as well as with his weight. In addition, the diet does not become a temporary measure but the foundation for future eating habits.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

LOOSE RINGS

J. R. O. writes: My doctor says that while I am not ruptured, I have several loose rings. Please tell me what this means and if surgery is necessary. The physician didn't say anything about an operation. P.S. I am 50.

REPLY

Many physicians make this diagnosis when there is some doubt about the presence of a hernia. The examination probably showed a slight weakness in this area but not enough to cause the tissues to bulge as they do in an obvious hernia.

INFECTED BLADDER

A reader writes: Is cystitis due to kidney trouble?

REPLY

Infection of the bladder usually stems from bacteria that enter from the outside via the urethra. But it can result from disorders anywhere along the urinary tract, including the kidneys. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on cystitis.

CHOLESTEROL BUILDUP

A reader writes: If tests show a high level of cholesterol in the blood, does this mean it is confined to the blood or does cholesterol accumulate in other parts of the body also?

REPLY

Cholesterol may accumulate in the liver, brain, and other tissues, including the skin.

DIFFERENCE IN CYSTS

A reader writes: Are cysts malignancies?

REPLY

Cysts are sacs that contain liquid or semi-fluid material. They usually are benign but some become malignant.

CHRONIC COLON INFECTION

A reader writes: Can the colon be chronically infected?

REPLY

Yes. Amebic dysentery and ulcerative colitis are examples.

Today's Health Hint — Retirement plans ought to include a hobby.

U.S. Accuses Auto Makers Of Smog Curb Conspiracy

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The federal government charges that the Big Four automakers and a trade association conspired to delay development of antipollution devices for cars. The accused say their cooperation actually speeded up the process.

The U. S. District Court in Los Angeles has been asked to rule as to who is right.

The Justice Department opened the dispute yesterday by filing with the court an antitrust suit against General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, American Motors and the trade organization, the Automobile Manufacturers Association.

In the complaint, the department accused the automakers and the association of agreeing privately to set a uniform date for inclusion of antipollution devices on their product. The civil suit asked no penalties other than court orders barring such agreements.

The suit charged that the defendants made these agreements designed to delay installation of antipollution equipment.

Not to install "positive crankcase ventilation" until 1963 models were out, although these could have been included in 1962 models.

To delay, in late 1962, the installation of improved creankcase ventilation on new cars to be sold in California.

In early 1964, to seek delays in installing new exhaust control equipment that could have been available for 1966 model cars, telling California authorities "it would be technologically impossible to install such devices before 1967."

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and the AMA issued statements denying any unlawful activity, and contending that the suit would hamper further efforts to reduce air pollutants produced by automobiles.

Announcing the government action in Washington, Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark charged that the defendants and others agreed as early as 1953 to eliminate all competition in development and manufacture of antipollutant devices and to restrict publicity about them.

The AMA and the three biggest manufacturers conceded that they banded together 15 years ago in an effort to solve pollution problems. But they denied any agreement to delay marketing of the devices and techniques they developed.

Nixon Keeps Ray Bliss As National Chairman

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Nixon has settled for the forseeable future an internal debate over the leadership of th Republican National Committee by asking Ray C. Bliss to remain its chairman.

No specific period was disclosed and Bliss would not discuss the question of how long he might continue. But a key political aide to the President-elect says Nixon's request means Bliss will remain in the party post for "a substantial period" unless he decides to leave.

Nixon is known to have considered replacing Bliss with a chairman more talented in public political salesmanship.

Bliss, 61, has been chairman since April 1, 1965. His field is organization politics—the technical side—and he shuns the public speaking, banquet circuit approach.

In the view of some Nixon associates, the retention of Bliss means that activities by the Republican senatorial and congressional campaign committees will be upgraded. There is talk of their being given research assistance from the White House as well as the assignment of top administration officials to campaign for individual candidates in tough races.

Nixon has fixed the goal of regaining party control of the Senate in 1970. Twenty-five Democratic seats will be at stake then and many are regarded as vulnerable. For that reason, Republican leaders hope they can upset the Democrats' present 57-42 majority.

Democratic seats up for grabs next year include those now filled by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn. McCarthy has said he won't run as a Democrat again and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey could wind up contesting for his seat.

Even Republicans are not optimistic about beating Kennedy, the Senate's new Democratic whip, or Muskie, the 1968 vice presidential nominee. Both will have to win re-election to survive as contenders for the 1972 presidential nomination.

Nixon cabinet appointees continue today a round of conferences with task forces which have studied problems facing the new administration.

A key meeting was due late in the day for Secretary of the Treasury-designate David M. Kennedy to receive the findings of a task force on tax legislation.

A vital topic is that of the 10 per cent income surtax, due to expire June 30 unless it is renewed by Congress.

Nixon already has a summary of the task force recommendations, but it, like all the other reports, is being kept confidential.

Civic Center Art Winners Chosen

Two paintings, "shrimp boat," an oil by Charlotte McNulty, and "Black 2," a batik by Bill Mackey, a 17-year-old College of Marin student, tied for first place in the "people to people" art exhibit contest at the Marin Civic Center.

Runners up were: "Hideaway" an oil by Mrs. McNulty; "Ramblin' Jack," a batik by Claudia Graham, and "Yesterday," a pastel by Otis Battle.

Sixty items were entered in the exhibit, which concluded Thursday. Visitors voted for their favorites from among the exhibit of artists ranging in age from 16 to 78 All the artists are involved in the public welfare program, either as recipients, foster parents, adoptive parents and staff members. Marin Museum Association and Marin Volunteer Bureau helped arrange the exhibit.

Neighbor Faces Burglary Count After Intrusion

A 26-year-old San Rafael man was booked into Marin County Jail today on suspicion of burglary after he reportedly entered a neighbor's apartment and tried to choke her.

Police said Cora Sue Palmer of 1563 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, reported she was awakened early today by someone scratching her leg.

She identified the man as another resident of the apartment building, Ronald Duane Fetter. She told police that when she screamed, the man attempted to choke her until she pushed him away and he fled.

Miss Palmer said her billfold was missing that that she had missed several other items during the past week. Police said several of the items were found in Fetter's apartment.

Fetter was held on bail of $6,250 to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Navy Set To Open Probe Into Capture Of Pueblo

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The heroes' welcome is over and the Navy is getting down to serious business with the 81 survivors of the USS Pueblo.

The Navy announced yesterday that the long awaited court of inquiry on the Pueblo's seizure by North Korean Navy units last Jan. 23 will be convened Thursday at nearby Coronado.

The court of inquiry— an automatic event in the Navy when a ship is lost or damaged —will not be a trial. Its purpose will be to gather all the facts surrounding the Pueblo's capture, and the conduct of Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher and his men during their 11 months in captivity.

The court also will study damage done to U.S. military security by capture of the Pueblo's secret electronic equipment. Most of its sessions will be open to the public, those dealing with technical matters are expected to be closed.

Its recommendations will be passed on to the chief of Naval operations and the commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet. Technically, the court of inquiry could recommend some Pueblo men for courts-martial or reprimands, although the Navy's attitude so far makes this appear unlikely.

Most of the Pueblo crew will be moved Tuesday from Balboa Navy Hospital for limited duty at North Island Naval Air Station, near the scene of the inquiry. They have been at Balboa since their arrival in the United States on Christmas Eve.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 11, the 11th day of 1969 with 354 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Jupiter and Mars. The evening stars are Mercury, Saturn and Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1878 Alexander Campbell, a Brooklyn, N.Y., milkman, delivered milk to his customers in glass bottles for the first time.

In 1935 Amelia Earhart flew from Honolulu to Oakland, Calif., to become the first woman to solo over the Pacific.

In 1964 the U.S. surgeon general's committee issued a report linking cigarette smoking with lung cancer.

A thought for the day: American poet Walt Whitman once said, "Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty."

Opening lead — ♡ Q

AVERAGE PLAY

The average player takes the king of hearts and immediately wins the king of diamonds. He next leads a low diamond, and West's spade discard provokes a loud wail of distress. South complains about terrible luck and explains to all the world that the bidding was beautiful.

There's nothing wrong with the bidding, but any pair of hacks should get to six no-trump with 35 points in high cards and a long suit.

BAD LUCK

The luck was terrible, but South should have protected himself by executing a routine safety play.

After taking the king of hearts South should lead a low diamond to the ace and then return a low diamond from dummy. This method of playing the suit identifies South as a fine player even though not a single word is spoken.

PERFECTLY SAFE

South is perfectly safe no matter how the diamonds break. If East follows with a low diamond, South tries a finesse with the nine. There is no danger if this finesse loses since then the suit will break normally.

As the cards lie, the nine wins and there are no other problems.

SET HELPLESS

East could not save himself by putting up the ten of diamonds since South would win with the king and return the nine to force out the queen.

South would be equally safe if West had the length in diamonds. In that case East would discard on the second diamond, and South would take the king of diamonds and return the nine of diamonds through West.

DAILY QUESTION

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond.

The hand is too strong for an opening bid of 1 no-trump since you have 18 points and a five-card suit. This is more like a 19-point hand than an 18-point hand. Moreover, the weak doubleton in hearts is another argument against an opening no-trump bid.

Christian Unity Week Is Next

The seventh annual San Rafael Christian Unity Week will begin next Saturday with opening services at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian, Fifth and E streets.

Special events will continue through Jan. 25, concluding with a "love feast by candlelight" on the Domincan College campus.

Another highlight will be a folk guitar mass at 7:45 p.m., Jan. 22, at St. Raphael's Catholic Church. Directed by guitarist Barbar Riordan, the mass will feature the use of 20 additional guitar players.

Opening events next Saturday will include a welcome by Dr. Charles Griffin and special music by the Presbyterian choir.

A panel discussion will follow on "Authority Crisis—Who's in Charge Here." Moderator will be Gregory Haran, a layman from St. Raphael's.

Panelists will include Rev. Thomas Kennedy, pastor of St. Raphael's; Rev. James Upshaw of Christ Presbyterian in Terra Linda; Rev. Athur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran; Dr. Philip Whitmer of First Methodist and Rev. Angus Dun Episcopal Church of Redeemer.

On Sunday, members of the participating churches, will be urged to visit other denominations. A special blessing will be given in all churches to non-parishioners.

Another highlight of the Sunday schedule will be a youth forum, "Integration of Christ in Our Lives," at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Fifth Avenue and Court Street.

Opening remarks will be made by Mr. and Mrs. James Szykowny of St. Raphael's, forum chairmen. Then the session will be broken into table conferences.

On Friday, an inter-faith council will discuss proposals for Christian action at a meeting to be held at the First Methodist Church, 9 Ross Valley Drive.

Combined choirs of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and St. Cyprian's Episcopal Church of San Francisco will present special music. Guest speaker will be Dr. David Willis, associate professor of historical theology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo. Dinner reservations can be made through Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Smith of San Rafael.

Historically the special week is known as the "Chair of Unity Octave," so-called because the services begin on the Feast of St. Peter's Chair in Rome and end on the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul.

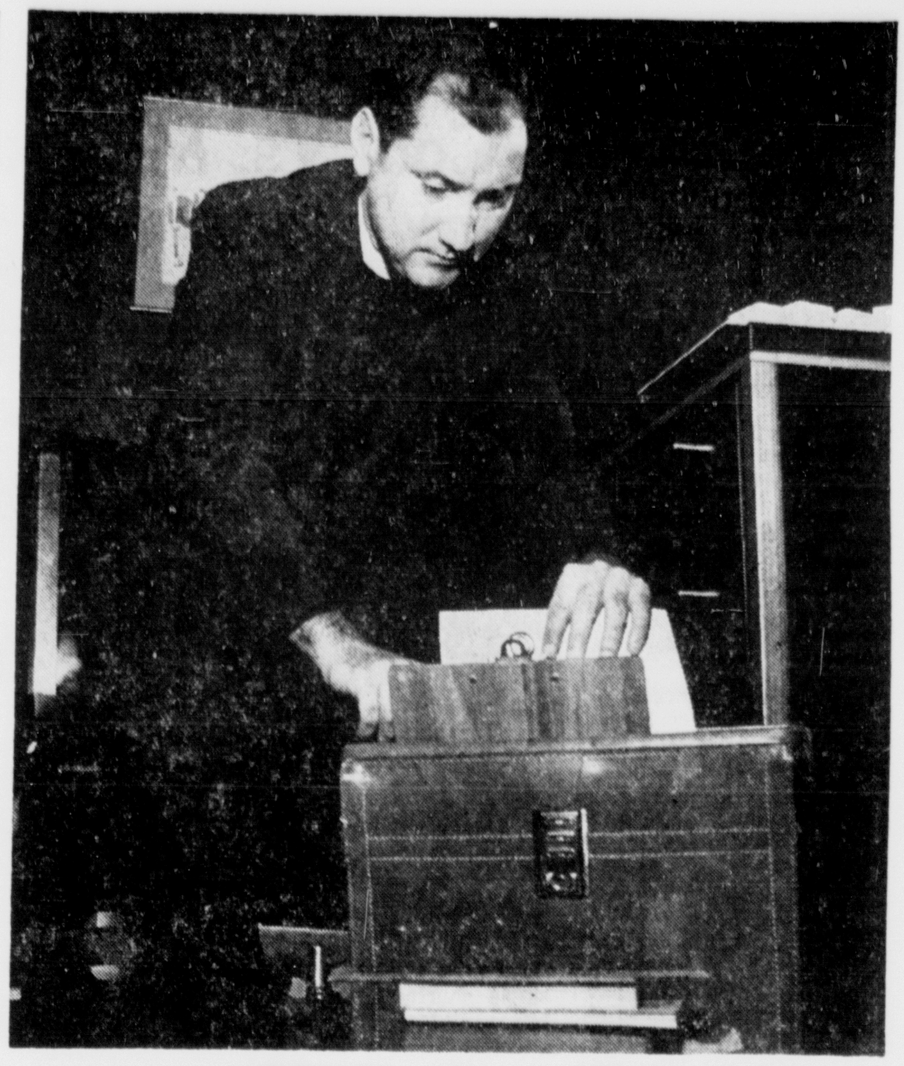
The first observance in Marin was in 1963 under direction of the late Msgr. Daniel McAllister of St. Raphael's.

Participating churches this year include St. Raphael's and St. Sylvester's Catholic Redeemer and St. Paul's, Episcopal; First Presbyterian and St. Luke's; Trinity Lutheran Church, and the First Methodist Church.



ACCEPTS NEW PARISH

Soon to be moving across Richardson Bay to St. Stephen's Parish in Belvedere is Rev. John S. Thornton, rector of Christ Episcopal Church in Sausalito. Reverend Thornton, who has been rector of Christ Church for the past five years, will assume his new duties in Belvedere on Feb. 4 replacing Rev. Llewellyn A. White who resigned to become associate executive director of the San Francisco Foundation. The calling committee of Christ Church is now reviewing candidates for rector but, until one is named, Rev. Canon David Forbes, headmaster of the Cathedral School for Boys in San Francisco, will lead the parish. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

'THE GREAT DOERS'

Methodists Present Wide Range In Church Doctrine

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The Methodists are the great "doers" of American Protestantism.

With a knack for organization, a will to work, and a traditional zeal for social reform, they are always looking for a good cause to support. And when they find one, they hurl themselves into it with fierce dedication.

This activist bent often is accompanied by a marked indifference toward theological doctrines. Surveys among Methodist clergy regularly turn up a staggeringly wide range of doctrinal positions, from strict fundamentalism on one hand to disavowals of Christ's divinity on the other.

The Methodist movement grew out of the preaching of John Wesley, an 18th Century Church of England priest who wanted to reform his own denomination and had no desire or intention of starting a new one.

TURNING POINT

The turning point in Wesley's life came on the evening of May 24, 1738. He attended a prayer meeting at a little chapel on Aldersgate Street in London. As he sat in meditation, listening to someone read aloud from Martin Luther's writings, Wesley suddenly knew what Luther meant when he insisted that men are saved through faith in Christ alone, and not by any good works of their own.

"I felt my heart strangely warmed," Wesley wrote later.

"I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine . . ."

From that moment on, Wesley was a different man. Before the "heart-warming experience," he had been an ascetic, scholarly Anglican priest—to put it baldly, a self-righteous prig. Afterwards he became a generous, outgoing man, fired by a passionate desire to share with others his great discovery that salvation is God's free gift.

For the next 50 years, John Wesley preached this good news throughout England. When churches were closed to him—as they often were—he held his meetings in open fields. His sermons often drew as many as 30,000 persons.

Although the Wesleyan revival brought badly needed new life into the Church of England, the leaders of that institution refused ordination to the corps of young lay preachers whom Wesley had recruited to help him. Had they been less stubborn on this point, it is possible that the Methodist movement would have remained inside the Anglican communion, as Wesley himself did to his dying day.

REAL CONFLICT

The ordination conflict came to a head when Wesley's "Methodist societies" spread to the American colonies. By the end of the revolution, there were 15,000 Methodists in America, and they had no ordained clergymen to care for them.

Wesley made a final appeal to the bishops of the Church of England to ordain priests for missionary service among American Methodists. When this was refused, he took the fateful step of ordaining two men, on his own initiative, to "preside over the flock in America."

Since the Church of England never recognized the validity of these and subsequent Methodist ordinations, the Wesleyan movement from that time forward was a separate denomination.

From the start, Methodists attached great importance to what they called "a felt experience of salvation." They believed that every man should be able, like John Wesley, to recall the very hour and moment when he knew himself to be saved through faith in Christ.

HIGHLY CONGENIAL

The people of the frontier found this approach to religion highly congenial. They flocked into the Methodist church in such great numbers that by the time of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln spoke of it as the largest and "most important" denomination in America.

For more than a century after it was formally established as a separate denomination in 1784, American Methodism remained the "poor man's church," appealing primarily to the uneducated and underprivileged. Over the years, however, it has gradually turned into a middle-class denomination. Today it has more business and professional men than farmers and laborers.

The United Methodist Church is America's largest Methodist body and second largest Protestant body. It has more than 11 million members, and 42,000 local congregations.

There are 20 other Methodist bodies in the United States. Three of them are Negro denominations: The African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church. Together they have about 2.5 million members.

The other Methodist bodies are small, ranging in size from the Free Methodist Church with 55,000 members to the Cumberland Methodist Church, which has fewer than 100 still in its fold. Most of these smaller bodies are fundamentalist in doctrine.

S. DRUMMOND WOLFF
To Mill Valley

Wolff To Mill Valley Church Post

Dr. S. Drummond Wolff, professor of music at the College of Marin, has been named organist and choirmaster of the Episcopal Church of Our Savior in Mill Valley.

In assuming his new post, Wolff replaces Dr. Hyman I. Krongard, instructor of music in the Reed School District, who left the post because of the press of other work, according to Rev. D. Murray Hammond. Wolff previously was choirmaster and organist for the Holy Innocents' Episcopal Parish in Corte Madera.

A resident of Marin County since 1961, Wolff has directed the community chorus of the Marin Chamber Ensemble and has taught music theory, voice and organ as well as directing the choral program at the college.

He received his doctorate in music at the University of Toronto in Canada and a bachelor's degree in music from the University of London in his native England.

He has served as organist and choirmaster for St. Martin-in-the-Fields in London; Metropolitan United Church, Toronto; Montreal Cathedral, Montreal, and the Bermuda Cathedral, Bermuda.

$76,000 IN ESTATE FOR 43 CHURCHES

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ky. (UPI) — The 43 churches in Grant County, Ky., will share equally in the unusual will of a 75-year-old widow who attended church infrequently during her lifetime.

Mrs. Jess Conrad, who died Nov. 1 at her farm home near this north-central Kentucky community, bequeathed almost all of her $76,000 estate to the churches. The remainder is to be divided among four first cousins.

"She didn't wear her religion on her sleeve," said Robert Blackburn, Mrs. Conrad's attorney, "but I think this very act shows she was religious."

Ecumenical Composite Moving To Washington

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

As usual, like the nation, it's an ecumenical composite. But it reflects an added prominence of some small and previously unrepresented religious groups.

Its interdenominational mobility is particularly dramatized at the top, in President-elect Nixon.

TENDS TO MIGRATE

Like millions of people in modern times, he tends to migrate from one church to another for worship, according to circumstances, although he formally remains a Quaker.

His cabinet includes three Roman Catholics, two Mormons and the others, mainline Protestants, mostly Presbyterians.

The new 91st Congress, a customary religious assortment, is made up to 399 Protestants, 111 Roman Catholics, 19 Jews and three Greek Orthodox. Three representatives do not list any religious connections.

Eastern Orthodoxy, which had no members at all in Congress until two years ago despite its nearly five million adherents, added one more this time, to make it three, giving it a slightly more proportional place in politics.

TINY GROUP

A tiny group, the 2,400-member Schwenkfelder Church in Pennsylvania, has its first U.S. senator, Richard S. Schweiker. And the 70,000-member Christian and Missionary Alliance has its first congressman, Rep. Wilmer Mizell of North Carolina, lately of baseball fame, and a lay preacher.

But there are no Hindus, Moslems or Buddhists, although they number around a quarter million in this country, mainly Buddhists on the West Coast and in Hawaii.

Roman Catholicism, which added two more in the legislative lists, has the largest number of any single church—98 representatives and 13 senators—but this still isn't up to its share of the population, nearly a fourth at 47 million.

Figures on religious affiliation of the incoming federal legislators were compiled by Christianity Today, an evangelical fortnightly published in Washington, D.C.

Methodism, ranking second again in the legislative lists despite a loss of nine, now has a total of 90, including 23 senators and 67 representatives, a hefty count in relation to its 13 million adherents.

OTHER CHURCHES

But the legislative role is even bigger proportionately for Episcopalians, numbering only 3.5 million nationally, but with 14 senators and 53 representatives, a total of 67.

Also for Presbyterians, numbering only 4.4 million, yet counting 13 senators and 69 representatives, a total of 82.

In sharp contrast, Lutherans, totalling nine million across the country, have only 14 members in both houses, up one, making it 11 representatives and three senators.

Baptists, in comparison to their 25 million adherents, including two large Negro bodies, also are proportionately fewer among federal legislators—53 of them, including 43 representatives and 10 senators.

Mainly, it is the affluent largely - white denominations with British backgrounds whose share of legislative posts tends to be bigger than their share of the population, Christianity Today noted.

SOCIAL INVOLVEMENT

The figures also "indicate something of the prestige and social involvement of America's religious groups," the summary said, citing the proportionately high numbers of Episcopal and Presbyterian legislators.

Similar strength is shown by the United Church of Christ (including Congregationalists), with only about two million members nationally, but with six senators and 23 representatives, a total of 29.

Also, the Christian Church (Disciples), with only 1.6 million members, has 12 members in the House and one in the Senate, a total of 13. This is President Johnson's church.

Church Schools Enrollments Up

NEW YORK (UPI)—Students in Lutheran seminaries, colleges and high schools in the United States and Canada now total 106,418, an increase of 5,623 over the 100,795 reported for 1967-68, according to the Lutheran Council in the USA.

Statistics released by Dr. Ronald L. Johnstone, director of the Office of Research, Statistics and Archives show 4,258 students in the denomination's 20 seminaries, 78,711 enrolled in its 37 colleges and universities, 5,726 in its 19 junior colleges and 17,723 in church-related high schools.

REV. KENNETH SHORT
To conduct services

Santa Cruz Minister Will Speak

Rev. Kenneth Short of Santa Cruz will be the guest speaker next week at the North Marin Assembly of God at 1370 South Novato Boulevard, according to pastor Gerald Boyd.

Reverend Short will conduct a service at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Then he will conduct the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services next Saturday.

He has been preaching in Santa Cruz for the past six years, but has left that pastorate to work with the Far East Broadcasting Co. preaching the gospel to Indonesia.

He has seen the modern Indonesia go from a placid pre-war people to those seeking independence and resisting the threat of communism. The latter has turned to a wholesale turning to Christianity, he said.

Council Sets Conference In Richmond

The annual Northern California Council of Churches will hold its annual meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Richmond Memorial Auditorium.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Arnold B. Come, president of the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo.

Other business will include introduction of the new director of the joint strategy and action commission of the council.

Special tribute will also be paid to Rt. Rev. Richard Millard, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, who is ending a two-year term as council president.

A New Divorce Concept Urged

NEW YORK (UPI)—A leading Roman Catholic theologian urges that the church consider the acceptance back into its fold of divorced and remarried members.

"Civil divorce is a reality that does not worry Catholics," says Monsignor Victor Pospishil, assistant professor of theology at Manhattan College. "They become entangled with the Church only when they wish to remarry or when they have remarried outside the church.

GUEST — Dr. Surjit Singh, Jesse Hays Baird Professor of Christian Philosophy at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will be guest preacher for the 10 a.m. services tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo. His sermon topic will be "Seek and Find."

Slides, Report On Session Tomorrow

Slides will be presented at 8 p.m. tomorrow on the First Oceanic Baha'i's Conference in Palermo, Sicily, and Hafa, Israel last fall.

Showing the slides in the home of Mrs. Gary Olson, 20 Ashford Avenue, Mill Valley, will be Ellen McAllister, a San Jose State College student.

CAPITOL CONTROVERSY

Man From Cool Vs. Miniskirts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) -- The Republicans gained control of the state Assembly this year for the first time in a decade. One of the first actions of the chairman of the Rules Committee was to ban the miniskirt.

The Democrats promptly accused the Republicans of imposing on their constitutional right to look; the secretarial staff objected and the stage appeared to be set for the first major debate of the legislative session.

"I think if a person can behave in a ladylike manner, it shouldn't matter how short her dress is," said Linda Marino, a messenger.

But Assemblyman Eugene A. Chappie of the mountain hamlet of Cool, passed the word that high hemlines were out.

'NOT A PRUDE'

"I was getting sick and tired of turning my head when one of them was at a drinking fountain," he said. "I'm not a prude. I didn't say we'll be going back to the Pillsbury bloomer era."

Chappie, who was chosen just three days ago as chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee with jurisdiction over the secretarial pool, said, "I felt the girls had an obligation to the establishment they work for to wear something presentable. You can call it a housekeeping function."

But the order aroused the ire of one of Chappie's committee colleagues, Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco.

"We are dangerously close to imposing on people's constitutional rights when we tell them how to dress," Burton said. "More importantly we're imposing on the constitutional rights of those of us who like to look."

GIRLS AGREE

The secretaries apparently agree with Burton over the miniskirt issue in what could turn into the first item for legislative debate.

"We have to wear longer skirts now," Mrs. Marino said. "I have some that are shorter, but I don't wear them anymore."

Sally Carter, another of the curvaceous messenger girls who deliver press releases, said she, too, was peeved at the lower hemline edict.

"We have to," she said. "Chappie said he was appalled at the dresses we were wearing. There are some dresses we just can't wear anymore, the real short ones."

Neither Chappie nor the girls could say what length was "real short" or "presentable."

Mrs. Norma Wiley, supervisor for the messenger girls, refused to discuss the matter with newsmen.

Asked if Chappie gave specific directions on length, Mrs. Wiley declined to say, spun around on her office chair and snapped: "I'm sorry, I have things to do."

Chain Collision Injures Novatans

Two Novato men received minor knee injuries Thursday in a four-car collision on Highway 101 in Marinwood, the California Highway Patrol said.

Robert A. Smith, 44, of 10 Gregg Place, and Bruce R. Heilman, 45, of 692 Calle de la Mesa, were treated at Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital.

The patrol said the accident occurred at 4:45 p.m. in slowing commute traffic when the car of Thomas A. Bevan, 41, of 40 Loma Vista, Novato, hit the rear of Heilman's car. Heilman's car then hit Smith's and Smith's struck a car driven by William W. Palmer, 30, of 745 Sunset Parkway, Novato, the patrol said.

Missing Girl, 17, Still Being Sought

Denise van Kriedt, 17, who ran away from home Sunday, was still sought today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David van Kriedt, 37 Magnolia Avenue, San Anselmo.

Van Kriedt said Denise, a senior at Sir Francis Drake High School, left a note that she was leaving and didn't want to be traced. He described her as blue-eyed, with long blonde hair, about five feet, six inches tall, and weighing 120 pounds.

DON SHULA
Colts Chief

MIAMI (AP)—The New York Jets, led by super quarterback Joe Namath, and the Baltimore Colts with Cinderella star Earl Morrall wound up with light workouts today their preparations for the third annual world championship professional football game tomorrow in the Orange Bowl.

The odds makers have installed the Colts, champions of the National Football League, 18 point favorites over the Jets, kings of the younger American Football League. The NFL won easily the first two games of the series inaugurated in 1967, after the leagues ended their competitive war over players and gate receipts.

Kickoff for the game to be witnessed by a sellout crowd of 75,354 is 11:30 a.m.. The ly (NBC). The weather forecast is for 70 degree temperatures and sunny skies.

At stake for the players, in addition to the pro football title, is $15,000 per man for the winners as against $7,500 for each loser.

Baltimore won 13 of its 14 regular season games to take its division title, then bested Minnesota for the NFL's Western Conference crown. The Colts went on to smash the Eastern champion, Cleveland, 34-0 in the NFL championship game.

In the AFL, the Jets soared to their first title since the league was born in 1960, winning their Eastern Division with an 11-3 record. They came from behind in the AFL title game to edge Oakland 27-23. Namath, the $400,000 bonus kid from the University of Alabama, threw three touchdown passes against Oakland.

This Super Bowl game matches clubs with high powered offenses and stingy defenses. The Colts in 16 games scored 460 points, and perhaps more meaningful, allowed the opposition only 158. Baltimore posted three shutouts. It avenged its only setback by pulverizing Cleveland in the title game.

Not to be outdone, the Jets scored 419 points and allowed 280, posting the best team defensive record in the AFL. The big question in the game is defense. The Jets don't appear to match the Colts in this department, which could be the story of the game.

Coach Weeb Ewbank of the Jets, who once coached Baltimore to two NFL championships, insists his less experienced team has an excellent chance to be the first AFL Super Bowl winner.

"We are the best AFL team to play in the Super Bowl," says the short, stocky Ewbank, who has been walking with the help of a cane due to a pulled muscle sustained during the post-game celebration of the Oakland victory.

Ewbank feels his team has a better chance than Kansas City and Oakland did against Green Bay in the first two Super Bowl games. The main reason is that New York has Namath, who could be the best quarterback in professional football.

The outspoken Namath—he chided the Colts all last week as being inferior and challenged the ability of some of their star players—did it all for the Jets this past season. He completed 187 of 380 passes for 3,147 yards and 15 touchdowns. He can throw long. He gets the ball off fast, and he's accurate. Perhaps more important, he's a leader, a take charge guy who inspires teams to superior performance.

Namath has three prime receivers in Don Maynard, George Sauer Jr., and Pete Lammons. Maynard caught 57 for 1,297 yards and 10 touchdowns this year to pass the all-time record of NFL's retired

Charlie Sifford: Black Trailblazer On Greens

Before Charlie Sifford, if a Negro walked on a golf green in this country, chances are he was carrying someone else's clubs and/or a wet towel to wipe somebody else's ball.

If he was in the grille room, he was carrying somebody else's coffee. He came to fix a shower, not take one.

Golf was not a game for the ghettos. Neither did it leave any time for carrying picket signs, joining demonstrations, or running for office. Charlie birdied, not talked, his way through social prejudice. He broke barriers by breaking par. His weapon was a 9-iron, not a microphone. Charlie stands as a social pioneer not because he could play politics but because he could play golf.

Golfers, you have to know, have to be singled-minded human beings. Ask one of them what he thinks of Richard Nixon and chances are he will frown and say "Too much right hand" or "He's bringing his right shoulder through too fast." The golfer doesn't know his politics, just his handicap.

PRIOR TO CHARLIE, pro golfers had the effrontery to have a "Caucasians only" clause in their by-laws. It was the recreational arm of the Ku Klux Klan. Charlie came out of the darktown alleys of Carolina, packing for the rich folks, but practicing his own swing by moonlight. He "looped" for the hot-headed Clayton Heafner with whom he gypsied through the tournaments. He hustled the hoods of Philadelphia. Charlie putted for his supper. He played nickel-and-dime games with the same skill and enthusiasm as $10 Nassaus. Charlie learned how to save strokes around the green and around the first tee, too.

The singer, Billy Eckstine, got him out of nickel cigars and nickel putting contests and together they began to apply the abolitionist movement to golf. The first breakthroughs were — and, I have to think, were intended to be — token. Where they were back to a wall, golf tournaments would let Negroes in — and then sit back and watch them shoot 80. "See? It's not their color, it's their score," they would contend.

Charlie is the only Negro to have won a tournament. He made the field —and the cut — in five National Opens. He has been in the top 60 money winners every year since they let him in — 1961.

They kicked his ball out of bounds on some Southern tourneys, but Charlie held his temper. No Uncle Tom, neither is Charlie a minstrel Negro. He's as dour as an undertaker. He doesn't like his back slapped any better than his face. Charlie is his own man, the face around the cigar frequently is scowling. He doesn't like anybody standing in his line — on or off the course. Getting a weekly threatening letter from some mental case in Florida, as Charlie does, hardly promotes a sunny outlook on one's fellow man anyway.

BUT CHARLIE, who shot an eight-under par 63 in the First round of the Los Angeles Open Thursday, has now played in every tournament in America save one — the Masters. This august Augusta tournament has a complicated formula for selecting its field. If you come from Formosa, it's easy to get in. If you come from the cotton patch in Carolina, it's impossible

The one avenue open to Charlie isn't really open at all. Past winners of this tournament can vote in a man who, either because he wasn't lucky enough to be born in Formosa or to have had one bad round in the Open, does not otherwise qualify.

In the past two years, Charlie has played this game about as well as anyone on the circuit, certainly as well as anyone in the Masters. The past Masters selected Mike Souchak and Tommy Jacobs.

PRETTY SOON, Charlie found people driving into him from the front tees. "Sure I was disappointed. Sure I know its the only tournament Negroes have never played in. Sure I know that most of those Masters winners come from Texas or the Deep South. But I find letters putting words in my mouth to get at Jones (Bobby) and the Masters. So I get this letter from Bobby Jones telling me to stop threatening him. I don't threaten any man. I GET threatened. But I felt that, when I finished 25th in the money list, or won that tournament, or took third in the Canadian Open, I was entitled to some consideration. I have never disgraced anybody — with a golf club or with a salad fork."

It is a feeling of this 22-handicapper that the Masters ought to send a car for Charlie and, considering he's the only guy in the field who couldn't get started on his golf career 'til he was 33 years old or his tournament career 'til he was almost 40 because it took democracy so long to catch on in this country, maybe they ought to give him two a side. If they do, I'll guarantee you Charlie will be voting on the invitee next year.

Redwood Upset In MCAL Cage Opener

The Marin County Athletic League basketball race got off to a blistering start last night when San Rafael just barely held off a desperate last-ditch Redwood rally to pull out a 56-55 upset that had started out as an astonishing breeze at San Rafael High School.

The game was tops on a four-tilt agenda last night, pitting dark horse San Rafael against the red-hot Giants, owner of the top non-league mark in pre-race games, at 10-3.

The Bulldogs gave Redwood notice early that it was not going to be a pleasant evening, throwing up a choking zone defense and darting for close-in baskets to run away to an amazing 34-17 half-time lead.

MAKE BID

But the best, or worst was yet to come. Both teams were hurt in the third period, the Bulldogs losing high-scoring guard Bruce Nave on fouls and the Giants losing rebounding mainstay Jim Peters on two technicals.

After being all but run out of the gym in the first half, the Giants made their bid behind Jerry Piro and first John Boro, then Skip Corsini.

Boro sparked a third-period rally that produced 20 points but left the Giants still 11 points away. Then Piro, driving underneath and Corsini, hitting from out, chopped away at the lead, cutting it on one point with two minutes left.

But it was as far as the Giants got, as they traded key buckets with the Bulldogs. San Rafael's Roger Thomas took the last pressure shot, an eight-footer that swished with eight seconds left for a 56-53 advantage.

FRUSTRATION

Roger Smith's final jumper came almost at the buzzer, a mute token of frustration.

It was a hot-and-cold night for Redwood coach Duncan McSwain, subbing for varsity coach Dick Hart. He saw hiis junior varsity win a hair-raiser, 53-51 then suffered through the

Terra Linda Breezes By San Marin

Terra Linda High School gave San Marin's basketball team its first taste of Marin County Athletic play last night and the medicine, not too surprisingly, was somewhat bitter.

The Trojans, playing everybody present, dropped San Marin for a 65-42 count, putting it away in the third quarter with a 25-point outburst after a reasonably close first half.

Gary Howard had no trouble keeping up his point output, leading all scorers with 18 points. The San Marin ace has a 20.9 season scoring average.

Sifford Keeps Los Angeles Golf Lead By Two Strokes

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Golfer Charlie Sifford fitted the description today of a famed line by the old pitching genius, Satchel Paige, who observed:

"Don't ever look back—they might be gainin' on you."

Sifford, at 46 a veteran of more than two decades of professional golf, led the way into the third round of the $100,000 Los Angeles Open Tournament.

"They" were indeed gaining on him—such formidable challengers as Billy Casper, Arnold Palmer and George Archer, not to mention a pack of youngsters who were just kids when Sifford started playing golf.

STILL A THREAT

Two shots back was Archer, with 69-67—136. Tied at 137 were Tommy Shaw, Mac McLendon and Bob Payne.

Billy Casper, the 1968 winner here as well as more money than any other pro last year, was in the 138 group with two straight 69's, and Palmer with 72-68—140 was still a threat.

Dave Hill, runner-up in the opening round with a 66, slipped to a 73 for 139, and youthful Grier Jones, the 22-year-old former national collegiate champion, fell back with a 74 for 143.

Palmer shot 34-34—68 over the Rancho Farm Golf Club's par 36-35—71. En route he blasted up five feet from the pin on the last hole and sank the putt for an eagle three.

EXASPERATED

Casper forged forward with a 32 on the first nine but came back in a disappointing 37. "I putted extremely well on the first nine but the back nine I'd rather forget," Casper said ruefully.

One of the most exasperated players Friday was Bob Murphy, Rookie of the year in 1968. He had six 3-putt greens. He managed a 72, however for 139.

Scores of 145 or under qualified for the final two rounds.

Novato Gets Scare, Tops Drake, 66-51

Novato High School's basketball team, one of the favorites for the Marin County Athletic League title, got a terrific early scare but recovered more than enough to hand Drake a 66-51 setback at Novato last night.

The Pirates jumped off to a 13-6 first-quarter lead and lead by 18-8 before the Hornets used their superior height to good effect in the second half.

The Hornets, led by Steve McNally, recovered for a 23-25 half-time deficit to blast the Pirates by a 26-10 count in the third period and came home free.

McNally poured in 24 points, tops for both teams, with help from Ed Herrnberger's 11 points.

Clark Jamison topped Drake's small Pirates with 12 points.

Tamalpais Opens Title Defense With Victory

Tamalpais High School's basketball team opened defense of its Marin County Athletic League title last night in convincing and steady fashion, tipping winless but game Marin Catholic, 67-52, at Kentfield.

The Indians got double-figure performances out of four players and plenty of free throws to salt away their league-opening win, only their third of the season.

Ken Gommeringer with 16 points, Don Mackin, who scored 12 points in the final period, with 15 points, and Bill Secor and Ron Small with 12 each led the way.

Mike Murray had 14 points to top the Wildcats, now 0-11 on the season.

New Kink In Alameda Meet – Golf At Night

SUNOL, Calif. (UPI)—You could get as many opinions today as you like at the Alameda Open golf tournament about the merits of playing championship golf under the lights.

The "orphan" Alameda open, left to fend for itself after the PGA settled its differences with the touring pros, helped make golfing history the past two days — especially during yesterday's second—when some of the competition was played after dark and under artificial lighting.

Bill Ogden, the club pro at Tucson National and Chicago's Northshore, didn't have too much trouble under the lights, playing half of his second round after dark and posting an even par 72, which left him a stroke ahead of Dick Lotz today at the start of the third round.

"I was happily surprised you

PROVEN ABILITY

When he resorts to the running game, Namath has speed and power in the person of fullback Matt Snell and halfback Emerson Boozer. Snell rushed for 747 yards on 179 attempts this season, with Boozer accounting for 441 on 143.

The Jets have proved they can score, probably even against the rugged defense of the Colts. Can they, however, hold the Baltimore offense directed by Morrall, the surprise package of the 1968 NFL season. The fate of the Jets would seem to rest in its defense.

Ewbank counts on middle linebacker Al Atkinson, right linebacker Larry Grantham, and a secondary of cornerbacks John Sample, Jim Richards and safeties Jim Hudson and Cornell Green. The New York front four of ends Jerry Philbin, and Verlon Briggs and tackles Paul Rochester and John Elliott, will have to keep the pressure on Morrall if the Jets hope to stop the Baltimore offense.

OVERNIGHT STAR

Morrall, the 34-year-old journeyman quarterback who has been with a number of NFL teams, was acquired by the Colts from the New York Giants for tight end Butch Wilson after the great John Unitas developed a sore arm. Almost overnight, the veteran of 13 NFL seasons became a star. He threw 26 touchdown passes in leading Baltimore to its first NFL title since 1959.

Morrall completed 182 of 316 passes for 2,909 yards, making the key plays which featured the fabulous Baltimore regular season and playoff triumphs. He was voted to the All-NFL team and selected player of the year. According to Don Schula, the Baltimore coach, his quarterback didn't have a bad day all season.

Morrall's chief targets are All-NFL tight end John Mackay, who caught 44 for 644 yards and five touchdowns; Willie Richardson with 37 for 662 yards and eight touchdowns, and Jimmy Orr with 29 for 743 and six touchdowns. Tom Matte led the Colt rushers with 662 yards on 183 carries, with help from Terry Cole and Jerry Hill.

In the secondary, the Colts had the second best pass interception defense in the NFL with 29. Bobby Boyd and Lenny Lyles handle the corners, with Jerry Logan and Rick Volk at safeties. The tough linebacking corps boasts Mike Curtis, Dennis Gaubata and Don Shinnick.

From a health standpoint, the Jets have Maynard nursing a muscle pull, while the Colts have Bubba Smith still testing an ankle injured against Cleveland in the NFL title game, and Lyles with a sore throat. All, however, are expected to be ready Sunday.

could play after dark," said Ogden, who bagged a two-under par 34 during the daylight portion of his second round and a two-over-par 38 during the part played under the lights. "If I had my choice I'd rather played in the daylight but I can see where one day they might play a whole tournament at night. It could be a great experience."

Lotz, who also played half of his second round after dark when officials had to hold up play at the start for 2½ hours because of frozen greens, agreed conditions weren't too bad.

"The main difference between daytime and nighttime golf is mental," said Lotz, who had a second round 71, which put him at 143. "You have to make the adjustment in your mind or you are dead."

LUNN HAS 69

Bobby Lunn and Dave Ragan were among half the field who played their entire round in daylight. Lunn had a second round 69—best thus far over the Sunol Valley's Palm course —and Ragan a 70. That left them at 144 and 145, respectively.

Bill Tindall, former University of Washington star, played his last four holes under the lights and came home with a 71 that put him in a tie with Lunn.

"The big difference of playing under the lights," said Tindall, "is vertical perception. It's hard to see where the ball is lying."

Former amateur champion Deane Beman, who had a second round 77 after an opening 74 was outspokenly critical of the PGA for allowing the tournament play to continue after dark.

BLATANTLY UNFAIR

"It is blatantly unfair to have to play under the lights since everyone didn't have the same playing conditions," said Beman. "What a man shot had nothing to do with it. I say if the man played the round in daylight he would have done better."

Beman pointed to the fact that many tournaments are held up because of weather and so, too, should have the Alameda.

"Frozen greens are the same as a sudden thunderstorm," he said. "It would have been better to stop play when it got dark and played 36 holes the next day. Playing under such conditions (lights) makes a circus of the game. I like golf too much to want to spend my time making a sideshow out of it."

Beman was tied with eight others at 151, which is seven over par and nine strokes behind Ogden. Rich Lichardus was all alone in fourth place at 147 while Jerry Abbott, Bob Erickson, Bobby Brue, John Jacobs and Butch Bair were tied at 148. The 149 group was made up of six players and nine others, including co-first round leader Rich Martinez, were tied at 150.

It took a 155 or better to qualify for the final two rounds and exactly 70 players made it, including every regular member of the tour here.

Baseball Chiefs Call Meeting To Try Again

NEW YORK (AP)—Organized baseball will try again to select a commissioner to replace William D. Oeckert when the two big leagues meet jointly in Bal Harbour just outside Miami Beach, Fla., on Tuesday, Feb. 4.

The Florida meeting was called by the Executive Council headed by Walter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Gabe Paul of the Cleveland Indians.

Three baseball men are in the forefront of speculation over the job. They are John McHale of the new Montreal club--although he has said he intended to stay in Montreal–as well as Lee MacPhail, general manager of the New York Yankees, and Charles (Chub) Feeney, general manager of the San Francisco Giants.

Other prominent men mentioned for the post include Judge Robert Cannon of Milwaukee, Gov. James Rhodes of Ohio, Vice President Hubert Humphrey and Vince Lombardi of football fame.

Casey Undergoes Surgery For Ulcer

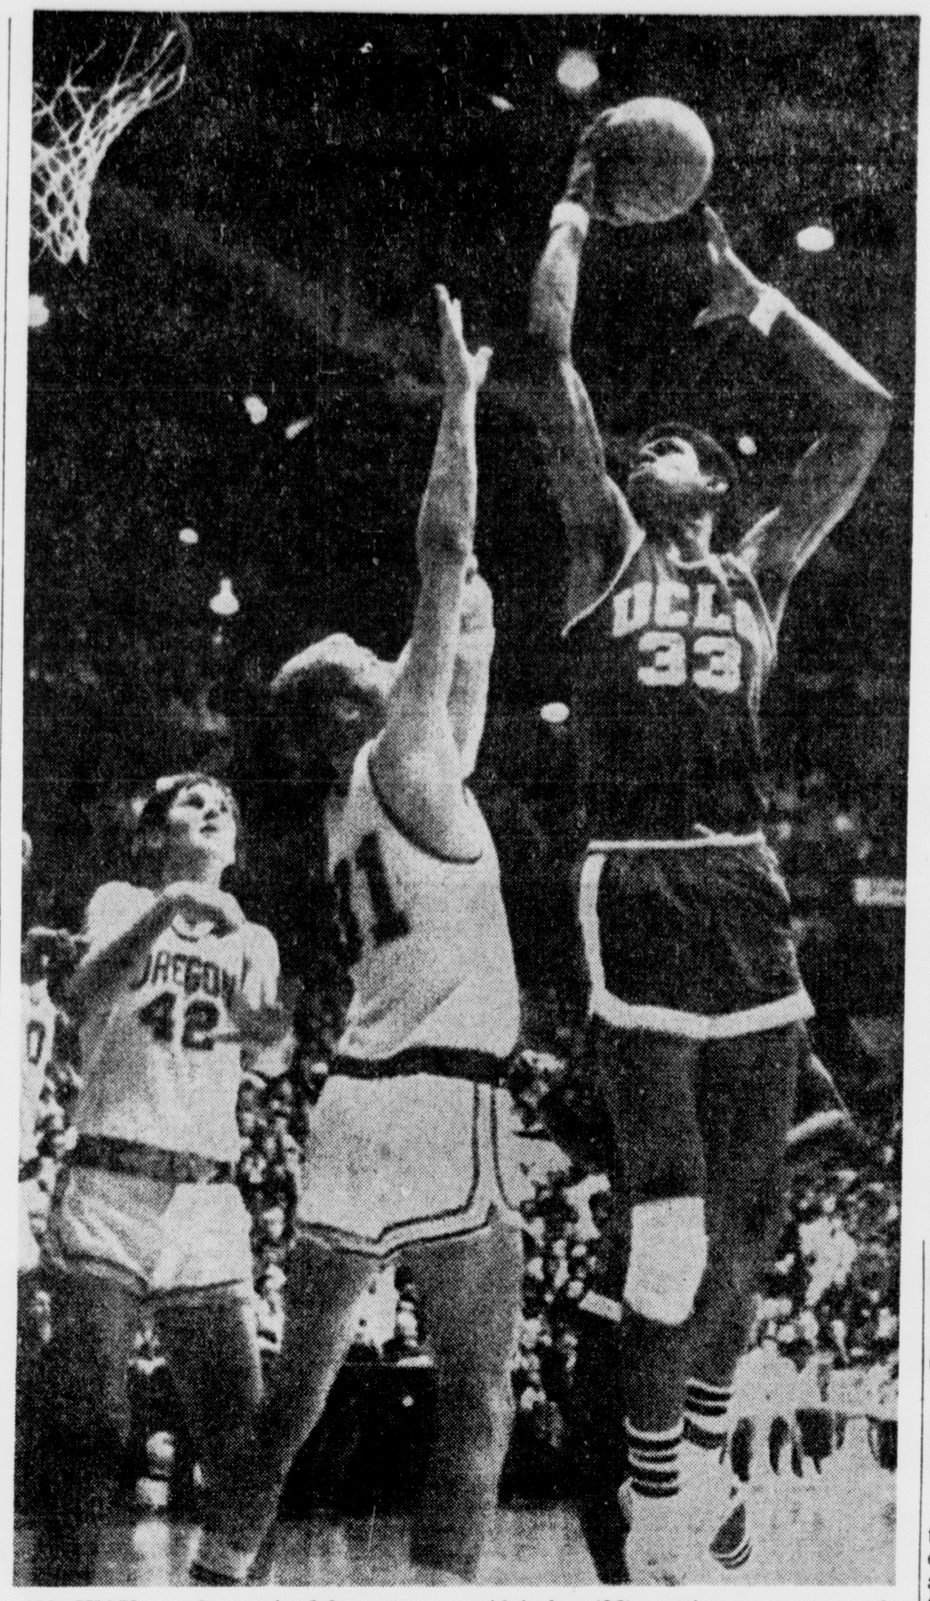
Doctors said the former manager of the New York Yankees and Mets baseball teams came through the operation satisfactorily. However, he was placed on the critical list because of his age.



NO WAY — Oregon's 6-9 center, Stan Love (31, left) is a bit overmatched against the UCLA Bruin's two-time All-America, Lew Alcindor (33) putting away two of his 27 points in a 93-64 romp over the Ducks in Eugene, Ore., last night. (AP Wirephoto)

Rozelle Draws Grid Future

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Pete Rozelle, commissioner of pro football, has taken a long look at his crystal ball and come up with ideas of what might be expected from professional football in the next few years.

The nattily-attired 42-year-old commissioner, fielding questions like an all-star, tossed many proposals into the hopper yesterday at a news conference.

"We are in effect merged now," he said of the National and American League. "All that remains is a new schedule alignment which will take place in 1970. All of the legal papers have been signed. We are working under one constitution and one commissioner from the same office."

"Within 10 years, maybe five, all pro football fields will have artificial playing surfaces," he said. "In cities where our clubs occupy baseball stadiums it will be done in cooperation with baseball clubs. Medical research has indicated that synthetic turf lowers the rate of key injuries such as damaged knees."

There also is a possibility of pro football telecasts on Monday nights, either by one of the established networks or on a separate sports network.

"It all depends on whether any of the three major networks (CBS, NBC, ABC) are interested," he said, adding that the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company, who currently televise all games, have the right of first refusal on such a program.

The commissioner said he believes pro football is not overexposed yet but said he would like to lessen the Sunday load with televised games on Monday nights. He explained that his reasoning was that there are more sets in operation Monday nights.

"Monday night telecasts would tend to create a bigger market, especially among people who now are not pro football minded."

On the subject of realignment of the teams in 1970, Rozelle said there are two schools of thoughts and they would be presented to the owners at the march meeting in Palm Springs, Calif.

"There are those who want to have a complete mixture of the teams with new division and conferences," he said.

"Then there are those who want to maintain the present structure, pointing out that current strong rivalries should be maintained. They would have an all-star game between the two leagues and interleague preseason games to create interest."

As for the Playoff Bowl, which has matched the runners-up in the two conferences, Rozelle said he hoped to retain it in 1969, with the Orange Bowl in Miami as the site. Dallas defeated Minnesota 17-13 before a crowd held to about 22,000 by rain in the last game.

Money from the Playoff Bowl goes into the players pension fund. Each member of the Dallas Cowboys received $1,200 and the losers $500 per man.

Rozelle pointed out, however, that the Playoff Bowl, as it is now set up, was not in his future plans.

"I would like to find a format to make the game more meaningful." he said, "In fact, I feel all post season games should be meaningful."

Tars, Alumni In Basketball Deadlock, 51-51

Tom Seidenberg hit on a free throw with six seconds on the clock to give the College of Marin varsity basketball squad a 51-51 tie with an Alumni team of past Tar headliners in Kentfield last night.

A tie in basketball? Yep.

Since the alums had played an intrasquad game (two 12-minute quarters) before the clash, it was decided to leave the score tied and not play an overtime period.

The Alumni, led by 6-7 Jim Halm, star of the '66 Golden Valley Conference champions and now the Tars' frosh coach, ran up a 23-18 lead after the first quarter, only to have the current Mariners come back to lead with a minute left on a bucket by Seidenberg, 50-49.

Seidenberg had 18 points to lead the scoring for both clubs while Halm and the Varsity's Pat Schafer had 12 apiece, with Jay Johnson hitting for 10.

In the all-alumni preliminary, the players of the '60's beat those of the '50's convincingly, 59-47.

In the evening's first offering, the Tar junior varsity dropped to .500 on the year (5-5) by losing the Mare Island Marines 73-60. Gary Hanson had 19, Art Goepp 14 and Bill Hoge 12 for the jayvees.

Sharp Battle For Second Among Pac-8 Cage Teams

It's that runner-up spot in the Pacific Eight that's up for grabs, because UCLA is all alone at the top as long as Lew Alcindor stays healthy.

The Bruins led Oregon 54-26 at the half at Eugene and then coasted home 93-64 in another chilling display.

Big Lew scored 27 and had 13 rebounds while soph sensation Curtis Rowe opened what should be a great three years of conference play with 16.

Washington looked impressive winning on the road where victories come tougher. The Huskies crushed Stanford 76-59 to run their season's mark to 6-4. Big Jay Bond had 24 for the Huskies while Stanford hotshot Don Griffin overcame a nice guarding job by Dave Willenborg to get 20 points.

Another tough candidate for the runner-up spot is California, which got a battle at home from Washington State before winning 68-60. Paul Loveday came off the bench to top all scorers with 17 points for the Bears.

USC gave it a good go at Oregon State but dropped a 61-57 battle after Trojan scoring ace Steve Jennings fouled out. In the battle of the 7-foot centers, Vic Bartolome of the Beavers had 15 to 6 for Troy's Ron Taylor.

Oregon and Oregon State swap Southern California foes today and the Washington teams exchange Bay Area opposition.

The story is about the same in the West Coast Athletic Conference where Santa Clara is in a class by itself and all the rest of the teams struggle for second.

Santa Clara mysteriously trailed St. Mary's 26-25 at the half but then romped 70-49 yesterday. Denis Awtrey had 14 points and made the big buckets for the Broncs. Mike Johnson had 16 for the Gaels.

UC Santa Barbara looked tough with a 77-64 win over Loyola of Los jangeles. Big soph Doug Rex hit 12 of 15 shots for 28 points while grabbing 16 rebounds.

San Jose State also won on the road with a 74-68 win against Pepperdine. Coby Dietrick and Tim Holman had 16 points each for the Spartans while Steve Egerer had 24 fot the Waves.

Pat Foley had 11 free throws in the last four minutes to help UOP down USF 85-78. Two huge centers met in this one, too, with Pete Cross of the Dons hitting 26 points and getting 19 rebounds while the Tigers' Tom Jones scored 20 and Foley 19 for the Tigers.

In the CCAA, Long Beach State is 3-0 and 13-1 for the season after taking Fresno State 75-66 even though star Sam Robinson sat out the game with a neck injury. Valley State nipped Cal Poly Pomona 96-95 as the losers' Gregg Rouchon had 29 and the winners' Loren Bracci 26, including the free throw that decided it. It was Fullerton 80 L.A. State 74 although Ron Knight of the losers had 30.

San Francisco State seems to be the top team and Alex Boyd of Nevada the top scorer in the Far Western Conference. The Gators won in overtime at the defending champion Cal Aggies' gym 65-60 as Joe Callaghan hit 26. Boyd had 30 to lead Nevada past Humboldt State 87-60. Bob Jones hit the tip-in to give Chico State a 58-57 win over Hayward State. Sacramento State took Sonoma State 85-79.

Celtics Overcome Lakers

The defending champion Boston Celtics felt better today after beating Wilt Chamberlain and the Los Angeles Lakers for the first time in National Basketball Association action this season.

The Celtics' 88-82 triumph last day night did not improve their third place position in the Eastern Division but the significance of the triumph was that it came after two previous losses to the Lakers. And, the Lakers continued in comfort at the top of the Western Division.

LAKERS ALIVE

With 90 seconds remaining and trailing 74-60, the Lakers came to life. Rookie Jay Carty scored six points in the surge which knotted the score at 77-all. But veteran Sam Jones' brilliant play in the final four minutes iced the game for the Celtics. Jones and John Havlicek, with 20 and 24 points respectively, accounted for half the Celtics' points. Veteran Elgin Baylor led Los Angeles scoring with 21 points.

The Baltimore Bullets, leaders of the Eastern division, were challenged sharply in their 106-104 triumph over the San Diego Rockets. Trailing by nine points with less than two minutes to play, the Rockets rallied and were two points behind at the final buzzer. The Rockets high-scoring rookie, Elvin Hayes, scored 32 points. Kevin Loughery with 26 points was top man for the Bullets.

A THING GOING

The Atlanta Hawks came from behind to beat the Detroit Pistons 104-101 and pull up to within 3½ games of the Lakers. With 56 seconds remaining, Lou Hudson tallied twice to put the game on ice for the Hawks.

Milwaukee breezed by Seattle 115-104 largely due to collective good shooting by Jon McGlocklin with 24, Flynn Robinson with 23 and Len Chappell with 20. The cellar-dwelling Bucks appear to have a thing going, the victory being their third in four starts since the second half of the season began.

In the American Basketball Association Minnesota defeated Indiana 122-119; Miami beat Kentucky 117-100; New York stopped New Orleans 132-127 in a triple overtime contest, and Los Angeles won over Dallas 119-106.

Murphy Is Winner Of Baseball Award

NEW YORK (UPI)—Johnny Murphy, topnotch relief pitcher with the New York Yankees in the 1930s, and now the general manager of the New York Mets, was named today the winner of the William J. Slocum award for long and meritorious service to baseball.

The New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America will present the award at its 46th annual dinner and show Feb. 2.

AT SANTA ANITA

Look Out, Here Come The Girls

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)--Santa Anita is building a dressing room for girl jockeys . . . even though some horse racing people doubt it will get much use.

An exercise girl at the track, Sandy Schleiffers, 22, wants to be the first to use the tiny room next to the dressing quarters for male jockeys.

She has applied for an apprentice jockey license, and Charles Harman of the California Horse Racing Board says it's against the law to forbid a woman to seek a jockey's license just because she's a woman.

It's illegal in California to discriminate because of sex, except in the case of a hazardous occupation.

TOUGH GAME

A Santa Anita official said this week he didn't think the hazardous occupation qualification would apply.

But a track spokesman, Ken Church, a jockey for 20 years, disagrees.

"It's a tough game and a girl jockey would get a lot more than she bargained for if she tried riding out there," he says. "It's a lot different from riding alone around the track, exercising horses or cooling them off."

But Church adds that many jockeys would be willing to let Schleiffers or any other woman try the trade.

Bill Shoemaker and Bill Hartack said they have no objection to women trying to be jockeys.

ABILITY KEY

However, Shoemaker doubted a woman could pass the licensing test in which ability is stressed.

Ability to handle a horse is the key to getting a jockey's license, says Harman.

"A would-be jockey has to show how well he — or, I guess she — can ride," he said. "The stewards will look over any new jockey very carefully just because he's new. That's always true."

Before Miss Schleiffers can race she must be hired by a stable. Then she would be tested.

Penny Ann Early got a license in Kentucky, but when she was scheduled to ride her first race other jockeys refused to compete and the race was called off.

NOT VERY LONG

If Miss Schleiffers did compete with male jockeys at Santa Anita, what would happen then?

"I don't think it would last very long," said track spokesman Church, "and I don't think a girl would like it out there."

Church doubts that a woman jockey would draw many more racing fans.

"Oh, maybe for a day or a few days a lot of people would come out to the track just for the novelty of it," he said. "It would be a fad — just a fad."

Still, Santa Anita continues preparing its special 10 by 12 foot light green, cement floored room equipped with a cot and a portable heater. There's a big mirror, too.

And on the green door opening into the room there's a sign:

"Lady Jockeys Only — All Others Keep Out."

Quarry Scores TKO Over Foe

SEATTLE (AP) — Irish Jerry Quarry, the world's third-ranked heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over Seattle's Charlie Reno in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout last night.

Quarry, from Bellflower, Calif., caught his heavier opponent with a long right hand to the head late in the round. He followed it up with three quick shots, causing referee Jim Rondo to administer a standing eight count to Reno.

Before Reno could emerge from the corner, Quarry was on him again, knocking him almost through the ropes with vicious right hand to the head and he dangled in the ropes.

Random New Year Yield From Desk's Pigeon Holes

Here's one from the Licensed Beveraged Industries Association. It says, "Nearly 90 per cent of the U.S. population now live in areas of legal liquor sales." That has to mean that more than 10 per cent of the U.S. population lives in areas where sale of liquor is still unlawful.

"Newspapers are not monopolies, but face ever-increasing competition from diversfied sources," says the Newspaper Information Committee. You can say that again, especially in Marin where the air waves were never more burdened with radio and TV commercials, the mail was never more bulging with advertising materials, even the telephone book yellow pages take more and more of the advertising dollar, leaving ever less for newspapers. In spite of the ever-increasing competition for the advertising dollar, the I-J still seems to do all right most of the time.

HERE'S "STATE COLLEGES and the Youth Revolution," a 24-page opus prepared by State College Trustee Louis Heilbron for presentation to the California Press Association last month. "The hard-core disrupters at San Francisco State," he declared, "number from 70 to 100 students and there is a marginal group of from 300 to 500 disrupters who can be stimulated to action. Thus, the hard-core disrupters constitute about one-half per cent of the student population and their activist supporters less than five per cent. But, such a number, when even loosely organized, cause a great deal of difficulty and can gather a larger following by expoiting a carefully selected issue." Amen.

Nixon Inaugural Ball invitations carry the notation that "this invitation entitles the recipient to subscriptions for two persons at $35 per person." Also, "Boxes accommodating eight persons are available at $1,000 per box." Long live cloth-coat Republicanism!

Invitations to the Spiro Agnew reception require only $10 per head.

The 1969 Inaugural Committee reports all $10 tickets for the "All-American Gala" are sold out, but you can still get in, on invitation, "on a first come first serve basis," for from $25 to $100 per person.

RANDOM NOTES ON the Generation Gap: How do you communicate with someone who has never gone hungry, worked for $1 per day, worked shoulder-to-shoulder with a guy so poor his wife made his shirts from old flower sacks, helped cover up for an aged and infirm man on a 50 cent per hour job with no other possible source of support for himself and his equally aged and infirm wife?

This note is from the California State Automobile Association: "Since 1922, when the AAA School Safety Patrol was initiated, the traffic death rate of children from age 5 to 14 has been cut in half, while the death rate for all other age groups has nearly doubled." Those youngsters directing traffic at the school crossing aren't just playing at what they are doing; they are really saving lives.

Here's an excerpt from Senator Kuchel's farewell statement to his colleagues with whom he served 16 years. "Some of the votes I have cast I know have been very costly to me politically. I think, however, if there is one measure of satisfaction in the life of a legislator, it comes at the time he tallies the votes which he believed in his own mind were right, just and appropriate, even if he knew that the balance of public opinion was against him, and, sometimes, violently against him." We cry for politicians who will stand up for what they believe is right, who will be truly independent. When a rare one comes along, we vote him out of office.

Remember the Literary Digest poll? In this pigeon hole are facsimile copies of the Literary Digest's report of its fateful 1936 election polling. Among the most curious items is this gem—uttered by Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley: "The Literary Digest poll is an achievement of no little magnitude. It is a poll fairly and correctly conducted." Farley was mostly correct; but the poll couldn't have been more wrong.

THE TAM HIGH "District Doings" newspaper for faculty and staff reports a note of protest from Europe. It comes from John George, former Tam teacher and administrator, now retired and fresh from a tour of Europe's great art museums. "I am sending a hot letter of protest to North Central High in Spokane asking why they did not make art appreciation compulsory back in 1922." It's a good bet that the answer, if he gets one at all, will claim art appreciation in 1922 at Spokane was "irrelevant" and "deemed unlikely to contribute to the enrichment of the curriculum." It may even be that state support funds were not available. He should get the class of '22 together for a demonstration.

With riots much in the news, a note on Pope Gregory's calendar troubles seems of more than passing interest. By Gregory's time, Caesar's solar calendar was 11 days out. Gregory, 400 years ago, determined that an 11-day adjustment was needed. He decreed, therefore, Oct. 4 should be followed by Oct. 15. An uproar followed. People claimed they were losing 11 days out of their lives. Landlords lost rent money, workmen lost 11 days' pay, money lenders lost 11 days' interest. Finally, there were riots in many cities. Today, Gregory is most often recalled as the author of calendar reform, unpopular though it may have been at the time. Does this tell us anything about how Dr. Hayakawa may be remembered?

Bouquet And Brickbat

BOUQUETS to new County Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni for suggesting, and to his fellow supervisors for endorsing, legislation to do away with June elections of county officials and to shorten the interim between primary and final elections.

BRICKBATS to the American Federation of Teachers at San Francisco State College for, among other things, ignoring a court injunction against their strike and picketing. Weren't these same teachers berating southern governors and white citizens councils a few years ago for ignoring court orders to integrate schools?

AFT Shows Ethics Of Street Fighter

Every street fighter, every hoodlum knows that the best way to finish off a man is to kick him when he is down. Never mind that it is a contemptuous, despicable act. It is effective.

San Francisco State has been in turmoil for weeks. Its existence as a school may be coming to an end. The education of many of its 18,000 students may be coming to an end. By choosing this particular time to call a strike the AFT might very well take credit for all this. They might very well finish off San Francisco State. They are at least getting in one brutal kick.

The AFT has grievances. Everyone has grievances. The AFT is composed of educated, intelligent people, and educated intelligent people attempt to settle their differences in a calm, reasonable atmosphere. But the atmosphere at State at this time is not calm. It is not reasonable. Blood pressures are high. Still, the AFT called a strike.

A street fighter, a hoodlum has no concern, no decency. He looks only for the most propitious time to strike a low blow. That is being street wise.

The AFT has struck a low blow. It seems the AFT is street wise. But is this a quality people admire in those who teach our youth?

Bigotry Disregards Natural Law

I have just finished reading the article in the I-J about the bigotry against black educator Lanny Berry (Jan. 8). I'm glad that the article was put on the front page. It might wake up some people to the fact that there is prejudice, even in Marin County.

It makes me furious every time I read or hear about something of this sort. These whites who are prejudiced are just a little "too big for their britches." How can it be gotten across to them that "all men are created equal"?

Berry said that "it seems there is no law against the white man harassing me." Well, there is a law, a natural law; it's just that not enough people acknowledge it.

Also, I wonder how many have heard of "love thy neighbor"?

LINES ON LIVING

The Time Of Our Life Should Not Be Its Ruler

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

With the passage of every year, we become ever more mindful of the fleeting quality of time and ponder anew the meaning of our life on earth.

We can become saddened by the resistless onrushing waves of time and we can feel like atomic dust in an eternity of time and space. But we need not measure our significance and value in terms of last year's discarded calendar, or in the unstoppable ticking away of the clock, or in the many sunsets that lengthen our shadows. For the measure of our time on earth is best recorded in the marks we leave in memory and conscience, in the heart throb of feeling and in the glow of promise that is evoked by the sunrises that lie ahead of us. We shall not fret, remembering the wise man's adage that those who make the worst use of their time complain most of its shortness.

TIME IS NOT to be feared and regimented, but to be fully understood and experienced. It is a gift flowing from the liberal hand of the Eternal's inexhaustible stream of eternity and it is to be embraced with cheer and savored with sensitivity. We cannot mutilate it and compress it "without injuring eternity," if we are to live all the time of our life, never to feel shame or regret.

Time cannot be rushed, expanded or chopped up in discontinuity. Those who try to manage time with the efficiency of a bookkeeping operation will soon find that the time they are struggling to manipulate is being more endured than enjoyed, more misspent than ennobled.

American efficiency and management have probably made us the most time-conscious society. We plan our time as we manage our assembly lines. We crowd our calendar with appointments and dates not only in the course of a day's work, but also in anticipating our vacation and leisure. We often overorganize, overwork and overtax ourselves unnecessarily to burdensome proportions. Overtime has become synonymous with our way of life and our mode of work. Our time schedule can be very hectic and productive, but not always very meaningful. Put together the most beautiful notes of a song and take the "rest times" out of the score, and you'll produce an unrhythmic jingle-jumble of sounds.

MODERN TECHNOLOGY and medical science have accomplished the miracle of saving life's time and prolonging man's pilgrimage on earth. We have added more years to our life, but have we also added more life to our years? We have raised our standard of living, but have we also raised our standard of life? Have we mastered the art of using our time wisely to enable us to derive more meaning from every hour of life, or is boredom killing many of us?

The theme of modern life, much like the shock waves of contemporary beat-beat music, is too overpowering in sound and fury. The "rests" are conspicuously absent and frenetically out of joint with time; the tempo and timing is too dehumanizing, too demoralizing, too scandalizing.

We are more often occupied with the timely and practical at the expense of the timeless and eternal. We roam in the outer spaces of physical nature, but fail to enter the inner spaces of human nature. We spend too much time with the business of living and too little time on the business of life. Human experience requires moments of quietude when we are hushed to the secret sounds of deepening meaning and mystifying strength.

WE CAN TRULY mark time by taking time out to celebrate life, to engage in the contemplative insights of human encounter by watching the sky, by observing the stars, by admiring a sunrise, by viewing a sunset, by dreaming and by feeling; by relating and reaching out from the innermost atom of self to the outermost realm of the infinite. We need time not only to be, but also to become, not only for the length of days but also for the fullness of life, not only for ripeness of age but also for maturity of experience. For we can be rich in years and poor in time and experience, if we waste the opportunities for life that each day offers us.

(Marquis Childs is on vacation.)

WASHINGTON — For those who had managed against all the evidence to persuade themselves that Richard Nixon would somehow simply liquidate the American commitment to Vietnam, now daily dies the dream.

Every move by the President-elect in his evolving mosaic of policy operations in Southeast Asia is making it plain beyond doubt that he willingly inherits not merely the Johnson Administration's resolution but also the hard core of the Johnson operatives. Whether right or wrong in their ultimate judgment — and this only history can at length answer — these men have stood with memorable courage against any and all proposals to give up the game in Vietnam under one or another rhetorical device meaning "surrender" while proclaiming only "peace."

More specifically, what Nixon has done is to give profound reassurance to our South Vietnamese allies that rational hard-liners are here to stay in the American government. Indeed, they will, if anything, be more influential than before.

NIXON HAS ASKED Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, an indestructible old yankee friend of the Vietnamese, to stay on in South Vietnam; and this has been deeply welcomed in Saigon.

He has requested the veteran Henry Cabot Lodge to take over as head of our mission negotiating in Paris with the North Vietnamese Communists. And this is even more significent. For Lodge is the dean of all our men in Saigon He had before Bunker's time served both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson there, and no man in the world has at once a greater respect from our friends and a fuller knowledge of our adversaries. When Lodge takes over from Averill Harriman in Paris, it will be a case of a tough successor relieving a man who was himself no stick of sugar candy.

Beyond all this are two other Nixon appointments whose relevance to Vietnam could not be higher. These are Alexis Johnson, an ald career man who is to be third man in the State Department and in practice probably its highest actually operational figure, and Stanley Resor, who has agreed to go on as secretary of the Army. Too, it is understood that another of the Johnson strong-men on Vietnam, Asst. Sec. of State William Bundy, has been asked to linger at least a while. Whether he does or not, his counsel will be available.

NOW, WHEN ALL this is put together, it is clear that Nixon has sent to Hanoi the strongest signal of which he is capable that he has not become President of the United States in order to find some merely clever way out of our burdens in Vietnam. This does not mean that the new administration intends to go about madly flexing its muscles. It does mean that this new administration has no slightest purpose to retreat from it all under some fog of words.

To say that this is hardly surprising is — well, hardly surprising. Nixon's whole career has rested upon containment of Communist expansionism, and in his campaign he said he would never waver from that line.

THIS, THEN, is precisely what Nixon and Nixon's establishment propose to make him see; this is the whole meaning of his selections of personnel.

ART BUCHWALD

When The Teams Are Changing, Be Careful At Whom You Smile

WASHINGTON — Power, the opiate of the people who live in Washington, is starting to slip through the hands of the old administration and is being grabbed by the new. There are signs of the switch taking place every day. For example, Tuesday I was at the Sans Souci restaurant, the place where the White House power structure usually has lunch.

One of President Johnson's aides came in and was escorted to his usual table. He sat there for two hours, alone. The person he was supposed to have lunch with never showed up.

The man I was eating with, who has lived through several administration changeovers in Washington, shook his head sadly and said, "The poor S.O.B. They're trying to tell him something."

"IS THAT HOW they usually do it?" I asked.

"Sometimes they cancel his table before he arrives. That way nobody knows he was stood up for lunch. This way, everybody knows. It will be all over town in an hour."

"But suppose the person who was supposed to have lunch with him just couldn't make it?"

"You don't understand. If you've got the power, the person makes it. Somebody else gets stood up. But if you don't have the power any more, then you get stood up. He's looking over here and smiling at us. Whatever you do, don't smile back."

"BUT HE'S MY FRIEND," I protested. "If he smiles at me, I'll have to smile back."

"He doesn't want you just to smile back. He wants you to invite him to sit with us so it doesn't look as if he's been stood up. We can't afford that."

"Why not?" I asked.

"You don't know anything about this town, do you? Suppose word got out that we had lunch with him —I mean just two weeks before the inauguration."

"WELL, HECK, he's still a decent guy, even if he is on his way out."

"That's not the point, stupid," my friend said. "We have to deal with the new guys over at the White House, and if they think we have any ties with the old guys they won't trust us. If you still want to have something to do with that loser, meet him at a coffee shop, but don't get me involved. I've got my job to think of."

"Are you trying to tell me that the new guys wouldn't trust us if we bought an old administration guy a cup of coffee?"

"I'm trying to tell you that everyone in this restaurant is aware of what is going on. Sure, it would be a nice, brave, gutty thing to wave and say, 'Come on over for a brandy.' And there are probably a few people in the restaurant who would admire us for it. But most of the people in this restaurant feel exactly as I do. The guy came in here alone. Let him leave along."

"IT SEEMS so cruel."

"Government is cruel," my friend said. "But he'll be all right. He'll probably get $100,000 a year when he gets out of the White House, not to mention an advance of half a million dollars on a book, plus lecture fees. He's not going to starve to death."

"But the thought of nobody ever eating lunch with him . . ." I said.

"Couldn't I just go over to his table and say goodbye?" I asked.

"I wouldn't chance it. Herb Klein just came in." My friend waved wildly at Klein. Richard Nixon's new communications chief. "Hiya, Herb, baby. How's the old boy?" My friend muttered to me, "Wave at him. Maybe he'll stop by the table for a minute. It won't hurt us if he does."

In the excitement, my friend from the White House got up from the table and left the restaurant. No one else in the Sans Souci noticed he was gone.

Britisher Claims Regional Bay Government Workable

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — A British government expert says that regional government is working well in London and can work in the Bay Area.

Professor W. A. Robson of the University of London's School of Economics and Political Science predicted that regional government would see "the necessary regional job being handled with tremendously increased efficiency with advantages to all the communities in the Bay Area."

Robson, who helped form the Greater London Council, which governs more than 8,000,000 people, noted that its formation was opposed by every one of the 110 local governments in the London area.

Today, after about five years of operation, the council is working smoothly and the opposition is negligible, he said.

Robson, interviewed at San Francisco International Airport while en route to Japan, faulted the Joint Committee on Bay Area Regional Organization's proposal that regional government be formed only after a vote of the people living in the Bay Area. "I know of no regional government anywhere in the world that has not been created by a higher authority."

The Kent Family And Marin

They've Played Prominent Part In County's History

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

For nearly a century, Kent has been a prominent name in Marin County affairs.

Communities, a school, streets and a lake all bear the family name as testimony to their importance in the county's history.

Indeed, the county's world-famous national monument, Muir Woods, would have borne the name Kent had it not been for the modesty and humility of its donor, a public spirited member of the family.

THE KENT association with Marin County history had its beginning in 1871 when Albert Emmett Kent, with his wife, the former Adaline Dutton, and their son William came West to live.

Albert Emmett Kent, in poor health, had come to California first for a long camping stay in the healing airs of the California mountains. He had lived for a time in a ranch house in the Chileno Valley in North Marin. But it was his intention to return ultimately to the East where he had extensive agricultural and business interests, particularly in Chicago.

Then he heard about the terrible fire that had wiped out much of Chicago.

BUT AT THE same time he also wired his wife and son telling them to join him in the Far West for a new start in life.

Only a week after the Chicago disaster, Mrs. Kent and William started west. Later William Kent was to recall those seven days and nights of travel across plains and mountains, with buffalo, deer, antelope, wolves and coyotes a common sight.

The mother and son were accompanied by Daniel Brown, a Negro who had been their coachman in Chicago and who now, in California, became the man-of-all-work upon whom the family relied heavily.

THE CHILENO Valley farmhouse did not prove comfortable, so that in the following spring the Kents moved to San Rafael.

But driving through the Ross Valley, Mrs. Kent saw a spot she described to her husband as "a paradise." He bought the property. And there they built their permanent home and took roots in Marin.

Albert Emmett Kent had been born in Suffield, Conn. His father, Albert Kent, had a tobacco plantation and traded with the Indians.

AS THE OLDEST son, A. E. Kent was given a choice between inheriting the family property, or going to college. He chose college.

He had attended the Connecticut Literary Institute in Suffield, and now he joined the class of 1853 at Yale University.

There he took up the study of languages, mastering French and Spanish. He proved especially adept, too, in debates, delighted in reciting classic poems, and read extensively from the works of English scientists.

HE BELIED the frailty of his appearance with his vigor, and even crewed for Yale in its traditional rowing race against arch-rival Harvard.

On graduation, the young man decided to take up the practice of law and studied in the office of a prominent attorney in Binghamton, N.Y. He was extremely poor, but upon being admitted to the bar spent all his money on a dress suit for the occasion.

Two years after graduation, he moved to Chicago to get his professional start. For teaching French to some people who ran a boarding house there he was given his meals. He slept on a lounge in his law office.

THE YOUNG man decided to establish a commission business. Soon he had a partner, Sidney Kent, his brother, who had been working in a wholesale store in Chicago. The firm name was A. E. Kent and Co. Corn and grain were shipped on commission, and the firm also handled furs and buffalo hides.

It was a fellow New Englander, John B. Lyon, a big merchant and speculator in Chicago, who suggested an entirely new field to young Albert. During a visit he pointed out to Kent a truck loaded with dressed, frozen hogs, that had been killed by the farmers and had been hauled to Chicago for marketing. Lyon said there was big money in butchering and packing hogs. Thus began the packing firm of A. E. Kent and Co.

The company was a success and became the largest packing house in Chicago. But the young businessman found a much prettier Chicago attraction in Adaline Dutton.

THE DAUGHTER of Alvah Dutton and Elizabeth Holt, Adaline had five sisters. The family had lived in a rural log cabin. Then when his daughters were older, the father decided to move to Springville, Erie County, N.Y., where there was an academy. He sold his farm and the family moved into a brick house which he built in Springville. When Adaline was 14, her mother died.

Adaline was a good student who graduated with honors from the academy and taught school in Springville.

When her father married again, Adaline resented her stepmother and the ties between the sisters were intensified. In 1855, Adaline's older sister, Melissa, married Augustus Parsons and went to live in Chicago, where her husband was in temporary partnership with Albert Emmett Kent. Adaline visited her sister in Chicago and there she met young Kent.

It was not until 1857 that they became engaged and Adaline returned to Springville to prepare her trousseau. They were married in Springville and returned to Chicago to live.

ALBERT, THEIR first child, died when he was 2. A daughter, Mary, the second child, was an invalid. Although she lived to be 29, she spent many of those years under the care of a physician in Philadelphia. William was the youngest child.

In 1868, A. E. Kent traveled to Europe for his health and later sent for his family to join him. They were some time in France and Geneva. On their return to Chicago, the senior Kent's health was found not bettered, so with T. H. Richardson, superintendent of the packing business, he came to California for the decisive camping trip.

William Kent described his father as rather stern but said he gave much time to his son's early education, teaching him Latin and French and correcting his English.

ALTHOUGH A. E. Kent was opposed to gambling or betting, he considered speculation an exercise in judgment. The son said he dealt in provisions, wheat, corn, cotton and coffee, and anything that offered a chance for profit. He had faith in his country's potential and bought large tracts of land.

A. E. Kent took his brothers, cousins and a few friends into the partnership. He had large ranches in Nebraska and Nevada and also bought much property in Chicago. Well before the Civil War, he opposed slavery and, according to his son, was involved in the "underground railroad" which helped Negroes escape through Illinois into Canada.

After the Kent residence was built in what is now Marin's Kent Woodlands, the senior Kent and his wife gave much attention to the "home place." About 20 acres were cultivated. Orchards and vineyards were planted as were exotic trees and shrubs.

Mrs. William Kent tells how her mother-in-law liked to drive to San Rafael for the mail and to shop. The "carriage horses," manes and tails brushed into glossy waves and hooves painted, were driven by the coachman. The carriage resembled a Victoria, with a top that could be lowered. This elegant vehicle was not taken out for mere errands.

THE SENIOR Mrs. Kent rode in a high "spring wagon" to do the errands, carrying a parasol to protect herself from the sun or an umbrella against the rain. Although she must have missed the busy life of Chicago and her friends and relatives in the East, she found new interests in Marin.

She had her problems, too. Her husband, now an invalid, had a nervous dread of meeting people.

But she had a busy life. Gradually the family circle increased. Two of Mrs. Kent's nieces, Mary Stearns and Elizabeth Parsons, came to live with the Kents after their mothers died, and William Savage, a nephew of the senior Kent, had his place in the household.

THE HOUSEHOLD ran smoothly under Mrs. Kent's direction. A Chinese cook presided over the kitchen, a housemaid had several assistants, gardeners took charge of the grounds and the coachman supervised the stable, where there were the "carriage" and riding horses plus William's pony, which he cared for himself. The boy had other regular chores such as bringing in wood.

Mrs. Kent recognized when her husband was bored by "country" living. She frequently addressed him by his second name and would say: "Emmett, we are going East," and would add "tomorrow."

If he demurred, she would say firmly: "I have made reservations."

ARRANGEMENTS would be made to see that everything at home ran smoothly in their absence. Then the senior Kents would make their journey.

The early years at Kentfield, called Tamalpais when the trains came through in 1875, were happy ones for the young son. On his pony he would gallop from his home over Wolfe's Grade to a private school, Miss Wilson's, on Fifth in San Rafael. He was like other young lads who delighted in throwing what was at hand, mudballs and stones, and was expert in the use of sling shots, pea shooters, bows and arrows and boomerangs, usually making them.

He would get into fights with other boys, but was not strong enough to win, as he was underweight.

BEFORE HE was allowed to own a gun, he loaded cartridges for his father. When he was 11 he was given a gun and his father taught him how to shoot. The boy became an expert marksman and hunter. The hills were full of game.

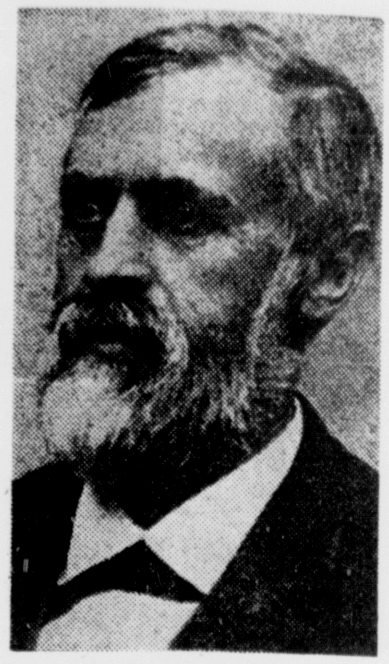
However, there were the long evenings, in which he read many of the classics and enjoyed The Youth's Companion.

William learned the Morse Code and sent and received business messages for his father, who had a private wire installed in the house that connected with the Western Union office in San Rafael. From there the messages were sent on to the San Francisco office and to the Chicago and New York stock exchanges.

AFTER A FEW years at Miss Wilson's, William attended the public school at Ross Landing for a short time. He was also taught at a private school by an Episcopalian minister.

Then there was an unhappy period when the boy was sent to boarding school, or seminary, in San Francisco. His classmates were a delinquent lot, "packed guns," chewed, smoked and gambled. Their favorite sport was preying on the helpless Chinese laundrymen by breaking his windows and throwing mud on the clean clothes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent finally relented and employed a young Englishman, Octavius S. C. Bates, as William's tutor. The tutor was admired and loved by his "boys." He took them on vacation trips where they studied wild life.



IT WAS Albert Emmett Kent, above, who brought his family West in 1871 from Chicago and settled in Marin County, beginning an association that was to have a great significance in the county's history and growth.

FOR THREE years, Bates was the Kent tutor, sometimes living at the Kent house and sometimes in San Rafael, where, in 1882, he established the Selborne School for Boys. In England, Bates had had as his friend and backer the Earl of Selborne.

The tutor was a firm disciplinarian and extremely critical. Young William often showed his resentment and there were frequent clashes between teacher and pupil. Indeed, home life was not always pleasant with an irritable and nervous father and an invalid older sister. But the boy's mother had a strong and buoyant nature, and a never failing sense of humor. His tensions were also alleviated by long walks with his gun and dog through the foothills of Mount Tamalpais.

When their son was 17, William's parents decided he should have a more formal education. Albert E. Kent had been a pupil of Prof. Thomas A. Thacher, a graduate of Yale and a professor of Latin there, and the friendship had continued over the years. The senior Kents asked Professor Thacher to act as guardian and counselor for their son, which he agreed to.

YOUNG WILLIAM was enrolled in Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, Conn. The Hopkins School had a strict college preparatory course.

After a short time, a change was made in the educational plan to which Professor Thacher and William's parents agreed. The boy became the pupil of Walter R. Bridgman, a recent Yale graduate who helped the Kents' son bridge the educational gaps.

This meant long and hard study after school hours to make up in a year and a half the required work which ordinarily took three years in the regular school course.

BRIDGMAN WAS a splendid tutor and a good companion, and William became proficient in the Greek language and literature.

The boy had been staying at a freshman rooming house but his tutor and Professor Thacher did not approve. So at his second year at Hopkins, another shift was made and William became a member of the household of Professor and Mrs. Thacher.

At home were the Thachers' three boys and a girl: Sherman, a Yale senior; William, William Kent's classmate at Hopkins; George, 12, a grammar school student, and Elizabeth, 14. She was to become Mrs. William Kent.

THE WIFE of Albert Emmett Kent and the mother of William Kent was the former Adaline Dutton, a woman of intellect and a warm sense of humor.

THE OTHER Thacher sons, all Yale graduates, were frequent visitors.

Despite a rigid study schedule, William was active in sports. He played on the football and baseball teams and was manager of the baseball nine. He was a member of Pi Sigma Tau fraternity. He was also one of the editors of the school paper.

The young man was in the highest division on entering Yale in September of 1883.

At the beginning of his sophomore year at Yale, the student moved into a college dormitory. His dorm was heated entirely by wood fires. There were no bathrooms in the building and students had to go to the gym for hot and cold showers.

LIKE MANY other college men, William found himself short of money and he was irked when his father demanded an accounting of his expenditures. He was constantly overdrawing his account.

At Yale William Kent did not play on the baseball or football teams, but he was active otherwise and during vacations he went hunting and fishing. He belonged to several literary societies.

IN MUNICH he studied German. The Thacher brothers visited doctors, hospitals and labs.

In a letter to his mother and father, William Kent explained how he spent his money: dinner with good beer, 50 cents; German lesson (an hour), 50 cents; hotel room, 50 cents a day.

William particularly enjoyed the course in political economy at Yale. Then, from this stimulating life at college, the young man, at the age of 23, was catapulted into the hard, cold world of business. He went to Chicago to take charge of the family enterprises. They were so many and varied that young William had much difficulty in deciding what businesses were good and which should be liquidated.

THE NAME OF Kent had faded from the memory of most people in Chicago. The Armours, Swifts and Cudahys had become leaders in the meat industry. Refrigerated cars carried meat on the transcontinental trains, and refrigerated lockers on the steamships took beef to foreign countries.

A. E. Kent wanted his son to do some speculating on his own by studying the market, then buying stocks and grain. The son was not interested in this phase of business but he was a keen judge of land value.

He found most of the earlier Kent investments in Chicago real estate satisfactory. But the ranch property, for the most part run by "remote control," was another matter. He went to all of the ranches, and though he appeared to be hunting prairie chickens and sage hens, he was actually studying the land, itself, with its resources of water, timber and minerals, plus grain and livestock.

THE YOUNG businessman was also watching the managers and it was his unpleasant duty to give a few "walking papers."

He made several large investments on his own, sometimes combining business with his hunting and camping trips. While in Louisiana bayous, he observed the wonderful cypress trees growing in the water. He realized that the trees were rot-resistant and bought a large tract of this timber.

Like his father, the young man also took friends into partnership on his deals. One of these transactions was made in North Carolina where he purchased a large tract of land because it had a mild climate and had direct rail transportation to New York.

MOST OF his deals met with his father's approval, but this was not so when he decided to subdivide a portion of the Chicago property. His father was furious and tried to break off the arrangements. But, the father had to admit later, the subdivision was a success.

THE KENT STORY

All was not business for the busy young man. He kept in close touch with the Thacher family, and his special interest was Elizabeth, to whom he wrote many letters.

For his first two years in Chicago, William divided his time between the home of his aunt (Lucinda Dutton) and her husband, Judge McCoy, and that of his uncle, Sidney Kent. In the fall of 1889, William's mother came to Chicago to establish a home for him on the South Side.

For the wedding, guests arrived by four-horse stage from the nearest railroad station in the town of San Buenaventura (now Ventura). The wedding party assembled on the wide porch of the ranch house, and Dr. Jesse W. Hough, a Yale classmate of A. E. Kent, officiated at the ceremony.

William and his bride lived in an eight-room house on the South Side of Chicago. A. E. Kent was delighted when the couple's first child was born and the baby named for him. By mutual agreement of A. E. Kent and William, the firm name was now A. E. Kent & Son.

IN 1892, BEFORE their second child was born, William and Elizabeth moved to another house on the South Side. They were able to buy this property and an adjacent lot where a cow was pastured. The family traveled to the business and shopping district five miles away, in a horse-drawn phaeton.

As the family grew, more rooms were added to the house. But William Kent was impatient with city life. He liked to hunt, fish and camp. To be outdoors, he took up the game of golf. His wife said he was never a good player but it was an easily available form of exercise and he enjoyed his association with golf club members.

The role of landlord was an irksome one. In 1894, an article written by Florence Kelly, appeared in a Chicago newspaper attacking unsanitary conditions of some property in the Hull House district "owned by A. E. Kent & Son." The rapidly growing city had built up around the little house for which small rent was charged.

WILLIAM KENT was greatly disturbed and went to Hull House to talk with Jane Addams (famous social worker and Nobel Prize winner) and explained the situation. He said that improvements would mean the rents would have to be raised and the tenants would have no place to go. The outcome was that he turned the property over to Hull House supervisors. The houses were torn down, the grounds cleared and a public playground established.

This project was given financial support by the former owner. But he was disappointed the rental problem had not been solved.

On the lighter side, William Kent found pleasure in meeting young professional and business men at the University Club. Here city problems were discussed. William Kent had taken also on himself the duties of alderman.

Then, with a relative or pal, he would leave for one of the ranches or the wilderness, to camp, fish and hunt. He liked to do the cooking in camp, and would return to Chicago refreshed and relaxed.

In January of 1901 Albert E. Kent died, and William came to Kentfield temporarily to be with his grieving mother. Back in Chicago, his friends urged him to run for Congress from his Illinois district, but he decided against the campaign.

In the summer of 1903, William Kent came to Marin again to visit his mother. He decided a change of scene would be good for her, so he took her to Lake Tahoe. There he bought a large parcel of land on the lake shore and engaged an architect to build a house.

AT THAT TIME, Tahoe land was cheap, and William was quick to realize the potential.

In the spring of 1906, William Kent arrived yet again in California on what he thought was a short business trip. On April 18, 1906, San Francisco was devastated by the earthquake and fire. William Kent was with his mother during those terrible days, and his boundless energy was felt in the reconstruction period. He supplied food to the refugees and arranged for a supply of currency in small denominations.

In 1906, Roger, the seventh child in the William Kent family, was born. It was then decided that the family should move West permanently. Plans were made to enlarge the Kentfield residence. The following year, William and Elizabeth Kent with their children, Albert Emmett, Thomas Thacher, Elizabeth, William Jr., Adaline, Sherman and Roger, arrived in Kentfield to make their home.

BUSINESS interests in Chicago had been consolidated and now were under good supervision.

While William Kent missed the busy life and his friends in Chicago, he took an active part in western political life and in conservation of natural resources. He was greatly disturbed by the cutting down of the giant redwoods.

According to William Kent's own story of the saving Muir Woods, then known as Redwood Canyon, the property had been a part of the grant to Capt. William A. Richardson. Samuel Throckmorton had acquired most of the Richardson land, but the San Francisco Savings Union held a mortgage on the property and was forced to foreclose. Kent's friend, Sidney B. Cushing, and others urged him to buy Redwood Canyon. He bought the land for $45,000.

IN 1907 THE successors to the Tamalpais Land and Water Co., the North Coast Water Co., started condemnation proceedings to create a reservoir in Redwood Canyon that would have destroyed the largest part of the magnificent timber.

William Kent went to work immediately to cut red tape and succeeded in having Muir Woods declared a national monument. It was President Theodore Roosevelt, to whom the donor had sent photographs of the woods, who proclaimed the national monument on Jan. 9, 1908.

JOHN MUIR was a frequent guest at the Kent home as were other celebrities.

In 1920, Kent bought 70 acres more on the mountainside and added this tract to Muir Woods.

Then, as now, juveniles were a problem. Boys were vandalizing the railroad station at Kentfield as well as the postoffice. It was a difficult situation. William Kent, his wife and mother and their friends held long discussion on the matter.

As a result, Mrs. A. E. Kent gave 29 acres of land opposite the station for a civic and recreational center. She and her son built a commodious clubhouse there for community use.

TO MANAGE the project, the Marin Stadium Association was formed, and an executive committee of 50 was appointed. Represented were all the cities and towns in Southern and Central Marin.

The first annual entertainment was held on Saturday evening, Aug. 8, 1908. In the printed program was a statement by the committee that read: "Already Mrs. Kent and her son have engaged men and teams who are at work putting the tract into shape and it is expected to have a portion of the grounds ready this summer."

J. W. Dolliver, architect, outlined plans for the center. He said the structures would be built in the mission-style, the main one to be a meeting hall with stage and with removable sides to take advantage of the verandas in the summer time. There would also be gymnasiums, croquet grounds and playgrounds for the children, ball fields, running track, tennis courts, swimming tank and boating house.

"THE SYSTEM for supplying water is through the aid of a Dutch windmill which will add to the attractiveness of the grounds."

In the spring, the school children gathered for Maypole dances and on June 7, 1923, the Marin Journal reported: "Marin Rodeo draws 3,000 Sunday at Kentfield Stadium."

On Oct. 31, 1909, Tamalpais Centre Women's Club was dedicated with Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago as principal speaker. William Kent, speaking for his mother, said: "She resents the idea that her gift should be described as generous; rather it should be considered sensible. She believes it is putting land and capital to better and more productive use."

THE SENIOR Mrs. Kent also was much interested in the Presbyterian Orphanage and Farm in San Anselmo (later Sunny Hills). A Marin Journal issue in October of 1903 reported: "A garden fete for the benefit of Presbyterian Orphanage was held on the grounds of Mrs. A. E. Kent's residence in Kentfield." The annual event became the Grape Festival with grapes from the Kents' vineyards decorating the booths.

William Kent watched political trends closely. In Chicago, he had served as alderman to fight what he said was "the most disorderly and probably the most blatant corrupt assemblage that our country has ever produced."

A Municipal Voters League had been organized and William Kent was its president.

IT WAS NOT unusual for league members to be waylaid and beaten. As a result of one attack, the young reformer, Kent, offered a thousand dollar reward for evidence on the crime. He accomplished much during his terms as alderman. It was an education in the realities of political life.

The Marin Great Register of Voters in 1910 listed William Kent, 46, occupation, livestock, as a Republican, but he preferred to consider himself as an Independent or Progressive.

In January of 1910, A. J. Gregg of Mill Valley, also registered as a Republican, but who introduces himself as an "Independent in politics," wrote to Kent urging him to run for Congress "to serve not only this district but the Nation."

KENT REPLIED that he did not feel able to stand a strenuous campaign but added he would "take the honor if it were offered." He was now urged to enter the campaign by Jane Addams, Theodore Roosevelt, Gifford Pinchot, Jenkin Lloyd Jones and many others. He agreed and set forth as planks for his platform: a downward revision of the tariff; a parcels post; regulation of common carriers; spread of the merit system, especially in the postal service; curtailing of the franking privilege; conservation; election of U.S. senators by direct vote of the people; a graduated income tax; development of water ways; revision of immigration laws.

So forthright was his stand in behalf of the Orientals and for the rights of the Negro that he was accused of prejudice against his own race. In spite of this, William Kent was elected to Congress.

HE WROTE to Albert E. Kent, his eldest son then a sophomore at Yale: "I won the second round in the fight by something over three thousand majority . . . (Hiram) Johnson

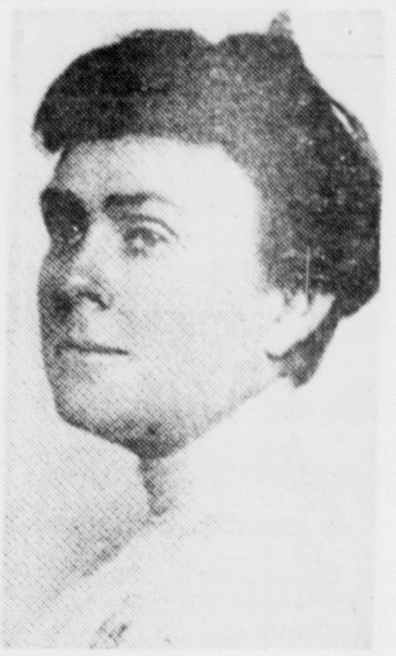
AS A YOUTH, William Kent loved to roam the countryside on horseback and with gun. This faded photograph shows him as a 16-year-old, on his pony and with packhorse, returning from a successful hunt in the Marin hills.

Marin's Young Congressman Fought For Equal Rights For All



AS A PROGRESSIVE and independent-minded congressman, William Kent fought courageously the battle for equal rights for all people long before the current interest in civil rights and liberties. His wife, the former Elizabeth Thacher, too, took an active part in public affairs, particularly the suffragette movement and conservation.

The William Kents went to Washington where they found a house for their large family on a corner of F Street in an older part of the city. They became acquainted with congenial neighbors.

Mrs. Kent found the life in Washington exciting. As the wife of a congressman, she made new and interesting friends, among these was Mrs. Bob LaFollette, wife of the progressive senator.

MRS. LAFOLLETTE was a member of the board of the National American Woman Suffrage Association and at her suggestion Mrs. Kent was appointed congressional chairman. She was to see that the suffrage amendment was introduced into both houses of Congress, and time alloted for hearings and publicity given.

Congressman Kent was heartily in favor of woman suffrage and encouraged his wife to give her time to it. She gave a reception at her Washington home at which noted women including Jane Addams and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw gave impassioned addresses on the right of women to vote.

After the Kents returned to California Mrs. Kent joined with other women in this state who were fighting for the right to vote.

IT WAS NOT until June of 1919 that the 19th Amendment to the Constitution was approved by the states. The amendment, stating that "the right of citizens to vote shall not be denied because of sex," became effective Aug. 28, 1920.

In March of 1911 William Kent went from his Marin home to Washington D.C. to take the oath of office. His wife remained at home, but he was accompanied east by his mother and his cousin, Elizabeth Parsons, who remained with him for a month during the extra session of Congress which began in April.

In a letter to his wife, Congressman Kent admitted he had "stage fright" every time he spoke — but speak he did. He made his first address on April 28, 1911, on the production and distribution of wealth under a protective tariff, explaining that while he believed in protection of infant industries, once they became self-sustaining they did not need a protective tariff.

IN HIS new position William Kent was called upon to make important decisions.

In letters to constituents he stated plainly his convictions on the conservation of timber and other natural resources.

The menace of the Mediterranean fruit fly alarmed California orchardists. The Simmons Bill establishing a quarantine against the fly had been introduced in Congress, but it was feared it would die in committee. Through William Kent's efforts the bill was passed in both the House and Senate. The congressman considered this a great victory.

THEN HE TURNED his attention to the Seaman's Bill, later known as the LaFollette Act. Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union, worked with Senator LaFollette, who wrote the bill.

When William Kent learned the seaman was bound to his ship and had no redress for wretched living quarters, poor food, overwork and harsh treatment, he went into action. In an impassioned address to the House, he likened the condition of a seaman to a peon. Kent labored for the bill for three stormy years before it was finally passed.

At the end of his term Kent, impatient at the slow process of law-making and restless, decided he would not seek reelection. His district had been changed from the Second to the First, and Sacramento was no longer in his district. Two counties with a small population were added.

HOWEVER, AFTER consideration, realizing much work remained to be done in Congress, the congressman changed his mind. On July 6, 1912, at the close of the summer session of Congress, he announced his candidacy for reelection.

He did not seek a party nomination at the primaries and his name did not appear on the ballot. He was nominated by petition as a Progressive.

Gifford Pinchot toured the district in behalf of his friend. David Starr Jordan of Stanford gave him strong support and California women, jubilant on having been given the right to vote, rallied to the cause of the man who had helped them in their fight. His own record in Congress, however, was a big reason for his election Nov. 5, 1912.

ON MARCH 6, 1913, two days after the opening of 63rd Congress under the administration of President Woodrow Wilson, Congressman Kent, his wife and sons Albert and Thomas, on their spring vacation from Yale, and Sherman, 9, sailed for Panama on a trip for national legislators with their families to acquaint them with government affairs in the Canal Zone.

The delegation reached the canal before the water was turned in and watched the working of the locks.

Back in Congress on April 26, Kent spoke again on the tariff. He declared: "We need a system that will lead toward productive endeavor, not one that will encourage misplaced effort."

IN THE SUMMER of 1913 Mexico had civil disorders. The United States was being urged to intervene to protect property owned by U. S. citizens.

In a personal letter to his colleagues, William Kent stated: "The lives of American soldiers should not be sacrificed, the people's treasure should not be wasted, in protecting 'the property rights' of those of our citizens, who, having gone beyond our borders, have taken a chance on the laws and conditions of peoples beyond our control.

"As one financially interested in Mexico, inasmuch as I would not jeopardize my own life nor the lives of my sons to protect my property, I would be a coward and a murderer if I should send any of my countrymen to death in behalf of that property."

THE CONGRESSMAN constantly talked for peace with Uncle Sam's southern neighbor and urged that food be sent to the poor of Mexico to lessen the tensions there.

For more than three years William Kent served on the Public Lands Committee. Most of the members insisted that all of the public lands should be turned over to the U. S. to administer them as it saw fit.

Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, cooperated in drafting two principal bills, the Coal on Oil Lane Leasing Bill and the Water Power Bill, both relating to and providing for the reservation and leasing of water power sites and rights-of-ways on public lands. The bills were opposed on the floors of the House and Senate, but finally became law.

The year of 1914 brought success in political life but also great personal sorrow to Congressman Kent.

HIS MOTHER, who had been such an inspiration to him, died. In March, with a companion, she was traveling on an eastbound train when she was taken ill. She was rushed to a hospital in Ogden, Utah, where she died before her son could come to her.

Services were held in Graceland Cemetery Chapel in Chicago and interment was in the family plot there.

In April of 1914 Congressman Kent felt obliged to oppose President Woodrow Wilson's policy in Mexico. There the dictator, Victoriano Huerta, was opposed by Wilson. An incident involving U. S. sailors in Tampico caused trouble and a resolution was offered in Congress which stated the President was justified in the employment of armed forces to enforce demands made upon Huerta.

KENT EXPLAINED why he voted against the resolution. He said the record of U. S. citizens in Mexico had been "scandalous until recent times," that "our outlaws, promoters, grafters" had gone there, treated the Mexican people with contempt, killed the men, had not dealt fairly with the women and had participated in the larceny of their land. The California lawmaker said he had great sympathy and liking for the Mexican people.

However, the United States sent forces to Mexico. Then, at the brink of war, the U. S. and Mexico agreed to mediation, and Huerta abdicated.

IN 1914, CONGRESSMAN Kent did not enter the primary of Aug. 25, but sent letters to his constituents reporting on his "stewardship" of two terms. Then he went with his family to Lake Tahoe to rest during August.

He was elected to his third term Nov. 3, 1914. In December, he joined in the general debate on the Hobson Prohibition Amendment, which he opposed. He was not in favor of saloons and the "liquor traffic," which he termed wasteful and demoralizing, but he spoke of the hardship prohibition would cause to the many honest, industrious and sober grape growers in his district and said the winemaking had been encouraged. That prohibition amendment was voted down.

Affairs of state were shelved temporarily as plans were made for the wedding of the Kents' daughter, Elizabeth, to George Stanleigh Arnold. They were married on Feb. 26, 1915, on the silver wedding day of her parents. The wedding and reception were held at the F Street house in Washington.

THE BRIDEGROOM, a San Francisco lawyer, was warmly welcomed into the family circle. On March 4, 1915, Kent once again took his seat in Congress as an Independent.

William Kent was on friendly terms with President Wilson and together they discussed problems and proposed legislation. Kent knew especially well the problems of cattlemen and the flagrant abuses of the popular Homestead projects.

The summer of 1915 was the first summer since he had been in Congress that an extra session was not called. He was glad to rest in California where the Panama Pacific International Exposition was held in San Francisco.

ON MAY 28 HE invited all visiting congressmen and their wives to an excursion up Mount Tamalpais and down to Muir Woods for a barbecue luncheon as his guests. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, inspired by the natural beauty, made an eloquent address.

The California congressman had intended to go east in November but he had to remain at home because of an appendicitis operation. While recovering, he wrote 12 bills which he wanted to present to Congress. One of these was for the creation of a National Park Service. Many organizations gave support to it and it was passed Aug. 26, 1916.

In the 1916 presidential campaign, Kent accepted the office of national chairman of the Woodrow Wilson Independent League. Although Wilson was a Democrat and Kent did not belong to that party, he had a close friendship with and great admiration for Wilson.

MRS. KENT told of an interesting facet of this campaign. She was a member of the National Woman's Party and opposed the candidacy of Wilson because he had said the country was not ready for woman suffrage. So while her husband campaigned for Wilson, Mrs. Kent traveled through California and Oregon opposing Wilson.

Her husband said he had valued his independence and she had a right to hers.

The second session of Congress, which began Dec. 4, 1916, was one in which William Kent had a busy and satisfying part. A congressional investigation of food packing, production and distribution was conducted. The President asked for an appropriation to carry on the investigation and Kent spoke strongly in favor of it. The appropriation was voted.

IT WAS A long time before laws requiring supervision and regulation of the packing industry were passed, but the pioneer work done by the California congressman was ultimately rewarded.

Mrs. Kent told another amusing story about herself in Washington. Beginning in January of 1917, Mrs. Kent and other members of the National Woman's Party picketed the White House to dramatize the fight for women's right to vote.

The picketers carried suffrage banners and finally Mrs. Kent and others were arrested for obstructing traffic.

The sentence was three days in jail or a fine of $25.

Against his wife objections, William Kent paid the fine. He said he would spend his last cent to keep her out of jail.

William Kent believed wholeheartedly in preservation of Mount Tamalpais, a part of which he owned. He wanted to keep it for public use and to protect its watershed. Now William Kent found a bitter water controversy going on in his home county.

San Rafael had sought to get lower water rates and a more adequate service from the Marin Water and Power Co., but had been blocked by law suits. Other towns protested, but to no avail.

WILLIAM KENT, in answer to pleas from his neighbors, returned from Washington to battle for the water-users. A petition had been launched proposing the organization of the Marin Municipal Water District.

In San Rafael, where the public meeting was held, he noted there were about 60 saloons on its main street. He began his address by saying: "The people of Marin County do not know how to mix their drinks. We have too much whiskey and too little water."

The formation of the MMWD was beset by controversy. Small companies, which were to be included in the district, fought the plan, and bonds had to be issued.

WILLIAM KENT said his father owned 305 shares of the capital stock of the old Marin County Water Co. He said that the stock had paid 6 per cent ever since he knew anything about it, and that the company was practically a protected monopoly for which the people in their water rates had paid.

Finally the MMWD, having taken over the smaller companies, became a reality.

William Kent was greatly concerned because the program for conservation of natural resources, such as coal, oil, water and minerals, was stymied in Congress. He protested to President Wilson in a conference but did not get far.

On April 6, 1917, Congress, in special session, declared war on Germany. Domestic matters were shelved to give full attention to the war effort.

STILL, KENT threw all his influence towards inducing President Wilson to act upon a new plan which finally resulted in the Federal Water Power Act. With the President in personal command, assisted by the secretary of war, secretary of the interior and secretary of agriculture, a strict control of leasing water-power sites was established.

Kent did not seek a fourth term in Congress. He returned to his Kentfield home.

He had taken part in framing the Revenue Act of 1916, within which a Tariff Commission was formed. On March 21, 1917, President Wilson appointed him to the commission. He served a 1917-1920 term. He had always opposed tariff for revenues, pointing out that it could justifiably be levied on luxury articles but worked a hardship when levied on necessities.

THE TARIFF Commission made an exhaustive study of foreign trade zones or free ports, and Kent, who was in charge, gave free zones his endorsement. He spoke in San Francisco, New York and New Orleans on the advantages of free ports. However, the bill, of which William Kent was the "father," did not pass the Congress.

In 1920 William Kent announced he would be a Republican candidate for the United States Senate from California in the primary election.

His platform was simple and direct: the right of free speech and freedom of the press; opposition to any extension of war powers during peace time; deportation of aliens who assail U. S. institutions; a regard for universal military training as more conducive to strife than to peace.

IN A STATEMENT that concluded his platform, he declared that if he were elected he would be counted as a Republican member and would vote as a Republican but he would not be bound by caucus pledges and he would cast a nonpartisan vote on all important issues.

IN APRIL, the Kents' son, William Jr., and Sophia Morris were married in Oak Park, Ill. The parents of the bride, Gardner and Sophia Morris, were old Chicago friends of the Kents'.

The Kents had welcomed another member into the family circle earlier when their son, Thomas Thacher Kent, took as his bride Anne Thompson of Whitestone, Long Island. This was during World War I when Tom was a second lieutenant in the Air Service.

As for the political campaign, Kent was defeated by Shortridge in the primary election of Aug. 31, 1920. Weary but not disheartened, the former congressman turned his attention to matters in California which concerned him greatly.

THE PRESERVATION of the natural beauty of Lake Tahoe was a continuing fight. Early in January of 1913 the Lake Tahoe Protective Association was organized. Among those most active in it were William Kent, E. C. Voorhies, A. Crawford Greene, V. S. McClatchy (editor of the Sacramento Bee) and E. G. Schmiedell.

The association contended the natural run-off from the lake should be used for irrigation first and power production afterwards. There was a long battle with the power companies and it was not until 1935 that Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes made the final decision fixing the highest level of the lake above sea level, providing storage for the irrigationists, protecting the houses on the shore and keep it for "those who go to Lake Tahoe to enjoy the beauty of the scenery and to rejuvenate themselves in its natural surroundings."

William Kent did not live to rejoice over that victory for the conservationists.

The former congressman now had more time to devote to his family, although he kept abreast of national and international affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent cruised the South Pacific. Then the Kents, with their daughter Adaline and son Sherman, sailed for Europe for a summer holiday. Later they were joined by Roger Kent.

When Robert LaFollette sought the presidency as a Progressive and Socialist in 1924, William Kent was drawn into his campaign, although he did not entirely approve of the platform.

IN THE SUMMER of 1925, Mr. and Mrs. Kent, with several of their children and two other couples, sailed on a chartered boat along the British Columbian coast.

William Kent, who loved the outdoors greatly, had suffered a number of illnesses.

These brief interludes did not interfere with his many projects. He was determined that the beauty of the Redwood Highway 101 be preserved and wrote many letters to the State Highway Commission objecting to the straightening and widening of the roadway to permit more rapid transit. He pointed out that it was the most unique stretch of highway in the country and depended for its charm on the trees. He suggested that in the future, if heavy traffic demanded a speedier route, it would be better to put in another cut-off road for such a purpose rather than destroy the scenic effects.

On May 25, 1927, William Kent suffered a slight stroke on his left side. Although partial recovery was quick, he had to accept the life of a semi-invalid. But he was alert and continued to send letters to newspapers and high officials.

ON SEPT. 23, 1927, in a letter to the executive secretary of the National Conference of State Parks, he wrote: "As far as California is concerned, the two important things . . . are the program of the Save-the-Redwoods League . . . and the establishment of a comprehensive Tamalpais park, which will join Muir Woods. . . ."

Before the close of the year the California State Park Commission was appointed and Tamalpais State Park was established under its jurisdiction.

Those who enjoy the park should be aware that one of William Kent's last acts was to deed 204 acres in Steep Ravine as an addition to Tamalpais State Park.

WILLIAM KENT died March 13, 1928. A memorial service was held in Tamalpais Centre on a Sunday afternoon, March 18.

Among the speakers were Rev. Ernest Bradley; Jesse K. Brown, president of Tamalpais Conservation Club; Mrs. E. G. Stetson, chairman of Tamalpais State Park Association; William E. Colby, president of the Sierra Club; Miss Alice Eastwood, famous botanist and secretary of the Academy of Science; Lynn T. White, D.D., and Sherman Day Thacher, brother of Mrs. Kent.

The latter concluded his remarks by saying of William Kent: "He liked appreciation and was full of sentiment, but he hated over laudation and sentimentality. . . .

"It has been a great experience to watch through over 40 years the development of his character and his powers and note the persistence of his vivid and unique personality. . . ."

Mrs. Kent never indulged in sentiment and kept her deep grief to herself. Each year she made the welcoming address to the thousands who attended the Grape Festival held in the Kent gardens. She maintained her interest in the Tamalpais Centre Women's Club, of which she was a charter member and first president.

WITH MOST of her family married and moved into homes of their own, mostly in nearby Kent Woodlands, Mrs. Kent built a new house in 1936 on the estate which she called New Haven for the city in Connecticut where she was born and reared and where she first met William Kent. Roger Kent and his family moved into the old Kent home.

Nearby were the houses of the

But both Roger and Sherman Kent, after long and distinguished careers in public life, remain prominent in U. S. affairs.

SHERMAN, WHO married the former Elizabeth Gregory, is the retired national estimates director and board chairman of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Roger, who married the former Alice Cooke in 1930, is a leading figure in the Democratic Party in California whose many public posts have included the state chairmanship of that party and service with a number of federal boards and commisssions.

And there are grandchildren and great - grandchildren to carry on the Kent tradition of service to community, country and humanity established by William Kent.

PIONEER Albert E. Kent built this Kentfield home in the early 1870s, and it was renovated and enlarged in 1917 by his son, William Kent, to accommodate his family. Today it is the home of the Roger Kents.

Guitars In The Church

By DON KEOWN

The lady customarily attended evening services at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael, but on one recent Sunday she decided to go to 9:15 a.m. mass instead.

To her surprise, she was ushered to special seating at the altar.

The reason became apparent as she looked around the sanctuary. All of St. Raphael's considerable regular seating facilities were filled to capacity.

The attendance was surprisingly larger than that to which she was accustomed. And there seemed to be more than the usual number of young faces among the worshipers.

THE SERVICE that followed told her why. For what is Marin County's most unusual church choir and accompaniment regularly take part in the Sunday 9:15 a.m. mass at St. Raphael's. And it has become the best attended mass of the day, at least partially because of that.

Barbara Quinn Riordan began her St. Raphael's Folk Mass Group in mid-September, 1968.

The folk mass, she explains, is a new development within the Roman Catholic Church, but one that has been winning increasing acceptance.

CONSEQUENTLY, Fr. Thomas Ignatius Kennedy, St. Raphael's pastor, was approached by some of his parish with the suggestion that the San Rafael church, too, should take part in the folk mass movement.

Father Kennedy was receptive to the idea. And for help he turned to a parishioner with a solid musical background — Mrs. Riordan.

Barbara Quinn Riordan is Irish-born with training and experience in opera. She studied and sang in Rome, London and Dublin before coming to the United States 10 years ago with her husband, architect Cecil E. Riordan, also Irish, and their young son, Mark.

STILL, THE gulf between folk music and opera seemed a wide one. Mrs. Riordan's original instrumental background was with the classical piano and violin.

"Yet I had always liked the sound of the guitar," she says, "and when we came to America, we had to leave our piano behind. I was lost without an instrument. I seem to have to be with music. So as an inexpensive and portable replacement, I eventually bought a guitar."

And director Barbara Quinn Riordan leads off one of the sacred tunes that the folk singers and guitarists will perform at the 9:15 a.m. mass at the San Rafael Roman Catholic church the following Sunday. There's Folk Music At Mass At St. Raphael's

She is largely self-taught on the instrument, but did study flamenco under Mariano Cordoba of San Francisco.

THE INSTRUMENT led her into folk music. "It is quite a contrast to opera," she admits. "But I love it."

She accepted Father Kennedy's assignment to organize a folk mass group for St. Raphael's with typical Irish enthusiasm and energy.

In the middle of September, 1968, her group of 50, about 20 of them vocalists, the other 30 guitarists, some of whom also sing, began practicing.

And at about that same time they became a regular part of the Sunday morning mass.

MRS RIORDAN, a service representative in the San Rafael business office of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., gives much of the credit for the success of the program to Fr. James D. Halligan, the St. Raphael's assistant pastor who has worked closely with the folk mass program.

Mrs. Riordan teaches both the playing of the guitar and the folk singing at the practice sessions that are held every Tuesday night at the church.

ALL THE instrumentalists began, she adds, with some guitar experience, although most were in the beginner stage.

While she admits that the guitar is not an easy instrument to master on the professional or expert level, she adds that it is "an instrument from which one can gain enormous satisfaction very quickly, simply by learning some basic chords."

The folk mass group includes among its members her son Mark, now 14, who both plays the guitar and sings.

HUSBAND CECIL helps out with observations sharpened by years of being around good music, and by recording on tape practice sessions so that the members can listen to and improve upon their work.

Mostly from young seminarians, says Mrs. Riordan.

Since the folk mass itself is a recent development, all of the music has been written within the past two or three years.

THERE IS a considerable outpouring of it. Yet groups like that at St. Raphael's are constantly on the look for more.

"What we would love," says Barbara Riordan, "is for some one in Marin to write some folk mass music for us."

Barbara Riordan takes great pleasure from the fact that the 9:15 a.m. Sunday mass with its unusual choir and accompaniment has become St. Raphael's best-attended service.

"The young people seem to like it especially," she says. "But older members of the church have also told us how much pleasure and inspiration they receive from it." Many young couples bring their children and it has become "a family mass."

SHE SAYS that in picking the music the group is careful to avoid the hard rock music sound and to pick softer folk tunes.

"What we look for," she explains, "is something that is simple and melodic — that is easy on the ear."

As for the words, Mrs. Riordan says the emphasis is upon "a great feeling of general Christian love for people," and she adds, "People love the words because they have such practical meaning and so much commonsense."

The congregation is encouraged to sing along with the guitarists and choir, and does so with zest.

FOR THE usual 9:15 a.m. folk mass, the group will select four songs or hymns. Mrs. Riordan usually sings one solo.

They have also made some special appearances including a Christmas service for which violins, flutes and clarinets were added to the accompaniment.

A smaller group from the folk mass guitarists and singers performed at a wedding — and were, according to Mrs. Riordan, "a big success." She hopes there will be more calls in the future upon them for participation in such ceremonies.

BUT THE BIG event of the year for Mrs. Riordan and her charges will be coming up later this month.

On Wednesday Jan. 22, at 8 p.m. in St. Raphael's Church, they will present a folk mass as part of the annual week-long ecumenical observance, the Unity Octave, in its seventh year and opening next Saturday.

"We feel especially proud to have been asked to take part in the Unity Octave," she says. "It seems such a splendid idea and purpose."

IT WILL represent an opportunity by members of all denominations in Marin County to hear and appraise one of the new developments in the Roman Catholic Church in America.

It will also tell them why there is seldom an empty seat in St. Raphael's for 9:15 a.m. Sunday mass. And why, when voices are then raised in praise of God, they are done so with such special vigor and feeling.

AMONG THE several mothers who sing and play with the folk mass group is Mrs. Valerie Gutterling. Ages range from a 9-year-old to a grandmother.

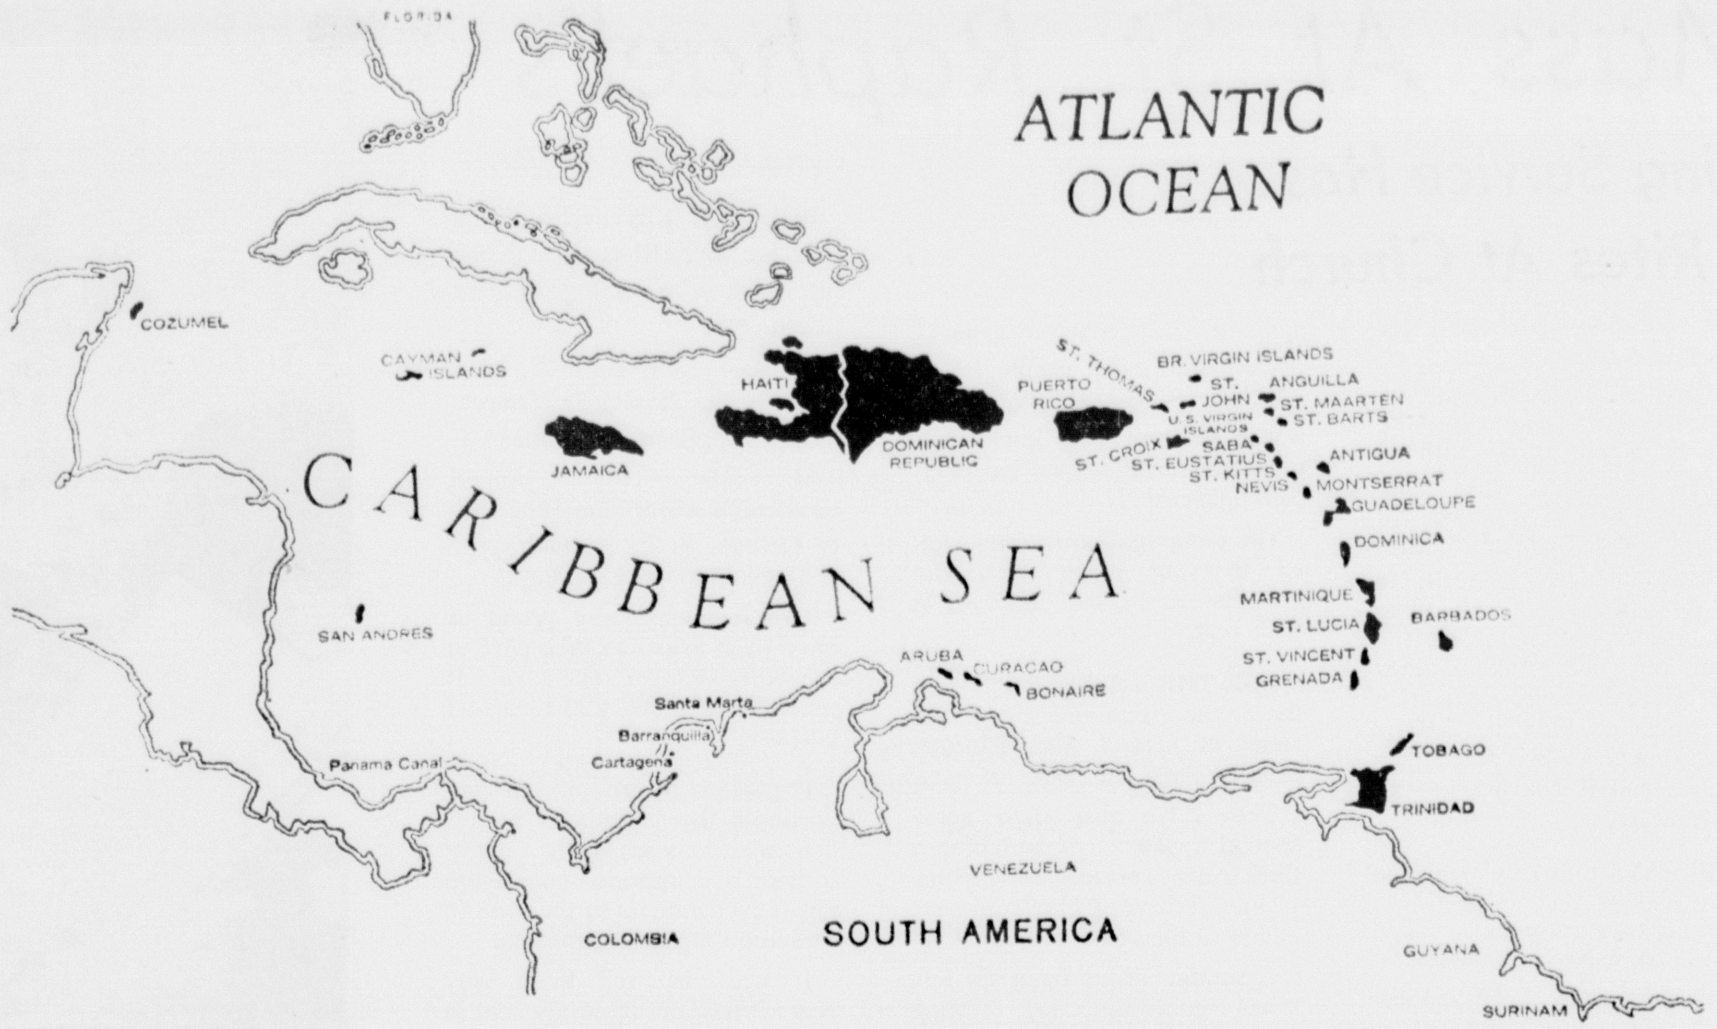
Those Other Islands

The Caribbean Beckons To Marinites



THE CARIBBEAN SEA is dotted with islands of all sizes that offer vacationing Americans not just a change of pace, but several changes. The isles feature a rich variety of cultures and a great diversity of terrain. Surroundings range from cosmopolitan cities to untamed jungles. More and more Marinites are discovering the delights of a holiday in the Caribbean.

It used to be that when a Marinite announced plans for a vacation "in the islands," you could take it for granted he would soon be winging or steaming his way across the Pacific Ocean to Hawaii.

No longer can you do so.

For while Polynesia remains — and deservedly so — a popular holiday spot with traveling Marinites, more and more of our vacationers are discovering the delights of a different group of islands — the West Indies in the Caribbean.

THERE, TOO, they can romp or relax in idyllic climate conditions. There, too, they can enjoy beautiful beaches and other exotic scenery. There, too, they can investigate a cosmopolitan culture that, if anything, is even more international and more diversified than that of the Hawaiian Islands.

The major islands in the Caribbean number some 50, and represent varying cultures of Europe as well as America, plus pockets where African and Asian traditions hold forth.

The Caribbean Travel Association has compiled a thumbnail digest of the principal attractions of those islands offering tourist accommodations, giving the 1967 count for their visitors and their ranking in the area in tourism when available:

"BRITISH ISLANDS"

ANGUILLA: Outstanding skin diving, beaches and the desire for seclusion lure visitors to the limited accommodations at this off-beat 34-square mile island. See St. Kitts.

ANTIGUA: (61,656 visitors, rank, seventh) This pleasant 170-square mile island offers a good range of accommodations, top beaches, all water sports, golf, tennis, horseback riding, a major yachting center, hunting and a casino. See the dramatic "Sound and Light" show at Lord Nelson's dockyard.

BARBADOS: (91,565; fourth) The popular 166-square mile "Little England of the Caribbean" has a wide range of accommodations, top beaches, sightseeing, yachting, all water sports, golf, tennis, horseback riding, in-bond shopping and night life.

BARBUDA: (near Antigua) There's one deluxe lodge, with water sports and hunting.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: (17,544; 11th) Totaling 59 square miles, these 36 isles and islets are still secluded despite their proximity to the popular U.S. Virgins. You'll enjoy beautiful beaches, water sports, sailing, skin diving, fishing, horseback riding, tennis and a peaceful atmosphere.

CAYMAN ISLANDS: (10,328; 18th) Although only a one-hour jet hop from Miami, these three small islands (just under 100 square miles in area) are still off-beat. They're tops for skin diving. Guests enjoy a fair range of accommodations, excellent beaches, water sports, fishing, tennis, hunting, horseback riding and some night life.

DOMINICA: (7,465; 21st) This off-beat, mountainous 290-square mile island boasts the only Carib Indian reservation in the Caribbean. Take jeep safaris into the jungle; enjoy beach and river swimming, hiking, hot springs, water sports.

GRENADA: (20,549; 10th) The scenic 120-square-mile "spice island" of the Caribbean offers excellent beaches, all water sports, a major yachting center, sightseeing, golf, tennis, horseback riding and a fair range of accommodations.

GRENADINES: Scores of small islands between St. Vincent and Grenada attract the yachtsman, skin diver and adventurer. There are tourist facilities on Union Island, Bequia, Carriacou, Young Island, Palm Island and Petit St. Vincent.

MONTSERRAT: (5,373; 23rd) This pleasant 32-square mile island, first settled by the Irish, offers a secluded, restful atmosphere with golf, tennis, hiking, horseback riding, beaches, yachting and water sports.

NEVIS: The birthplace of Alexander Hamilton, Nevis is a scenic, mountainous 36-square mile island offering a quiet atmosphere, beaches, water sports, tennis, horseback riding, bird shooting and fishing. See St. Kitts.

ST. KITTS: (8,938 visitors including about half at Nevis, a few at Anguilla; 19th) A bastion of British sovereignty in the Caribbean during early colonial days, St. Kitts is a mountainous 65-square mile island with beaches, water sports, tennis, horseback riding, hiking and a restful atmosphere.

ST. LUCIA: (16,437; 13th) The locale for tropical scenes in the movie, "Dr. Dolittle," 238-square mile St. Lucia is a luxuriant island offering visitors excellent beaches, all water sports, horseback riding, hunting, duty-free shopping (new this year), and hiking trips to "walk-in" volcanoes.

ST. VINCENT: (7,242; 22nd) Captain Bligh of Bounty fame is the hero of this quiet 150-square mile "plantation island." He brought the Caribbean's first breadfruit trees from Tahiti to the St. Vincent Botanic Gardens, founded in 1765 and the oldest in CURACAO: (64,379; sixth) Long-famed as a cruise port for outstanding duty-free shopping, Curacao now is a major vacation destination. Visitors to the 179-square mile island enjoy fine beaches, all water sports, golf, tennis, horseback riding, casinos, excellent cuisine and sightseeing trips.

SABA: This tiny five-square mile "mountain-in-the-sea" is a place to get away from it all, but accomodations are very limited.

ST. EUSTACE: A major port in colonial days when it was the first foreign land to salute the American Flag during the Revolutionary War, 12-square mile St. Eustatius today is an off-beat destination with a beach and very limited accommodations.

Visitors enjoy beaches, water sports, golf, tennis, shopping, horseback riding and a French-creole atmosphere and cuisine. Sightseeing includes trips to Mt. Pelee, which killed all but one of the 30,000 inhabitants of the city of St. Pierre in an eruption in 1902.

ST. BARTS: See Guadeloupe.

ST. MARTIN: See Guadeloupe and St. Maarten.

"AMERICAN ISLANDS"

PUERTO RICO: (809,753 visitors; rank, first) This 3,423-square mile island is the most popular destination in the Caribbean. A lively, swinging crowd enjoys casinos, night clubs, big-name entertainment, water sports, beaches, championship golf and tennis, horseback riding, a Spanish atmosphere, sightseeing, surfing, — most everything you might want in a tropic isle. The wide range of accommodations offers seclusion, too, but not in the major resort areas.

U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS: (611,361; second) A scenic group of islands where Americans enjoy a $200 duty-free exemption as against $100 elsewhere in the Caribbean. The major islands are:

"SPANISH ISLANDS"

COZUMEL: This 28-square mile island off Mexico's Yucatan coast claims the clearest ocean waters in the world for skin divers. Visitors will find a fair choice of accommodations, top beaches, all water sports, horseback riding and ancient Mayan ruins.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC: (16,000 visitors, rank, 14th) The Caribbean's highest peak, 10,420-foot Pico Duarte, overlooks this 19,332-square mile historic nation which shares the island of Hispaniola with Haiti. Visitors enjoy beach and mountain resort areas, water sports, hunting, cockfights, shopping, horseback riding, golf, tennis, casinos, night life and sightseeing.

SAN ANDRES ISLAND: (A territory of Colombia, 189 miles off the Costa Rican coast). A new tourist destination for Americans, this palm-covered 26-square mile isle hosted some 70,000 visitors last year, mostly Colombians taking advantage of special duty-free exemptions on shopping. Visitors enjoy a good choice of accommodations, excellent beaches, shopping, all water sports and casinos.

Information about all of the above islands is available from the Caribbean Travel Association, 20 East 46th Street, New York, N.Y., 10017.

Some Of The Uncrowded Isles

By MURRAY J. BROWN

Tired of following the crowds?

Looking for a retreat where you can fulfill suppressed desires as an adventurer, recluse, philosopher or beachcomber.

A man who should know says there still are "undiscovered" islands in the Caribbean where you can get lost if that is your bag.

He is Martin Winsch, general manager of the Caribbean Travel Association, who spends most of his time traveling through the islands.

ACCORDING TO Winsch there are dozens of islands which can lay claim to being the least-visited destination for American and other tourists.

Take Redonda, for instance.

This mile-square rock plunk in the center of the Lesser Antilles totals a big zero not only in visitors but in inhabitants too—if you don't count the goats.

Redonda was once claimed as a personal kingdom by an Irish sea adventurer — a claim, incidentally, recognized by the British government.

FOR THE adventurous, there are dozens of other uninhabited islands and cays in the Grenadines and the U.S. and British Virgin Islands. You'll have to rough it, of course.

Statistics are not available, Winsch said, but it doesn't take much imagination to guess the "seclusion index" of such off-the-track spots as St. Eustatius, which is recognized in history as the first foreign land to salute the U. S. flag during the Revolutionary War.

Once a major thriving port, "Statia" has faded into pastoral oblivion with but eight guest house rooms for visitors. Similarly offbeat are St. Barts with 17 guest house rooms, Saba with 25, and Anguilla with about 30.

Montserrat, first settled by the Irish in 1632 and where the natives speak English with an Afro-Irish lilt, with six moderately priced hotels and guest houses; St. Vincent, Captain Bligh's island with 15 small hotels and guest houses; Dominica, with 13 small hotels and guest houses, and Bonaire, with two hotels and five small guest houses.

On such uncrowded islands you can find all the attractions for which the Caribbean is famous, with more elbow room to enjoy them.

The First Men To Fly

CONTACT! THE STORY OF THE EARLY BIRDS by Henry Serrano Villard; Crowell, 263 pages, $10. Reviewed by Charles T. Stoffer.

This is a treat, especially to those who have seen the film, "The Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines."

The age of mechanical flight began only 65 years ago when Orville Wright completed his historic flight at Kitty Hawk. This was followed by a five-year lull which in turn was followed by an audacious and romantic flying era that extended to the start of World War I.

The 1909 awakening in France became aviation's most exciting period.

The London Daily Mail's offer of 500 pounds to the first flier to cross the English Channel was the incentive. Hubert Latham, Parisian sportsman and scholar, arrived at Calais to assemble his Antoinette monoplane for the attempt. Grounded by rain and fog for two weeks, word was finally flashed that he had taken off in clearing weather. Halfway to Dover, his motor failed. He was rescued unharmed by a following French destroyer.

Latham's backers quickly obtained a second plane that was readied for another attempt.

Wealthy headlight inventor and manufacturer Louis Bleriot arrived suddenly and proceeded to erect his Bleriot model monoplane. Although he was on crutches because of leg burns received from an exhaust manifold in flight, he was soon ready. The competition became so intense that it was not equalled until 1927 when unknown Charles Lindbergh suddenly arrived at Roosevelt Field where Richard Byrd and Clarence Chamberlin were both poised for the first New York to Paris flight.

Bleriot was awakened by his helpers at 2:30 a.m. on July 25, 1909. He readied his plane for flight, lashed his crutches on the side and took off just as the sun broke through the darkness. Latham, awakened by the hum of his rival's engine, rushed to his plane to engage in the race. Before he could take off, word was received confirming Bleriot's successful landing near Dover.

Hysteria prevailed throughout Europe and Louis Bleriot became the idol of mankind.

The first aviation meets were soon organized and James Gordon Bennett, American publisher of the Paris Herald, sponsored a trophy to lure the leading aviators of the world into international competition at Rheims. The Wrights declined, but Glenn Curtis, little known outside the USA, entered a pusher-type biplane. Other contestants included Bleriot, Latham, Henri Farman, Louis Palham and Captain Ferber, making the meet predominantly French.

The French were stunned when Curtis emerged the winner, beating the famed Bleriot by the slim margin of six seconds.

The first listing of pilot licenses on Jan. 1, 1910, totalled 16 names, including the Wright brothers and Glenn Curtis. Ten different types of planes were listed for sale, and the Wright Flier was priced at 30,000 francs as the most expensive.

Villard's book reveals that the Wright brothers used a piledriver-like contraption that released a weight to create speed for takeoffs on all their early European flights. And that they did not replace their skid-type landing gear until 1910, although they constructed hundreds of lightweight wheels in their Dayton bicycle shop prior to inventing the airplane.

"Contact" is full of excellent detail regarding nearly every notable flight of "the early birds." France was by far the most spectacular contributor to those dramatic days of air races with fabulous monetary prizes.

It is possible to mention here only a few of the heroic exploits which Villard has recreated in his book: Roland Garro's great non-stop flight over the Mediterranean; French-born Peruvian Georges Chavez' fatal effort to fly across the Alps, and bewhiskered Adolphe Pegoud's death-defying first "loop the loop."

It appears that the men who led the way to the present-day air industry colossus considered flying more of an art than a scientific endeavor. In Villard's telling, art or science, it is tremendously exciting.

The Killer Who 'Squealed' On His Cosa Nostra Henchmen

THE VALACHI PAPERS by Peter Maas; Putnam's, 276 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Roger Boone.

The Cosa Nostra or Mafia has attracted many spoken and written words in recent years, and this seems somewhat relevant, what with the cry for "law and order" thundering through the nation.

Words so far have exceeded deeds in respect to organized crime.

The Federal Bureau of Narcotics has taken steps to cut down the Cosa Nostra's illegal narcotics sales. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has started to devote more of its energies against organized crime. The federal Treasury and Immigration departments and some local law enforcement agencies have moved to harass the Cosa Nostra.

The Cosa Nostra, however, presents a formidable adversary. It grosses better than 40 billion dollars a year, according to U.S. Justice Department estimates. It has infiltrated legitimate businesses and labor unions to a disconcerting degree. It has corrupted some public and law enforcement officials.

Greatly aided by Prohibition, the Cosa Nostra has taken advantage of Puritan restraints against gambling and prostitution. But to attribute the syndicate's power to Puritan morality would be myopic and naive, as its illegal narcotics sales, loan "sharking" and outright homicidal activities display.

Interest in the Cosa Nostra heightened when in 1963 Joseph Valachi appeared before a U.S. Senate investigating subcommittee to testify about organized crime in the United States.

Peter Maas, now a New York Magazine editor, has written "The Valachi Papers," an interesting, crisply written and somewhat chilling book based on interviews with Valachi and a comprehensive, generally dispassionate chronicle by Valachi totalling 1,800 pages and detailing his long career in crime.

The reader not only gets a detailed account of a man's life in crime, but also can observe an inside view of the operation, personnel structure and the personalities themselves in organized crime.

Maas doesn't portray Valachi in a romanticized role to either the extreme of being a totally cold-blooded criminal or as a man overwhelmed by circumstance and who therefore turned toward evil.

"The Valachi Papers" clearly shows that Valachi decided to tell federal officials what he knew about organized crime because of the fear of death. As a federal inmate at Atlanta on a narcotics charge, he had been condemned to death by Cosa Nostra overlord Vito Genovese, then an Atlanta inmate, too, and also faced possible federal capital punishment for killing another inmate in a case of mistaken identity — as it turned out that the victim wasn't even a Cosa Nostra member.

Maas portrays Valachi as a man who is quick to blame other persons or circumstance for his shortcomings. Valachi often complained that he was deceived by his Cosa Nostra henchmen and expressed the desire to get out of the syndicate. Yet Valachi had no qualms about killing several men he regarded as friends on Cosa Nostra orders, nor did he have any reservations about selling narcotics when he felt his money was low.

It is somewhat unsettling, but probably not typical, when Valachi describes a murder contract as any professional would his job, and when he points out the mistakes of Cosa Nostra henchmen and even himself as some Germans criticized Adolf Hitler for military strategy but not the concentration camps and genocide.

Valachi does occasionally provide some humor outside the gallows variety such as his describing his courtship and the retreat of Cosa Nostra leaders into Upstate New York woodlands after the famed Appalachia meeting was disrupted by state police.

"The Valachi Papers" provides interesting and usually critical portraits of such infamous Cosa Nostra gangsters as Genovese, Charles (Lucky) Luciano, Frank Costello, Albert Anastasia, Thomas (Three Finger Brown) Lucchese and Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno, and fairly comprehensive accounts of such infamous events as the Castellammarese and the Genovese-Anastasia gang wars.

Maas also comments some on the alleged political pressure of some Italian-American groups to have U.S. Atty. Gen. Nicholas DeB. Katzenbach suppress his book. But fortunately this isn't dwelt upon too much nor does it hamper the presentation of Valachi's story.

Pictures Aplenty

Like other volumes produced by Superior Publishing Co. of Seattle, "The Phil Sheridan Album" depends largely on its pictures.

There are plenty of pictures. In fact, the effect seems to have been simply to crowd in as many as possible. Some panoramas have been squeezed into such small space as to lose their value, while some portraits of men who scarcely figure in an account of Gen. Phil Sheridan's life at all are given large display. There is much repetition in the pictures, and to make it worse, several are incorrectly identified.

The writing by Lawrence A. Frost, a Monroe, Mich., foot doctor, is pedestrian at best. Frost follows Sheridan's career from boyhood to death, but with no attention whatever to what is significant and what is minor.

The research is very spotty, resulting in inaccuracies.

Pictorial history books are desirable, but they should be done better than this.

A Wartime Naval Novel Focuses On Individuals

Hank Searle, an Annapolis graduate, adroitly develops a novel about a Navy aircraft carrier, the USS Shenandoah, which was gutted by an enemy aerial assault off Japan and yet returned to Pearl Harbor during World War II, and of how the carrier became pivotal in the conflict between Capt. Ben Casco and Adm. Christopher Lee, which began before the war in Annapolis and was resolved some 25 years later in Washington with an interesting twist of irony.

"The Hero Ship" offers entertainment not ideology, a plot marked by crisp writing and effective use of the flashback technique, and an adept, plausible portrayal of characters and events avoiding the stereotypes often induced by combat and the men who wage it in literature, cinema and television.

This fictional work isn't an anti-war tract nor a glorification of combat and combatants. To its credit, it is much more a story of individual men than of events or institutions.

The characterization of Casco, who rose up through the ranks, is particularly well done, befitting his role as the central character through whose mind and eyes the story flows.

A Pair Of 'Passing Fads' That Didn't Fold Up And Fade Away

By DON KEOWN

Taking them too seriously and attempting to read hidden significance and great thoughts into their songs and antics only gets in the way of that enjoyment.

At least that was the conclusion we came to after ploughing through "The Beatles Book," a collection of 14 essays offering differing points of view of the Liverpudian kingpins of the pop music scene.

The commentary, as edited by Edward E. Davis, ranges from the cynical ridicule of conservatism's "golden boy," William F. Buckley Jr., who manages to sound stuffy along with his usual arrogance, to an embarrassingly gushy adulation from some of the less restrained Beatles admirers.

We see them through the eyes of a composer, Ned Rorem; of an educator, Richard Poirier; of two hipster "father figures," Bay Area syndicated columnist Ralph J. Gleason and Greenwich Villager Nat Hentoff; of a poet, Al Lee; of a black, Larry Neal; of a middle-age square, Buckley; of a psychologist, Dr. Herbert J. Freudenberger; of such critics as Richard Goldstein and Leonore Fleischer.

Editor Davis compares them — unfavorably — with the Rolling Stones. Allen Keesee looks at the Oriental influence in their work.

Psychedelia's high priest, Timothy O'Leary, and Peter Stafford stress the drug aspect, with the former sounding especially silly.

THE TALBOTT AGREEMENT by Richard M. Garvin and Edmond G. Addeo; Sherbourne Press, 255 pages, $4.95.

In in the end the inescapable conclusion is that the Beatles are the fantastic hit they are simply because they are fun. They spoof life and they spoof themselves, doing so with taste, talent and spirit. Several of the essayists say pretty much this very thing, and say it rather well. "Clown gurus," Goldstein calls them.

But does it really need to be said at all? Isn't it self-evident to any Beatle fan? So why should he shell out $5.95 for a book that confirms what he already knows, when that sum might better be applied to Beatle records?

As for the Buckleys of the world, nothing said by others is likely to convert them. Once soured, no amount of sugaring is likely to re-sweeten a curdled substance. This is especially true with the human soul.

REMEMBER back several years when literary pundits were predicting the quick demise of the spy thriller?

Supposedly publishers were begging their authors to write something else — anything else.

Those forecasts belong along side those that even earlier were saying that rock music was a passing fad and the Beatles a fleeting fancy.

John LeCarre's "A Small Town in Germany" and Helen MacInnis' "The Salzburg Connection" have been running at or near the top of the best-seller lists now for a number of weeks, and are only the most recent of a long string of such successes, with more certain to follow. In fact, just about the surest way to crack those select charts is to write a good spy yarn.

Two Marin writers, Richard M. Garvin and Edmond G. Addeo of Mill Valley, made their bid with "The Fortec Conspiracy." While it didn't quite lift them into the upper echelon of spy novelists, it was a deserved success. Now they have collaborated on another, "The Talbott Agreement." Again it falls barely short of being up there with the very best being produced by suspense fiction's elite, and is excellent entertainment.

Garvin, a former advertising copywriter and executive, and Addeo, an ex-newspaper man, focus on the tension between Red China on one side and the United States and its former arch-enemy Russia on the other. The premise is that the U.S., the Soviet Union and Great Britain, fearful of growing Chinese nuclear strength and aggressive intentions, have decided upon a preventive invasion.

China, however, has a secret weapon of its own, thanks to an American-trained scientist who has developed psychokinesis to the point of massive destructive potential.

The Garvin - Addeo yarn revolves around the espionage struggle that ensues. Chang, an American plant in Peking, brings out the news of the Chinese accomplishment, but America's scientific, political and military leaders are difficult to convince. Among his converts, however, is agent Jim Moser. Eventually, Chang and Moser must undertake a perilous mission behind the Bamboo Curtain not only to nullify China's ultimate weapon, but also to cancel out the U.S.-British-Russian invasion strategy and avert war.

It's a good action story with a sufficiently high believability quotient for acceptance by spy fiction fans, although the hard pseudo-realism of a LeCarre or Len Deighton is not attained.

The spy novel remains one of our most relaxing forms of escapist reading, and Garvin and Addeo have written a book that serves that purpose well, and which may even contain some thoughtful truths about the tense international scene.

The jacket tells us that the co-authors are currently at work on separate books on non-fiction topics, Garvin's about strange beliefs and mystical practices, Addeo's about Yosemite Valley's history.

Hopefully, and highly likely, the team will be heard from again in the spy thriller field. And they may yet write the American counterpart of "The Spy Who Came In From the Cold."

SUPERIOR Publishing Co. is a Seattle firm with a penchant for publishing pictorial histories on regional subjects. The photos in those collections are usually good and well reproduced, although sometimes they do not hang together very cohesively. And the texts at times tend to seem hurried and routine, as though the pictures were the only real excuse for the book. No such criticism of "This Was Wheat Farming" ($12.95) is possible. Along with an excellent array of colorful wheat farming scenes such as those above, the buyer gets a text by agricultural journalist Kirby Brumfield that is lively and literate as well as authoritative as it recounts the colorful history of grain farming in the Pacific Northwest. It is perhaps Superior's best effort to date.

Billed as the first in a new series of mystery novels featuring Sam Benedict, a fictional San Francisco lawyer patterned after Jake Ehrlich, the book stars the same character who appeared in a television series.

Although the author is a law professor, he writes more like a television scripter than either a teacher or mystery writer.

The San Francisco descriptions will probably seem trite to Bay Area residents, who might tend to doubt that a famous lawyer would set up a conference with a leading psychiatrist at the Top of the Mark. Oleck's descriptions of Cleveland and its suburbs ring truer, possibly because that's where the author lives.

The story revolves around a wealthy, intelligent San Francisco lady who apparently has done in her husband at the outset of the book.

"A Singular Fury" is not so much a mystery as a rather intriguing account of how an attorney builds a defense for a difficult case.

Although the defense centers around a rather odd medical premise, the final courtroom scene has enough dramatics to please television fans — and even readers.

DOVER PUBLICATIONS, the house that usually deals in quality paperback reprints, has come forth with an original in its "International Airline Phrase Book in Six Languages."

Joseph W. Baxter, director of Pan American World Airways' Language Training Center at John F. Kennedy International Airport and an assistant professor of modern languages at St. John's University, has compiled idiomatic translations from English into French, German, Italian, Portuguese and Spanish of the 700 phrases used most commonly by airline passengers and staff.

With book in hand, you can tell the stewardess your seating preference, or inquire at the desk about your flight.

DOUBLEDAY has published a revised, updated edition of its "The Dolphin Guide to San Francisco and the Bay Area" paperback, written by Curt Gentry, the San Francisco author and ex-newspaper man.

The original edition came out in 1962, and San Francisco and its environs have, indeed, undergone considerable change since then, some of it for the good and some of it not.

Gentry's interesting book is heavy on history, relating the sights of the city and suburbs in colorful detail to what has gone on in the past, and is particularly helpful, therefore, to students of Californiana.

It should enrich anyone's enjoyment of the city and the area, be they newcomers, oldtimers or one-time visitors from other sections of the country.

THE LATEST batch of paperback reprints from Ballantine Books includes Alan W. Watts' "Psychotherapy East & West," the study of the parallels between the psychotherapy of the West and the philosophies of the East that was originally published by Pantheon in 1961.

NEW PRODUCT — Several articles have been written about the increasingly popular CASSETTE type tape recorder. This type uses small cartridges of tape that are simply inserted into place and the recorder is ready to record or play. Cassette units are now available in very small portable monaural models or as stereo models.

The very latest is the new SONY Model 124-CS stereo cassette-corder system. This is a complete four-track stereo system, lightweight and small enough to take anywhere in its briefcase-size carrying case. Full-range extension speakers provide true stereo separation. It is pushbutton operated and extremely simple to use. The Sony Model 124-CS is a three-piece unit. One unit is the control center, housing the push-button controls, tape transport mechanism and the connecting jacks. This unit is a complete portable recorder/player in itself. It houses one speaker in its case so it can be used without the extension stereo speakers for compact portability. The two other pieces house two full range speakers that can be separated for true stereo playback. A new Sony stereo dynamic microphone is included with this system enabling stereo recordings anywhere. The 124-CS operates on four flashlight batteries, or on household AC, or on car battery. There is a built-in charger for use with optional rechargeable battery pack.

This new Sony cassette is very versatile. Not only is it an excellent portable stereo music system and excellent stereo recorder, but it can also be used in conjunction with the home stereo for recording and playback.

Cassette tape cartridges are available as four-track stereo pre-recorded tapes. Blank cassette cartridges are available in the 60 minute, 90 minute, and 2 hour size. Since they are quite small, a large library of music will occupy a very small space. The quality of response is excellent. They do not get scratched and worn as do records. Actually, the tape is never handled since it is encapsulated within a container. Only the container is handled. Visit us soon for a demonstration of the ease and simplicity of the cassette system and enjoy the sound of stereo.

Reading For The Juniors

Just how much sex education should our youngsters receive, at what age, and from whom should it come?

These are all questions that cause controversy and concern these days.

For parents who favor sex education at an early age, and who believe it is their responsibility to administer it, a couple of new books should prove helpful.

"How Babies Are Made" (Time-Life, $3.95) is a tasteful, straightforward, illustrated explanation by Andrew C. Andry and Steven Schepp of the "facts of life" questions that most often puzzle children ages 3 to 10. The book begins with flowers as the example of the reproductive processes, moves on to animals, and finally to human beings. The paper sculpture technique has been used effectively for a three dimensional effect in the illustrations.

"About Sex and Growing Up" (Association Press, $3.50 clothbound, $1.50 paperback) is by Evelyn Millis Duvall, a respected writer and authority in the family life education field. The book, "for near-teen boys and girls," assumes a greater maturity than the Time-Life book from its young readers, being more explicit and more direct in its approach, and takes up personality problems as well as the sex questions. It is illustrated with simple drawings.

Some other new books for the juniors:

Another in a series of science activity books by Tillie S. Pine and Joseph Levine is "The Incas Knew" (McGraw-Hill, $3.95), illustrated by Ann Grifalconi. How the Incas solved their problems, in much the same way as we do today, proves to be quite interesting to young readers, and they are eager to tackle the experiments included. Our own children were most intrigued with the way the Incas constructed suspension bridges and built their villages; older children might well construct their own irrigation systems, very much like the Incas did. The realization that people who lived hundreds of years ago, in another country, learned to make maps, build roads, construct bridges, devised a calendar and solved basic problems of living, provides a valuable and fascinating lesson.

Did you know that penguins are the only birds who have flippers instead of wings? Or that they only eat when in water? Or that the covering on their body is not fur but a thick growth of tiny feathers? These facts and many other interesting aspects of the penguin life are told in "Penguins, the Birds With Flippers" by Elizabeth S. Austin (Random House, $1.95). The reader may wish to skip over some of the details of the numerous species and how they were discovered. The black and white photographs add greatly to the very interesting life of the penguins.

Any young Marin County horse-lover should enjoy learning how the horse became man's friend. "The Story of Horses" by Pat Johnson (Random House, $1.95) retraces this history of horses. The photographs by Walter D. Osborne make the book an enjoyable story even for the non-reader.

Harriet E. Huntington is producing a series of nature books with photographic illustrations for youngsters, the most recent of which is "Let's Go To the Wood" (Doubleday, $3.50). With typewriter and camera she conducts boys and girls on a field trip to observe and to appreciate the richness of the plant and animal life that flourishes among the trees. Her pictures range from a close-up of a mushroom to wide scenic vistas. Her writing is a practical explanation of the natural wonders most likely to arouse the curiosity of the children.

REPORTS FROM OUR REVIEWERS

Inflated Nothing

In the old days when 80 per cent of the film shot in Hollywood was made by motion picture studios instead of for television, there used to be a permanent press corps of 50 so-called "correspondents," at least 150 of whom used to be from foreign countries.

Hamblett, author of this enormously inflated nothing, was one of them — from England. In 435 pages of large type, larger empty spaces and scores of old photographs from the news and wire services, he has dished out nothing that you could not have read (and probably did) in dear Hedda's column, or Louella's, or Sheilah's, or almost anybody's. And most of it seems to have been written anywhere from five to 15 years ago.

Here are "interviews" and philosophical comments on a Hollywood that never existed even in the wildest dreams of its imaginative press agents. They have nothing to do with the industry or with its people.

This is the way Mr. Hamblett writes — in his very first sentence: "Stick a pin anywhere into the sunlit nightmare that is Hollywood and you nail madness." Had enough? It gets worse as it goes along.

Dropping names like grass-seed, the knowledgeable author tells you the inside thoughts of such "great" performers as Kim Novak, Elvis Presley and Elizabeth Taylor.

He calls Humphrey Bogart's biographer Richard "Gayman" (it's Gehman), producer Dore Schary is Shary, the president of the United Arab Republic is named Nassar, Griffith Park becomes Griffiths, one fellow is spoken of as lying "prone on his back" and Mort Sahl is called a "sick comic."

But perhaps these are typographical errors. If so, they are the only authentic things in the book. The rest is verbiage.

A Crowded Life

FACTS AND FICTIONS by Ann Bridge; McGraw-Hill, 207 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

"It was my great good fortune to be an eye-witness of (historical) happenings. . . ." Miss Bridge, wife of a British diplomat and author of the series of widely read intrigue and mystery novels, made excellent use of her fortune.

Without pausing to draw full breath, she pours out here an account of the crowded life she and her husband led in chanceries all over the world during the first half of the century. It was a privileged life that exposed her to an astonishing amount and range of knowledge — Chinese racing ponies, California wildflowers, the fine points of "harmelik" (harem life in Turkey) which she turned to good use in her fiction.

"Some literary recollections," her subtitle, is somewhat of a misnomer. Other than pointing out which events ended up where in her books, she leaves her literature out of this more or less chronological story of her glamorous way of life. Full of a luxury that is no more, it brought her and her family, on occasion, face to face with danger and hardship; and she handled that too with unshakable aplomb, and her customary eagerness to record what she saw about her.

For the most part she was content to accept her class' prevailing view of the history she witnessed, and one cannot help wishing such a perspicacious observer had been moved to probe a little beneath the official surface of events.

She feels the books she calls "modern historicals" are her best — "The Tightening String," "A Place to Stand," "The Dark Moment" — novels that are "fiction, but made as factual as possible," and in her hands the results have been suspenseful entertainment.

Vim In The 60s

Most exercise programs, unquestionably, are too strenuous for men and women over 60 unless they have been extremely active through the years and thus maintained their physical condition.

The exercises are simple and generally on the easy side. Simple figure illustrations demonstrate the movements. And there are special exercises for special problems, as well as some general hints on how to perform household chores without harmful strain.

Some more active men and women in the 60s may disdain the King-Herzig program as too easy. But most will probably find it just about their speed. And the knowledge that it is within their capabilities will serve as an incentive for them to begin to bring new vim into their lives.

"What Is Meant By 'Invisible' Stains?"

So-called "invisible" stains are those that are not apparent until a garment or fabric is drycleaned. A number of everyday-used household items, such as perfume, hair spray and cold wave solutions are causes of these stains. Usually, the stains only show up when the fabric is subjected to drycleaning, drying or the heat of pressing. However, sometimes, simply storing a garment in a hot area for a few weeks or months may bring the "invisible" stain into sight.

Whenever something is spilled on a garment or fabric, whether or not a stain appears, send the article to your professional drycleaner at once. Delay or storage may cause irreparable damage. Pin a note on it explaining what was spilled so that special attention can be given to prevent permanent damage.

The heart-breaking thing about "invisible" stains is that they do not remain invisible unless they are removed promptly.

On The Stereo Scene

Some Newly-Released Records On Vox And Turnabout Labels

By JOHN SUNIER

Some releases on the Vox and Turnabout labels:

SERGEI PROKOFIEFF: "The Complete Music for Solo Piano" — Gyorgy Sandor, piano — Volume I (Vox SVBX 5408); Volume II (Vox SVBX 5409):

The total of six LPs contained in these two volumes represent a magnificent tribute to the genius of Prokofieff. It is also the first time all of his piano music has been presented in such a collection.

Sandor is the equal of all other Prokofieff interpreters, and shines even more in this Vox Box set than he did in the fine complete Bartok set released some years ago.

Of course the main interest here are the nine amazing piano sonatas, the first five in Volume I and the rest in Volume II. Beethoven is the basis of Prokofieff's keyboard sonatas — they are built on classical form and structure, and however much wild dissonance, the music is always tonal. His music is easily recognized by emotional vitality and intensity coupled with a simple and compelling lyricism, especially in slow sections.

Sonatas six and seven are my personal favorites, the first a huge structure full of agitated and nervous energy, and the second known for its unusually popular-sounding and lush slow movement.

Of the other 15 sets of piano pieces included in the two volumes, the "Visions Fugitives" are probably the best-known for their weird minor moods. The "Toccata" is a short and raging piano exercise.

Some of the short pieces were written to satisfy educational purposes of the Soviet state and lack a certain spark. Others, such as the two "Chose en soi," are almost too introspective to be very enjoyable listening. But throughout the piano music of Prokofieff runs a thread of nervous energy that always makes his creations more than merely a pleasing assembly of notes.

The stereo sound and surfaces on these sets are excellent.

The major work in this smashing virtuoso recital is the improvisation on themes from Mozart's opera "Don Giovanni," titled "Reminiscences of Don Juan." It is a miniature symphonic poem in three parts, each concerned with a different dramatic point in the opera.

The tempestuous passage which follows the invitation of the statue to dine with him (in hell) is spinetingling in the good old spirit of Romantic pianistic fireworks. Other music on the LP are fantasies on themes from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Wagner's "Flying Dutchman," and Gounod's "Faust." Kentner equals the fine performance of the Don Juan music on an Epic release, and the Turnabout is bargain-priced, too.

CARL MARIA VON WEBER: "Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet"; "Concertino in C Minor for Clarinet"; "Quintet in B Flat Major for Clarinet and Strings" — David Glazer/Wurttemberg Chamber Orchestra/Innsbruck Symphony/Kohon Quartet — (Turnabout TV 34151S):

This is the first time these three wonderful pieces featuring the clarinet have been assembled on one disc, and at a bargain price yet.

The "Concertino" is Weber's best-known for the instrument and quite operatic in flavor. The "Quintet" is more than chamber music, having a big sound and giving the clarinet all the limelight, musically speaking.

Glazer has many other albums out for Vox and is a superb soloist.

"ELECTRONIC MUSIC III" — BERIO: "Omaggio a Joyce"; DRUCKMAN: "Animus I"; MIMAROGLU: "Piano Music for Performer and Composer"; "Six Preludes for Magnetic Tape" —(Turnabout TV 34177):

From a start of only two or three LPs about 10 years ago, the library of electronic and associated avant garde music on disc has expanded so greatly that one trying to hear all the new material finds it an impossible task.

The Turnabout series is excellent, though it sometimes duplicates (as in the "Homage to Joyce" piece).

Cathy Berberian, who is Mrs. Berio, uses her amazing voice in amazing ways that will not fail to affect the listener. Mimaroglu, who works at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center, pursues some rather unique theories of the relationship between performer and composer in his first work on the disc. The preludes are a good demonstration of many tape manipulation techniques, for each of the six are base on a different source sound —for example, one is only a rubber band.

"MUSIC FOR MANDOLIN" — BEETHOVEN: "Four Pieces for Mandolin and Harpsichord"; SCHLICK: "Divertimento for Two Mandolins and Basso Continuo" — Kuuschak and Hladky, mandolins/Maria Hinterleitner, harpsichord (Turnabout TV 34110S):

A very unique and delectable album.

Although Vivaldi used the mandolin a great deal in his music, perhaps the height of its popularity was in Vienna in the last 18th Century. While these compositions are not musical masterpieces, the nostalgic sound of the mandolins weaves a spell that is thoroughly enchanting listening.

Roses By The Clusters

TO BORDER A walkway or a drive, there are few plantings as effective as the floribunda roses. Nurserymen say that Marinites are not using these low-growing, prolific-blooming beauties to anything like their fullest potential. But now, during bareroot planting season, is a good time to correct that oversight. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

Say "rose" to most Marin gardeners, and they immediately think of the lovely hybrid teas.

It is difficult to fault that kind of thinking, for there are few things more beautiful on this earth than a well-shaped hybrid tea rose

Yet nurserymen say that Marinites are making a mistake when they limit themselves to tea roses only. What they are overlooking are the floribunda roses.

AND WHILE a floribunda might not be nearly so attractive as a hybrid tea on the individual specimen basis, it is ever so much more versatile.

Floribunda roses are ideally suited to landscaping, and our nurserymen would like to see Marin home owners use more of them in beautifying their grounds.

Most floribundas grow less than three feet high and bear blooms in clusters that provide garden color from spring to winter.

BECAUSE THEY are the most prolific of the roses, the floribundas are perfect for informal hedges, for massing, for borders and for containers.

They are most effective as border plantings along side driveways or walkways. They do a splendid job as color accents in front of foundation plants. They can be grown in redwood containers for portable color.

Since they come in a multitude of hues, some very striking color combinations and coordinations can be achieved with them.

THEIR ONE major requirement for good performance is a sunny location. Give them that, and they will flourish with less attention than the hybrid teas.

While Marinites have lagged in their use of floribundas, there have been those among us who all along have made good use of their landscaping potential. With these growers, the two most popular floribunda roses have been the Margo Koster and the Pinkie.

But there are others, including two new introductions for 1969 that have been accorded All-America Selections honors. These are Angel Face, the first lavender rose ever to earn the award, and the Gene Boerner, the lone pink rose among the four All-American roses for '69.

ANGEL FACE bears king-sized blooms for a floribunuda that measure up to four inches across and last for days. In addition to their unusual coloration, the flowers are delightfully fragrant.

Special features of the Gene Boerner include an unusually long cutting stem of 10 to 12 inches, and long pointed buds that unfurl into good-sized blooms in a rich pink.

The fact that half the 1969 All-American roses are floribundas testifies to the high regard which nurserymen hold for these most useful roses.

LIKE ROSES of all kinds, floribundas are available now at the height of the bareroot season in their largest selection. A delay might mean that the gardener will lose out on some of the newer or more popular selections, particularly the All-American roses which always go fast.

But remember: when you visit the nursery looking for roses, don't stop with just the hybrid teas. Take a look, as well, at the floribundas, keeping in mind as you do so the specific landscaping problems in your garden where roses by the clusters might provide you with an enduringly beautiful solution.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

✓Now is the time for pruning most deciduous shrubs and trees. But before you begin, make sure you have a quality pair of shears that are sharp and working well.

✓It's also the time for dormant spraying of most deciduous plantings. While in their winter sleep, shrubs can withstand a stronger dosage of chemicals than they can at other seasons of the year.

✓Two perennial vegetables — artichokes and asparagus — can be planted in January.

✓Summer-flowering bulbs should begin to appear in Marin nurseries this month. Keep your eyes open for the likes of watsonia and tigridia.

✓Check staked plants periodically throughout the winter to make certain they are still secure against strong winds.

CAN YOU EVER have enough storage? Seemingly not. And especially in a children's room. There, insufficient storage can contribute to a seemingly continuous state of chaos. Given an adequate place to put their clothing, toys, books, etc., you have at least an outside chance that the youngsters will maintain some semblance of order in their room. This double built-in holds just about everything kids can accumulate. The storage wall requires only 10½ panels of plywood, some light framing lumber and miscellaneous hardware. The size can be adapted to meet your needs. For the construction details, send 10 cents to American Plywood Association, 1119 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., and ask for Plan No. FW 56-170.

Handyman's Page

Marinites have no snow to shovel, but they do have their winter problems.

One of them doesn't remain outside, but comes right into their homes.

That's the water that forms on the inside of the window panes. Sometimes it is no major problem, little more than a fogging of the glass. And sometimes it is a serious matter with water almost streaming down the pane. Then you have real trouble.

The condition is, of course, much the same as that encountered by the automobile driver who finds his windshield fogging. The best and easiest solution is the same, too —ventilation.

YOU CRACK a side window of the car and the condensation on the windshield soon disappears.

It isn't always that easy in the house, but ventilation is still the necessary step on the right direction. The modern house is planned to hold warmth. But it also holds humidity. And excessive humidity means water vapor inside the home.

In Marin, winter, with its dampness, is the time when that problem is at its worst. Outside, cool air chills the window panes. Inside the cold glass attracts and extracts moisture from the warmer humid air that settles on the surface of the window.

THE COLDER and damper the weather, the greater the condensation.

Corrective action calls for either reducing the humidity indoors, or warming up the cold surfaces of the window panes. Failure to provide remedies invites such damage as water-stained sills, walls and floors, hidden damage from seepage inside the walls and even harm to the exterior walls when the humidity works its way through insufficient vapor barriers.

To avoid such consequences, you can act to let the moist air escape from the house more easily and quickly. This can be accomplished by leaving a trouble spot window open a half inch or so, in some cases. One home owner solved his problem by opening the damper of his living room fireplace for one hour twice a day.

PERHAPS LOUVERS and exhaust fans will be needed to do an effective job.

Another approach is to trap the excessive moisture through the use of dehumidifier. These are sold in sizes and kinds that range in cost from a few dollars to hundreds of dollars. Naturally, the greater the problem, the greater the need for one of the more sophisticated, electrically operated models.

The investment may be more than just worthwhile if your inside-the-house humidity problem is an aggravated one. The damage being done to your dwelling could be far more expensive in the long run.

MONDAY WILL BE an evening of television specials on Bay Area ABC network stations. At upper left, Yves Omer, diver and cameraman, pets one of the two seals that are the stars of "The Unexpected Voyage of Pepito and Cristobal," the newest documentary in "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" series that will be shown Monday at 7:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11. At center left, an adopted baby enjoys the affection of its new mother in "To Love A Child," the 3-M Special story of an adoption to be narrated by Maureen Stapleton and to be shown on Channels 7 and 11 at 8:30 o'clock. At bottom left, George C. Scott narrates "Cosmopolis," another in the John Secondari-produced "Man and His Universe" series analyzing the problems of our cities, to be seen at 10 p.m. on the same channels. And at upper right, Jean-Claude Killy, France's colorful skiing champion, will be the subject of "Killy le Champion," to be telecast on the two Bay Area ABC stations starting at 9 o'clock.

Doris Day Wins Poll

"The Doris Day Show" on CBS-TV has been voted "favorite new television show" of the 1968-69 season by the readers of TV Radio Mirror in the magazine's annual reader poll.

Named as the "least liked shows" of the season was ABC-TV's "Don Rickles Show," with "The Ugliest Girl in Town," ABC-TV and "The Beautiful Phyllis Diller Show," NBC-TV close runners up in this "Dubious Award" category. All three shows have been canceled by the networks.

Big Hoss Is No Dumb Ox Off Television

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Dan Blocker, the lovable lout of television's "Bonanza," portrays Hoss Cartwright with such authority he ultimately is confused with the big dumb ox seen on the tube.

Physically he is an imposing six-feet, four-inches tall and weighs 280 pounds.

Intellectually he is a giant among actors. He has earned bachelor of science and master or arts degrees in the academic world.

HE IS VITALLY interested and active in politics. A man of strong convictions, he supports civil rights and becomes almost apoplectic at the thought of bigotry.

On the other hand, he is prone to strong language, as hard and earthy as the Texas land from which he sprang. He is at once tough and gentle, belligerent and soft; a complex man of many attitudes and moods who seldom has been captured in word or print.

As a boy in the dust bowl that was Texas, Blocker was fortunate if he could find an unpatched pair of overalls. He was given a new pair of shoes every two years.

"WE WERE POORER than poor," the big man boomed, pulling at a noontime drink. "When my father's farm failed —and he cleared that 80 acres over a period of six years with his bare hands and an ax — he became a blacksmith in deep east Texas.

"Later he moved us to O'Donnell, Tex. He had lived alone there in a dugout for awhile because of the dust and winds. And my sister died of pneumonia.

"It was a time and place where only the strong survived."

THOSE HARD years in Texas made Blocker a "progressive liberal." He doesn't like to identify himself as a Democrat or Republican and rarely identifies himself as a Texan. He has his reasons.

"I get angry when I hear people belittle Texas," he said. "They're talking about the loud mouth braggarts with airplanes and oil wells. Those guys are professional Texans and amateur human beings."

Blocker also is aware that he isn't a handsome leading man and never will be. That suits him.

"I'M SO HAPPY I think it's a frame-up," he said, laughing.

"Audiences want someone to identify with. It began with Wally Beery, and Marjorie Main and Anna Magnani helped it along.

"If it weren't for my size I never would have played Hoss. So my bulk has given me entree to innumerable career opportunities. But there are hundreds of thousands of outsize guys. So I had to capitalize on my talent too.

"My face? I look like Porky Pig. And who can hate him?"

UNTIL TWO months ago Blocker lived in a $37,000 tract house in the San Fernando Valley. Now he has moved into an enormous old eight - bedroom mansion in a fashionable but decaying part of Los Angeles.

He has had the 43-year-old home fitted with new plumbing and rewired. Around the house Dan is mistaken for a workman. His favorite outfit is overalls (blue denim), a polo shirt and $7 shoes. He wears the outfit because it's comfortable, not to create an image.

BLOCKER DOESN'T need an image. He earns approximately $15,000 per episode of the NBC-TV series with 100 per cent residuals—in reality, $30,000 a week.

Dan is married to his childhood sweetheart, Delphia Lee Parker. They are parents of twin daughters, Debra and Danna, 15; David, 14, and Dirk, 11.

Papa Blocker is devoted to his offspring, participating in their activities and filling the generation gap in his own family with his time and love.

"I HAVE A baby face and some women have called me cuddly," Blocker gruffed. "Well I'm built for comfort not speed. Maybe that's why I try to build racing cars, to make up for my lack of speed."

Blocker is president of Vinagroon Motor Racing Inc. The company builds Grand Prix cars for road racing. They cost from $20,000 to $75,000. So far it has been a losing proposition economically, but Dan enjoys nothing more than tinkering with automobiles.

"I am one of the 10 best experts on the internal combustion engine," he said. "And during races I'm in the pits, working on the cars. I can't drive them because I'm too big to get in 'em."

DAN BLOCKER
An immense man

A FORMER school teacher, Dan taught government, history, drama, English, biology, and coached football at schools in Texas, New Mexico and California before becoming an actor.

At little Sul Ross College in Alpine, Tex., he was a football star, but didn't like it. He was always afraid of seriously injuring the smaller men who played opposite him.

"I liked boxing better because it was a fairer contest," Blocker says today. "I had 63 amateur fights and lost only one —the last one by a split decision."

THEN BLOCKER, who some people mistake for an ignorant galoot, said something else:

"I hate a bully worse than anything; I'm a big man. I don't like fights. But if I see a 180-pound guy beating on a 130-pound guy, you can damn betcha I'll take care of the big guy in a hurry.

"Some big men are bullies because they are insensitive to the power of their strength. I never forget it."

DAN HAS MIXED feelings about "Bonanza."

He is fond of his co-stars, Lorne Greene and Mike Landon. He also knows the scripts are repetitive after 11 years. But he is proud that it has been high in the Nielsen ratings for more than a decade. He knows the show is responsible for making color television a reality and helping to sell millions of sets.

Blocker is not deluded by the artistic merits—or lack of them —on "Bonanza."

"I haven't read a complete 'Bonanza' script for eight years," he sighed. "I just learn my lines and do my best."

THE ACTOR recently completed "Lady in Cement," playing a villain opposite Frank Sinatra, Three or four other movies are in the offing for the big fellow.

Once "Bonanza" runs its course Blocker is a good bet to go on to a long and successful career in motion pictures playing leading roles as well as character parts.

Although Hoss Cartwright isn't very bright, Dan Blocker has imbued him with some of his own personality and character. And that, perhaps, is why almost everybody harbors a special warmth for big old lovable Hoss.
